RADIUM

Health and youth is the most precious boon to civilized man. Why wear trusses and take medicine? Persons suffering with ruptures, rheumatism, goiter, asthma, bronchitis, abnormal adhesions, cancer and kidney trouble can be cured without knife or medicine. Nature's most precious mineral can stop your suffering and renew your youth. Radio activity aids nature in rebuilding broken-down tissues and rejuvenates the human system. Because of the stress of business and in order to give those who are now employed at other businesses, which this work will in no way interfere with, we have decided to interview all applicants at 8 o'clock on Monday night, December 5.

TO YOU

At this time a courteous reception will be given and complete plans of this easy, pleasant, congenial work will be explained to you. Others have expressed their delight with our simplified solution of earning EXTRA MONEY.

YOU SIMPLY CAN'T AFFORD TO MISS IT.

If you really desire to earn extra money for that new fur coat, that parlor suite, or perhaps the new automobile, or maybe that Christmas present which must be made to someone near and dear to you, then all you have to do is to call in person on Monday evening at 8 o'clock at 1701 SOUTH GRAND AVENUE. Complete details will be given and we will show you how to earn this extra money. Tear out this ad and be on time. You can answer other advertisements any time, but this advertisement is for MONDAY NIGHT at 8 O'CLOCK ONLY.

MEN Don't Give Up Your JOB!! EARN EXTRA MONEY IN SPARE TIME HOURS

One of the biggest businesses known to civilization requires the services of hundreds of men. The campaign requires from one to four hours a week of your time. You can arrange the hours so that it will in no way interfere with your present employment. A great deal of money can be earned on a weekly basis. The work is easy, pleasant, intensely interesting and the service you render one of merit and your remuneration is high.

KNOWING HOW TO MAKE MONEY

INTERESTS US ALL. It is not unusual in this age of wireless telephones, startling aeroplane achievements, electrical wonders and all the releases from bondage that science has given to the world that the problem of acquiring the knowledge to make money has been arranged and simplified to where it is within the reach of every ambitious, energetic, dependable man.

YOU OWE TO YOURSELF AND LOVED ONES

To cash in on the fact that KNOWLEDGE IS POWER. You realize beyond question that you possess all of the elements for success. There are thousands of men who have never found the one great opportunity to acquire and place in operation the latent talents that perhaps would make them become masters of finance, or at least independent, successful examples of men who have found an opportunity and squeezed from that great moment their share of this world's goods from that opportunity.

MONDAY NIGHT AT 8 O'CLOCK

An opportunity of exceptional merit will be offered. The method of explaining the few details which will make you successful in the work we are going to ask you to do has been so simplified that anyone of ordinary intelligence, without even a grammar school education, can function and succeed in the operation of our plan.

IT'S UP TO YOU

You can answer other ads every day of the week, but remember you can only answer this advertisement MONDAY EVENING at 8 o'clock.

REGARDLESS OF PRESENT EMPLOYMENT EVERYONE WILL BE GIVEN FULL CONSIDERATION AT ABOVE TIME. We WILL show you HOW. You be the judge as to your qualifications. Others have proven our plan successful—you, too, should SUCCEED. COME DOWN—Let us SHOW YOU.

Apply—Monday Evening Dec. 5, at 8:00 o'clock 1701 South Grand Ave.

Young Men Only

Corporation that has paid almost fifty million dollars to family clients during past thirty years, and whose scope of operation covers practically two nations in North American Continent, wants to employ nineteen young men between the ages of 21 and 30.

Applicants should have High School diploma and be able to convince salesmanager that they have personality, integrity, ability and ambition. If these gifts lurk within you, and you can pass a physical test, we will enroll you in a class of student salesmen (at no cost to you.) You will be given an intensive training for a well-paid position with our organization.

Our requirements are rigid and exacting. We sell a financial protective service that directly affects the average American family. We operate under a charter granted by one of the richest States in the Union and have over 2500 local centers of activity in the United States. Our assets, inspected and approved by State authorities, amount to $12,500,000.

IF YOU sincerely believe you can be taught, and helped to become a successful salesman; if you believe time clocks are merely informative ornaments rather than stars of destiny; if you believe you can JUSTIFY our making a financial investment in you as we guide and counsel you along the road to sales and financial success—write and tell us so—write as much or as little as you deem this advertisement warrants—and ample opportunity will be given for an interview. In reply, address communications to

FD, BOX 389,
TIMES BRANCH OFFICE

SALESMEN. We want 2 or 3 salesmen, not necessarily experienced in the sale of real estate who wish to have permanent connection where they can MAKE MONEY. A real opportunity. We are about to open a subdivision of merit for which there is a demand & reason where you can sell a client a beautiful home site for $1000 or $10,000 on easy terms. This property is located 10 minutes from the ocean, is covered with oaks and sycamores, beautiful rolling land, right in the path of development, west of Beverly Hills & close to ocean. Real co-operation & help given you. See Mr. Elliott. ALBERT C. WALTER CO. 5752 WILSHIRE BLVD.

An Unusual Opportunity IS NOW OPEN

For man capable of earning $8000 a year who has the ability and personality to make contact with chief executives and sales managers.

We are desirous of hearing from a salesman with potential executive ability and executive sales experience, who can present sincerely and honestly a high-class proposition, virtually necessary to all lines of business for the promotion of their sales and organization efficiency, which is now being used by many of the largest corporations in the United States.

If you are looking for a PERMANENT connection and really think you have enough stuff on the ball to qualify for this position, phone VA. 4930 Monday for appointment with MR. KIFF.

Permanent Position

A Chicago manufacturer, with offices in principal cities, and doing a local annual business of million dollars yearly has openings for three representatives in this territory. Product is nationally advertised and requires only men of neat appearance, A-1 reference, not over 35 and having a car so as to cover sufficient territory. Position pays well with unusual opportunities. No canvassing. Call at 1123 S. HILL STREET.

REAL OPPORTUNITY

We have vacancy for a real high class salesman, age 30-40 yrs., for educational course. Must be well dressed, have good personality and real sales ability. Private office and bona fide prospects furnished. See MR. HOLMES, Monday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., 1329 Gordon st., Hollywood.

COME OVER

Clem Glass and Ted Oakes said that my ad in this column in last Sunday's Times was full of "IT" and "S.A." (SALES APPEAL) for the San Fernando Valley and the money being made and to be made there, its great studio and real estate activity, but because it didn't pull as I thought it would leads me to believe that there are a lot of exchange boys who would rather go through hell with their shirt tails on fire, than hop across a low range of hills and join the Fire Department.

A GREAT CORPORAT'N

The San Fernando Valley Corporation, 5219 Lankershim Boulevard, North Hollywood, is a financial and departmental real estate organization that "COVERS THE VALLEY." It is the only San Fernando Valley organization of size, NOT practically exclusively in the subdivision business.

GO GET 'EM

Each department is in charge of a high-strung go-getter. If you've been getting into the ancient real estate habit of getting lazy or discouraged, the personnel of The San Fernando Valley Corporation department of operations will pull you up by your boot straps in a hurry. You'll either land in the bank with a bunch of money or in the street with your neck broke.

MORE MONEY

If you are one of the fellows who thinks the Epistles are the wives of the Apostles, the thought behind this ad won't help you any. Take a run out to "5219" and look us over. Then give me a ring—if you want to make more money.

In the many years we have been in business, this is the first time that we have ever had a used car sale.

Revised Stock

Although our only sale of bona fide reductions on REBUILT LINCOLNS met with tremendous success, we are still able to offer a most complete stock. This is due to the fact that many of our LINCOLNS were in the shops being rebuilt at the start of this sale.

THESE CARS ARE NOW READY FOR DELIVERY. We would suggest that you come in NOW and inspect our revised line of

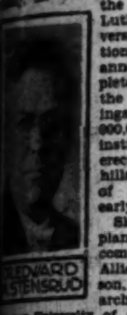
NEW UNIVERSITY PLAN COMPLETE

Lutheran School Will Rise Here Early in 1928

Hundred-Acre Site Going to Escrow at Once

First Units in $5,000,000 Project Announced



EDWARD STENSRUD

With the 100-acre site at Palisades del Rey going into escrow immediately, the board of directors of the Los Angeles Lutheran University Corporation yesterday announced complete plans for the first buildings of the $5,000,000 Lutheran institution to be erected in the hills southwest of Culver City early in 1928.

Sketches and plans have been completed by Allison & Allison, who are also architects for the new University of California at Los Angeles, and specifications have been accepted by the holding corporation. Directors of the concern are [illegible] of the Lutheran [illegible] districts of California. With Dr. Edward M. Stensrud of San [illegible] as president, the board is [illegible] of G. Eckdahl, Los Angeles, [illegible]; Knute B. Norswing, [illegible] treasurer; M. L. Ullens[illegible] Los Angeles, secretary; and [illegible] W. J. Gram of Los An[illegible] Rev. A. P. G. Anderson of Los [illegible] Juiet Lindeberg of San Fran[illegible] Rev. J. H. Vammen of Los [illegible] and Dr. Oscar H. Gruver of [illegible]

The date upon which construction is launched depends upon the [illegible] consummation of a campaign [illegible] to be raised immediately in the Los Angeles district, according to Dr. Stensrud, who is in active charge of the project. Dr. Stensrud is the retiring [illegible] of the California Lutheran conference. The rest of the $5,000,000 [illegible] group of approximately thirty [illegible] will be subscribed by Lutherans throughout the State and [illegible]

The site of 100 acres is the gift of Harry H. Culver and associates, [illegible] & Gillespie, Joseph Mesmer and King Vidor and associates. The property affords a view of the [illegible] and cities throughout the [illegible] territory. It is believed [illegible] sufficient funds will be in hand [illegible] for bids by March 1.

[illegible] prepared by Allison & [illegible] indicate the first university [illegible] which will be undertaken. They include a unit of three [illegible] for the fine arts department, two classroom buildings, a temporary administration and classroom [illegible] science building, library [illegible] chapel.

The second program, to be undertaken after the university is under [illegible], would be a large auditorium with completely equipped [illegible] south of the center of the [illegible]. The buildings east and [illegible] of the auditorium will be used [illegible] and recitation purposes. A [illegible] administration building will [illegible] the extreme south of the [illegible]

The girls' dormitory group is on [illegible] portion of the site and [illegible] six buildings. The girls' [illegible] field, with a completely [illegible] gymnasium, is located just [illegible] of the girls' dormitory group [illegible] will include tennis and handball courts and other facilities.

The men's dormitory group is east [illegible] main group and comprises [illegible] buildings. South of this [illegible] a large stadium to seat 25,000 [illegible], and complete athletic [illegible] gymnasium attached.

[illegible] easterly line of the site [illegible] a number of buildings to

FACT AND COMMENT

Declaring that an inheritance tax is grossly unfair, C. C. Hieatt, president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, expressed the views of realty brokers at a joint meeting of Sciots and the Realty Board in San Diego recently. He pointed out that the government steps in after a smart and hard-working man has accumulated a heritage for his children, and grabs as high as 40 per cent of it by Federal and State levies.

The national realty chief's views are more or less well founded. At the California real estate convention in Santa Monica last month, the delegates by acclamation approved the report of Robert A. Swink, their taxation committee chairman, which said in part:

"Stability of purpose in taxation matters is an asset to a State and encourages the flow of wealth to it. Questions and issues relating to taxation should be settled early, and in so far as possible, finally.

"Sources of taxation, such as death dues, and income taxes, in both of which there is no limitation of the rate that may be exacted by each recurring legislature and where the amount fixed could be confiscatory in extent, should the Legislature so determine, should not, except in extreme necessity, be resorted to by a State like California. Here we are bidding for new people and new wealth to assist in developing our vast undeveloped resources and no unnecessary hindrances should be placed in their way.

"Our tax structure should be one that will appeal to the largest number of people as fair and equitable, free from injustices and discriminations, stable and permanent in its intent and yet one which will produce ample revenue to meet the legitimate needs of our government."

Mayor Rolph Has Visions

Los Angeles must well look to her laurels. Mayor Rolph of San Francisco, a few days ago told the Bay City Exchange Club that by 1930 the San Francisco metropolitan area will number 3,500,000 people.

The enthusiastic Mayor envisioned San Francisco covering all of Santa Clara county to its southern border. He hopes to see the San Mateo county line erased.

Mayor Rolph stopped just before he foresaw Los Angeles meanwhile

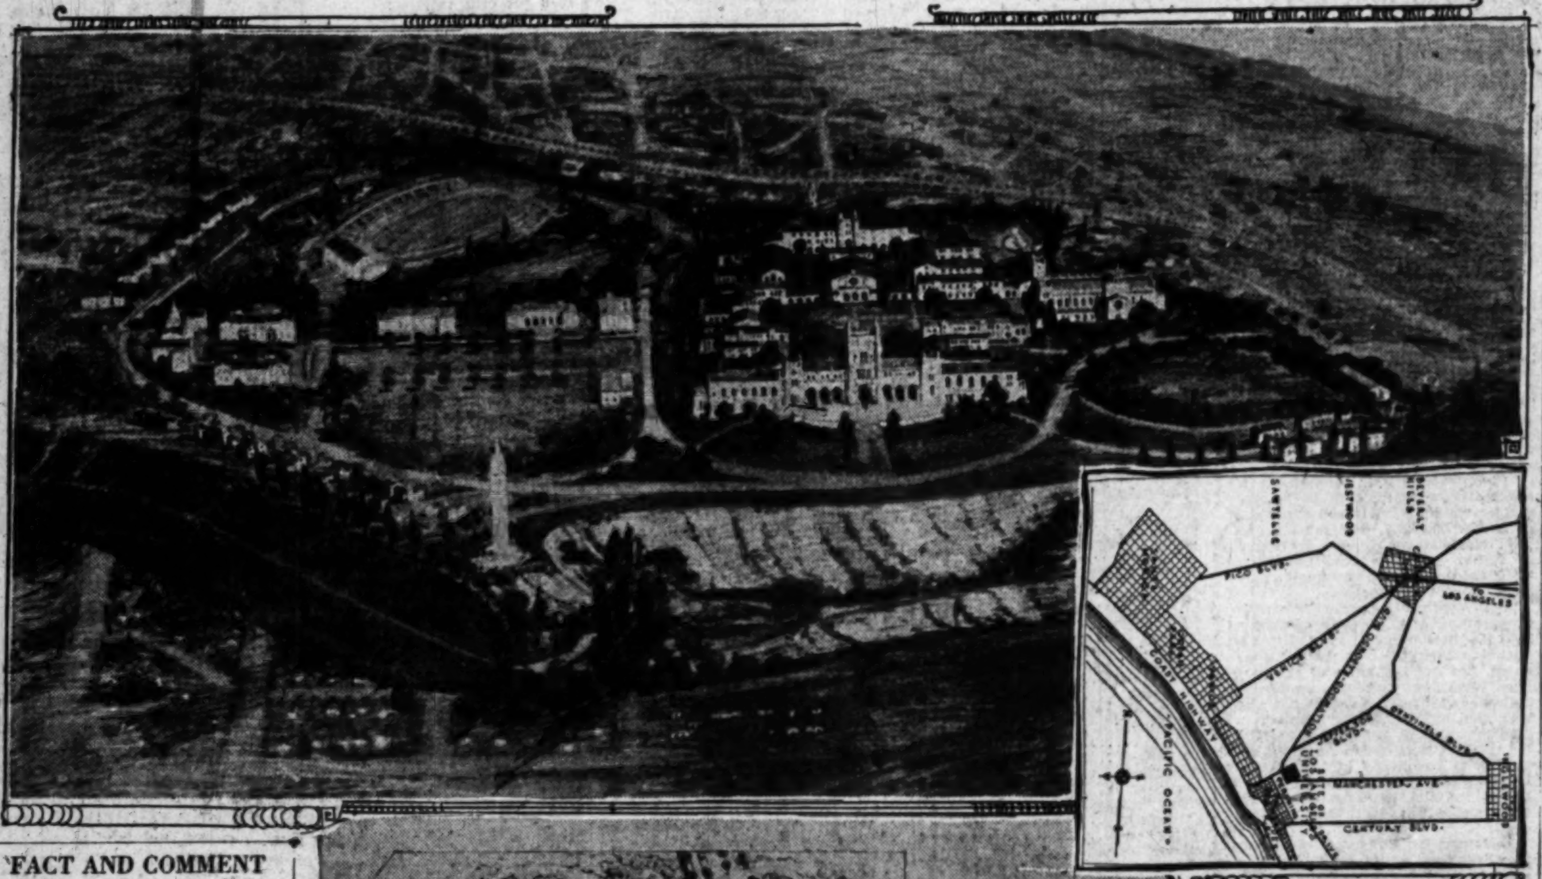
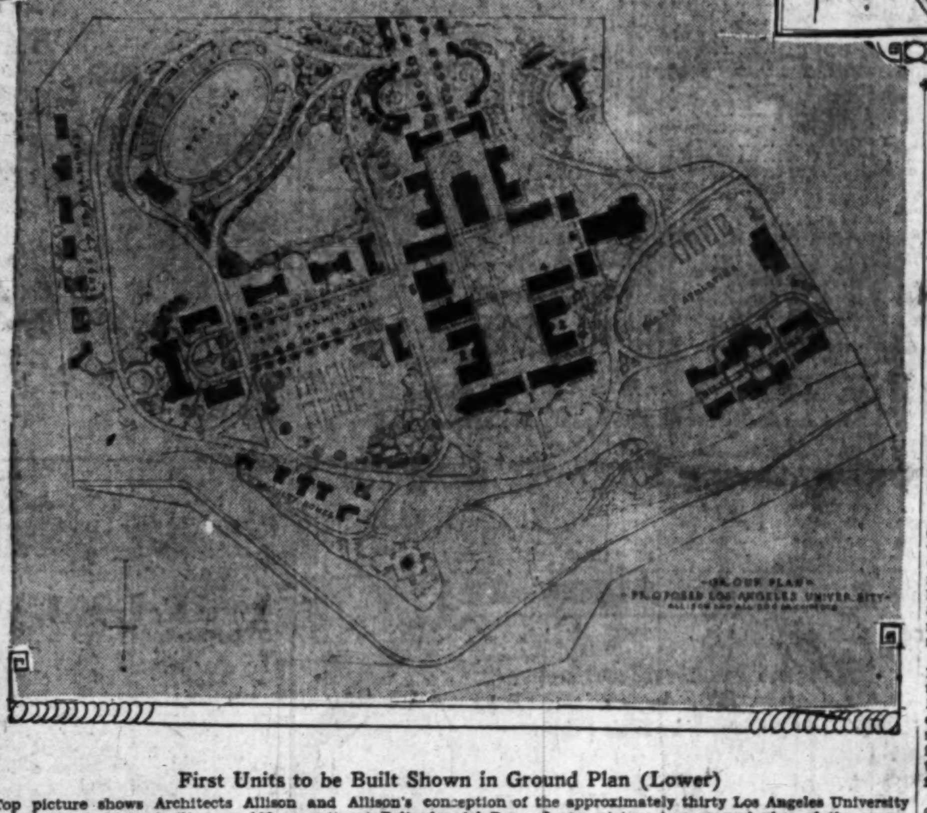
Architect's Sketch for Five-Million-Dollar University Group





First Units to be Built Shown in Ground Plan (Lower)

Top picture shows Architects Allison and Allison's conception of the approximately thirty Los Angeles University buildings to be built on a 100-acre site at Palisades del Rey. Lower picture is a ground plan of the group, showing units to be erected first in black. No. 1 is a unit of three buildings for fine arts departments. The west wing will have studios for the various branches of art, with an art gallery on the upper floor. The east wing is the music building, with its studios and practice rooms, and an assembly hall on the second floor for oral expression. The central portion of this group is to be used for a museum, classrooms, etc., and is surmounted by a Memorial Tower, which may include chimes. The next two buildings, designated No. 2, include approximately sixty class and recitation rooms. No. 3 is a temporary administration building and classrooms. No. 4 to be used for the different branches of the sciences, with a complete line of laboratories. No. 5 is the library building, and No. 6 is the chapel. The inset indicates the strategic location of the university site.

DIRECTORS VIEW PROJECT

Officials of New Lutheran University Outline Plans for College in Statement

Simultaneous with the announcement of intentions to start construction of the $5,000,000 Los Angeles Lutheran University at Palisades del Rey, the board of directors of the Los Angeles Lutheran University Corporation, holders of the 100-acre site, issued the following signed statement:

"Early in 1928 ground will be broken in Los Angeles for the first Lutheran university to be established in America. Los Angeles University, named for the city selected to be its home, will make Los Angeles the educational capital for the 19,000,000 Lutherans and their affiliates in North America.

"A $5,000,000 building program will be initiated on a 100-mile campus located on the mesa of the Del Rey Hills, a half-mile back from the ocean, fronting on Jefferson Boulevard and served by the Pacific Electric and six major highways. The first unit of the new university will open in 1929-30.

PLANNED SINCE WAR

"Since the end of the World War, leading Lutherans of California have planned this university to meet the increasing need for such an institution. A commission, after studying various communities, selected Los Angeles as its logical location. Titles to the 100-acre site, which is donated to the university corporation, are in escrow.

"Leading educators of international reputation are giving their counsel for the proper development of this project.

"While operating under Lutheran control, Los Angeles University will welcome to its various colleges and departments students of every race and belief. No educational institution ever opened with assurances of attendance and support more promising than the following:

"Every year several thousand young men and women go from Lutheran homes in this State to eastern colleges. With the support of Lutherans throughout the State back of it, a great number of these students will come to Los Angeles University. Then, thousands of Lutheran families in the East and Middle West will welcome this opportunity to send their sons and daughters to Los Angeles for their university education. Also, with its facilities open to everyone, the new university will attract

CULVER TO LEAVE ON TRIP EAST

Realty Board President Predicts Prosperous Year; Three Weeks' Tour Begun

Leaving on his second tour of the United States in the last two months, Harry H. Culver, president of the Los Angeles Realty Board and past president of the California Real Estate Association, is planning to visit a large number of eastern cities during the next three weeks.

Culver, previous to leaving on the trip declared that California would next year witness one of the best twelve months of real-estate activity ever seen in this State.

The California booster will travel by airplane, speaking before realty boards in Kansas City, St. Louis, Louisville, Baltimore, New York, Brooklyn and Denver as well as before the New Jersey State convention at Atlantic City. Culver, in his speeches, is arousing a nation-wide interest among realtors in aviation as one of the important phases of real-estate development during the next ten years.

CITY PROVES FINEST HOST IN COUNTRY

Survey Shows Los Angeles Has 150,000 Visitors Every Day; Population Mounting

That Los Angeles is probably the greatest host of any city in the country and that an unusually large portion of its guests remain as permanent residents is brought out in an interesting survey just completed for the Orange County Investment Corporation.

The survey brings out the fact that there are approximately 150,000 visitors in this city at all times who are living here from a few days to several months, but not permanently. It was pointed out that Los Angeles entertains approximately 300,000 visitors every year and of that number about 45,000 remain as permanent residents.

Using the estimated figure of 1,200,350 as the population for 1926, the survey gives a population of 1,527,700 for this city in 1930. It was explained that, that figure was arrived at on the basis of an annual increase of about 62,500, making the present population 1,330,200 and for 1928, a total of 1,392,700.

It was pointed out in the Orange County Corporation survey that those figures are based only on the permanent population of the city. Figuring both the permanent and non permanent residents, the total for this year would be 1,480,200 while the total for 1930 would be increased to 1,677,700.

BEACH CITY CLOSING ITS BEST YEAR

Newport Jetties Bolster Building Activity to Highest Mark

NEWPORT BEACH, Dec. 3.—This city is nearing the end of by far the greatest building year in its history. The $500,000 jetty construction at the entrance to Newport Harbor, undertaken last spring and now near completion, has resulted in a large number of private building enterprises and indications are that next year will see even a larger program of this kind.

The new theater which is to rise on the site of the present Rendezvous ballroom on Central avenue near Main, is said to be the first of several modern business structures due to go up in that immediate vicinity. Workmen now are busy tearing down the old Rendezvous so that the new movie and vaudeville palace will be ready well in advance of the 1928 summer season.

To take the place of the Rendezvous in the realm of terpsichore another better ballroom is scheduled to be built on the ocean front, west of Washington street, it is stated. This will make three modern ballrooms for this city, the others being the Balboa Pavilion on the bay front, and the Newport Dance Pavilion, built this past summer.

The Bank of Balboa is scheduled to let a contract soon for a new bank building to be constructed on the corner of Central and Washington, diagonally across from the building that bank now occupies. Plans are also to have it ready for next summer.

The Theodore Robins Ford agency building and the Stone Block, built during last summer and the Estus Block now under construction, are among some of the other new structures in the city.

STREET WORK PLANNED

CORCORAN, Dec. 4. (Exclusive)—Further extension of the paved street area of this city is contemplated in petitions now being circulated here. The streets named in the petitions are Whitley and Otis avenues and a number of streets running east and west in the district adjacent to where considerable paving was recently completed.

LOCAL PERMITS TOP LAST YEAR

City and Southland Shatter November, 1926, Mark

Los Angeles Piles Up Month's Total of $17,464,327

Report Places Period Second Greatest on Record

While Los Angeles was piling up a grand total of $17,464,327 in building permit valuations for November—the second largest monthly figure on record here—Southern California cities attained $24,825,709 during November, according to a telegraphic compilation of figures from seventy-four Southland and Coast cities prepared by the Los Angeles Times.

The Los Angeles figure was far in excess of the $8,688,255 tabulated in November, 1926, and boosted the total for the eleven months of 1927 to $116,396,736. The same eleven months last year totaled only $112,916,344, giving 1927 a decided edge in the race to eclipse last year's record.

Bolstering the Los Angeles figure, the $10,000,000 permit for county buildings also had its effect on Southland totals. Whereas $17,865,047 was registered by Southland cities during November, 1926, a huge total of $24,825,709 was recorded during November, 1927. Despite that stimulus, however, the Southland's eleven months of 1927 still lag behind the same period in 1926.

CONDITIONS STABLE

Commenting on the city's building the Southwest Builder and Contractor points out:

"At the beginning of the last month of the year there is no change in conditions which should materially affect the trend of building during the remainder of the winter and the spring. Building costs and conditions in the building trades are favorable to the owner, and the volume of operations is a question of immediate demands and the faith of the building owner in the future."

Following is the city's record for 1927 and for the corresponding period in 1926 by months:

	1927 value.	1926 value.
January	$ 8,129,749	$ 6,973,252
February	7,574,254	8,542,270
March	11,111,774	12,879,558
April	10,458,612	11,307,290
May	11,563,863	10,782,844
June	9,255,175	11,856,083
July	9,286,096	14,126,776
August	11,790,916	8,926,106
September	9,274,248	8,163,561
October	10,369,098	9,650,229
November	17,464,327	8,688,255
Totals	$116,396,736	$112,916,344

Class A construction for November, 1927, comprised ten buildings with an estimated valuation of $10,388,098. These included two buildings for the county, the second unit of the county museum at Exposition Park and the acute diseases unit of the General Hospital, estimated to cost $9,750,000. Only one Class B building estimated to cost $140,000 was started during the month. Class C construction totaled $824,590, covering fifty-seven buildings, and Class D, all-frame construction, amounted to $4,532,304 for 1712 buildings.

HOUSING OPERATIONS

Housing operations for November were close to the average for the month. They were represented by 733 permits for dwellings and apartment-houses estimated to cost $4,568,692, or 23.7 per cent of the total number of permits and 26.1 per cent of the total valuation for the month. Accommodations for 1414 families are added to the city's housing by these buildings. Following is the housing record for 1927 by months:

	Number Permits	Value	Number Families
January	833	$ 4,391,694	1,492
February	698	4,041,281	1,188
March	1,007	5,479,820	1,872

Beauty Which Endures!

TRUE beauty, in income structures, must be lasting; must consist not only of an appealing design but also of such construction that these buildings will "grow old gracefully," retaining their appeal to renters through the years.

Close-bilt apartments — new or old—are always in demand. Theirs is that built-in beauty; construction of character; designs of distinction.

DIRECTORS VIEW UNIVERSITY PLAN

thousands more as 'day students' from this community and as 'boarding students' from other sections. Graduate students, from 150 other Lutheran colleges and academies in America which will act as 'feeders' to the new institution, will come here for advanced work in their only university; and summer students and teachers will come to attend summer school in a setting by the sea that is ideal for work and recreation.

CULTURAL ADVANTAGES

"For years Los Angeles has spent millions of dollars and organized effort to bring to it a growth of population, of commerce and industry, unequaled in history. The time has come, in the opinion of thinking leaders, when this material growth must be balanced by adequate development of those cultural and educational facilities without which no city can continue to grow nor serve its present and future population. Then, from a purely business viewpoint, the new university will become one of the greatest economic assets to this community.

"Beginning with a $2,000,000 first unit, $5,000,000 or more will be spent locally for building construction, labor, materials and equipment.

"The economic value of a student to the community is estimated, conservatively, at $1000 per year; therefore, for every 1000 students Los Angeles University will have a 'payroll' value to the city of $1,000,000 each year.

GIFT OF 100 ACRES

"The 100-acre site, declared by a foremost city planner to be second to none in the country and appraised as a $500,000 gift, was donated to the university corporation, by Harry H. Culver and associates, Dickinson & Gillespie, Joseph Mesmer and King Vidor and associates.

"Los Angeles Lutheran University Corporation, the holding company, has its headquarters in California Lutheran Hospital, 1414 South Hope street, Los Angeles, some of the persons identified with the university movement having been identified also with the building of the hospital.

"The building fund of $2,000,000 for the first unit of Los Angeles University, to be opened in 1929-30, will be raised in this section, and business offices for the building fund have been opened at 1401 South Hope street.

Directors: Dr. Edward M. Stenerud, San Francisco, president; G. Eckdahl, Los Angeles, vice-president; Knute B. Norswing, Fullerton, treasurer; M. L. Ullensvang, Los Angeles, secretary; W. J. Gram, Los Angeles; Rev. A. P. G. Anderson, Los Angeles; Jafet Lindeberg, San Francisco; Rev. J. H. Vammen, Los Angeles; Dr. Oscar H. Gruver, Oakland.

be used by fraternities and university clubs, comprising seven buildings.

On the brow of the hill on the north, on a commanding elevation, are located the residences for the faculty.

At the southeast corner is an open-air theater, fitting in gracefully with the natural contour of the ground, which will be equipped with a large open-air stage, dressing-rooms, etc.

The style of architecture is a modification which might most accurately be termed as California Renaissance, savoring strongly of the Romanesque and Byzantine in form and detail. All of the buildings in the main group will be connected by covered cloisters. It is proposed to construct all of the buildings of reinforced concrete Class A fireproof construction, using terra cotta trimmings and tile roofs.

The landscaping of the entire site will be done on an ambitious scale and it is proposed to have the walks, drives and boulevards laid out for future developments in the initial program so that the planting and landscaping can be put under way at the earliest possible moment.

Dairy Products Move Planned

Confronted with the task of damming a stream of milk flowing at the rate of 7000 gallons a minute, D. M. Dorman, president of the International Ice Cream Manufacturers' Association and head of California Dairies, Inc., here, has launched plans for more complete utilization of all dairy products produced in the United States, it was announced yesterday by California Dairies officials.

Necessity for such a step was brought forcibly to the attention of the executive at the recent Cleveland convention, where it was shown that incomplete utilization of milk by-products is resulting in the annual loss of the above gallonage, or its equivalent, to the dairy and allied industries and the public.

Official Lauds Buildings Here

Pacific Coast architecture, particularly that of the churches, theaters and public buildings, was highly praised recently by William M. Kinrey of Chicago, general manager of the Portland Cement Association, who is touring the West, accompanied by other officials of hte organization.

"Everywhere I see churches, theaters, libraries, club buildings and other structures built of concrete with such skill and beauty that they surpass anything I have seen in the East," he declared. "They are a distinctive type which seems to approach most nearly a truly American style of architecture."

Many Boards Approve Code

High aims and ideals for the public welfare in the matter of subdivisions throughout California is expressed in the California Real Estate Association code of ethics adopted by the Homebuilders and Subdividers Division at the last two State conventions. The code has now been ratified by a large number of boards throughout California.

The boards adopting this code are: Alhambra, Bakersfield, Bell, Beverly Hills, Chico, Compton, Downey, Fullerton, Glendale, Inglewood, Laguna Beach, Lodi, Los Angeles, Montebello, Monterey, North Hollywood, Ontario, Palo Alto, Pasadena, Redondo Beach, Redwood City, Riverside, San Diego, San Pedro, Santa Ana, Sonta Monica, South Pasadena, Tracy, Stockton, Whittier, Wilmar and Yolo county.

SOUTHLAND CONSTRUCTION FOR NOVEMBER LEADS 1926 PERIOD

Attaining a mark of $24,825,709 in November of the current year, sixty-seven Southern California cities far outstripped their totals for November, 1926, when $17,865,047 was recorded, according to The Times' monthly telegraphic compilation. Rent and Home Ownership

Those who declare they cannot afford to own a home are given a new angle to think about in a table prepared by the California Building Loan League. The table provides an effective foil to meet its arguments of those who believe it is cheaper to pay rent. The tabulation which follows reveals how rent money mounts up at 6 per cent interest:

Rent per mo.	10 years.	20 years.
$25	$3,954.20	$11,035.68
27	4,270.54	11,918.50
28	4,428.71	12,359.93
30	4,745.04	13,242.78

the "Difference!"

There is a difference!

Whether it be a Hotel, Apartment or Business Building . . . you'll find Mayo methods decidedly superior, and more productive of permanent income for you.

A good way to determine this difference for yourself, would be to check up with the owners and managers of a group of buildings of the type you contemplate having built. Include a few MAYO-BUILT structures on your list.

Then come to us, and we'll explain how the Mayo way of building, based on 16 years specialization, makes a difference worth while having in your favor.

Complete building service. A Certified Architect prepares all plans on buildings we construct.

LAND DONATIONS SAVE MILLIONS

Realty Deeded for Streets Aids City Greatly

Property Owners Recognize Value in Gifts

Condemnations Unnecessary in Many Cases

More than $1,000,000 each year is saved to the city through the deeding of land by property owners for the opening and widening of streets, exclusive of land deed when new subdivisions are platted, according to a report by City Engineer Shaw.

Last year a new high mark was reached when F. M. McDaniels, head of the city's right of way department, reported that the value of deeds and easements totaled $1,313,558.

The record is proof of two important facts:

(1.) That Los Angeles property owners show a most progressive spirit in developing and improving the city.

(2.) That these property owners who gave portions of their land without cost to the city realize that the benefits derived from obtaining wide streets outweigh the value of the land deeded.

ON MAJOR PROJECTS

Most of the deeds have been obtained on major-traffic streets, and greatly accelerate the carrying out of the major-traffic street plan, according to records of the Traffic Commission, sponsors of the plan.

In some cases the deeding of private land or street area has elliminated the need for condemnation proceedings, thus saving large amounts of money and two or three years time.

As an example of this, the property owners on La Brea, between Venice and Washington, voluntarily deeded portions of their property to make La Brea 100 feet wide, in carrying out the plan to make La Brea a wide-traffic artery from Hollywood to the harbor.

Practically all of the land to widen Ventura Boulevard to 100 feet from Lankershim Boulevard to Sepulveda Boulevard. La Cienega Boulevard, the new short cut from Hollywood to Culver City, was deeded by property owners.

SAN FERNANDO ROAD

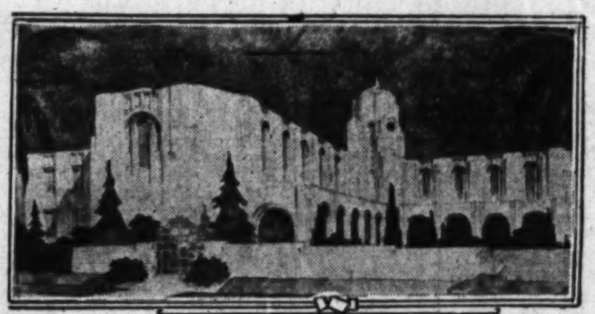
Sections of San Fernando Road, from Burbank to the city of San Fernando were deeded to 100 feet by property owners, thus avoiding lengthy and expensive condemnation proceedings.

Angeles Mesa Drive, from Slauson to Florence, was widened without cost through the deeding of property by owners.

In cases where expensive buildings have been constructed, the property owners cannot be expected to deed their lands, and so condemnation must be resorted to. The City Planning Commission has obtained more than 200 miles of 100-foot streets when new subdivisions were placed on the market, thus providing through traffic arteries for future use, and making it unnecessary to resort to condemnation later.

NEW MORMON CHAPEL TO RISE

Hollywood Stake to Erect Edifice



Structure Will Cost Approximately $165,000

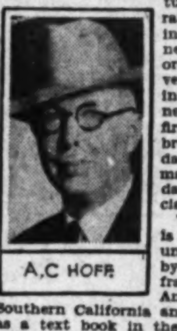
PROMINENT officials of the Latter-day Saints or Mormons, from Salt Lake City, recently joined with officials of the Hollywood Stake here to dedicate a site at Manhattan Place and Country Club Drive on which will be erected a large chapel and recreation center.

The two buildings which are to be joined in the form of an "L" are to cost approximately $165,000. They will be of Mediterranean architecture and the construction is to be concrete. The space between them is to be beautifully parked and made suitable for open-air gatherings.

Construction is expected to commence shortly after the first of the year.

Pope, Burton and Falkenrath, with offices in the Chamber of Commerce Building, were the architects.

BUILDERS' GUIDE OFF PRESS



A. C. HOFF

The 1928 edition of the Los Angeles Annual Builders' Guide is being distributed with additional features incorporated, including the complete new plumbing ordinance and a very complete index thereto, new maps of the fire districts brought up-to-date, and all text matter revised to date and officially proof-read.

The handbook is now most universally used by the building fraternity of Los Angeles and Southern California and is also used as a text book in the schools. The guide has been approved by the Los Angeles Board of Public Works, the Department of Building and Safety, the Builders' Exchange, the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, the Architectural Club of Los Angeles, the Southern California Chapter of the American Institute of Architects, the Southern California Chapter of the Associated General Contractors and the Allied Architects' Association.

This handbook presents in official form the Los Angeles building ordinance complete, illustrated and cross indexed, the new plumbing ordinance with a very complete index, the Los Angeles electrical ordinance and supplementary rulings of the department of electricity, and State Housing Act of California, and special subsidiary ordinances such as excavation in and use of streets, set-back lines, the ordinance on refrigeration, tables and charts and special technical articles of interest to the building fraternity. All text copy is read by the best possible authorities and all drawings are officially signed. The official monthly new ordinance service which goes out to each book holder has proved a wonderful help in Los Angeles on account of the many changes necessary in the building ordinances of the city.

The preparation of the present edition has taken A. C. Hoff, general manager of the Interstate Educational Association, about nine months.

DATA SHOW GROWTH OF SAN MARINO

During 1925 Building Reaches $1,623,000 While 1927 Hits $3,000,000

San Marino's phenomenal growth is brought out clearly by figures compiled this week by P. L. Cowherd, general manager of the Frank Meline Company's subdivision, Oak Knoll Marino, which has been one of the outstanding developments of this new city.

During 1925 there were 139 new buildings constructed in San Marino and the building permits amounted to $1,623,000. During 1926 there were 191 new buildings constructed and the building permits amounted to $2,200,000. In 1927 to date there have been 255 new buildings constructed and the building permits amount to over $3,000,000.

"One surprising thing about San Marino's growth," states Mr. Cowherd, "is the fact that practically all the building permits taken out are for single family residences, and the average cost of the residences erected over a period of three years since the building inspector's office, has been open, is around $10,000."

In commenting on this remarkable growth of San Marino, Mr Cowherd points out that 75 per cent of the buildings constructed have been erected in subdivisions handled by the Frank Meline Company in San Marino, namely Oak Knoll, Oak Knoll Marino, Oak Knoll Estate Unit, and San Marino Vista.

ELECTRIC PLANT TO RISE SOON

Next Unit of Company's Station at Seal Beach to Create Home Shortage

SEAL BEACH, Dec. 3. (Exclusive) Construction of the second unit of the Los Angeles Gas and Electric Corporation's plant here will begin in the near future, it was announced here this week. The second unit will be a replica of the present large plant. The original plans of the corporation call for three such units, it is said. Several years are needed in which to fill each unit.

Additional machinery is to be installed at once in the present unit. Workmen are beginning to arrive in Seal Beach to start the installation of the new machinery. The machinery will nearly double the efficiency of the plant, it is said.

Should work start in the near future on the second unit of the big plant, Seal Beach will face a housing problem, it is declared by residents. Hundreds of workmen will be employed in the construction of the big plant, and houses in this city are nearly filled, it is reported.

LAST OF VALENCIAS SHIPPED

Record Crop to Exceed $20,538,706, Value of Last Year Volume

The total shipment for the year exceeding that o any previous year, the last of the 1927 crop of Valencia or summer oranges, was shipped this week from Orange county.

While the exact amount of the shipment of Valencias is not known, it is certain that this year's crop will exceed the banner crop of 1926 which totaled $20,538,706.

Due to its thick skin, the Valencia is one o fthe hardiest oranges grown. The trees begin to bear about the middle of April and continue to produce until December. Because of its size and sweetness, the Orange county Valencia is in great demand in all parts of the world, but it is seldom that any great quantity is exported due to the demand in America.

COMPLETE ROSTER OF ASSOCIATION ISSUED

A complete roster of members of the California Real Estate Association will be published in the December issue of California Real Estate, official journal of the organization, according to announcement made by Harry B. Allen, president of the organization.

The magazine will be out this week with the names of every member for the year 1927. A roster of the association is published in this manner annually.

Realty Banquet Place Changed

INGLEWOOD, Dec. 3.—Last minute changes in plans call for the annual meeting of the Inglewood Realty Board to be held tomorrow evening at the Chamber of Commerce instead of the Women's Club. Prominent realtors from many Southland cities are planning to attend what is always one of the main events of the year here.

State Real Estate Commissioner Steven Barnson, C. C. Tatum, past-president of the California State Real Estate Association and the Los Angeles Realty Board, and Glenn D. Willamon, executive secretary of the State organization, are scheduled to speak. Frank D. Parent, president of the local board and vice-president of the Sixteenth district of the State Association, will preside. Harvey D. Moseley is chairman of the banquet committee, assisted by Mrs. Minnie M. Baum, secretary of the board, and LeRoy H. Smith.

New University Building Walls to Start Rising

With the completion of foundation work on the new $200,000 liberal arts building of the University of Southern California, walls are scheduled to rise this week, according to the Scofield Engineering Company, which is also erecting the new Student Union Building at Thirty-sixth Place and University avenue.

The new building is being built at University avenue and Exposition Boulevard and is to be ready for occupancy by March 15, 1928. It also is to be known as the Bridge Building and was designed by Architects John and Donald Parkinson. The structure will be four stories high with basement, and is to be faced with brick and 200 tons of standard terra cotta, supplied by Gladding, McBean & Co. The Romanesque style of architecture is to be followed and, according to reports, it will be the central structure of a group of buildings to be erected in the near future.

Four stories in height and also following the Romanesque architecture, the Student Union Building is nearing completion at a cost of $300,000. The structure is faced with terra cotta and trimmed with considerable ornamental frieze work from the Gladding, McBean factory.

6% MONEY
for home buyers and builders with fifteen years to repay

When buying or building a home, one of the most important factors to consider is the TYPE OF LOAN that has been or is to be placed on the property.

Will your carrying charges be too high, and, when your loan becomes due, will you be likely to have trouble re-financing in the event of a business depression?

All doubts and worries may be avoided by employing the long-term amortized form of loan which is now obtainable through this Company on extremely advantageous terms.

If you are about to buy a home, or if you own a lot and are planning to build, you may obtain a first-lien loan of $2,000.00 to $12,500.00 (depending on the valuation of your property) at 6% interest, and then take fifteen years to pay it off.

This kind of loan offers several distinct advantages. It gives you a lower interest rate than the usual short-term loan. It frees you from the trouble and expense of periodical renewals. It encourages thrift by providing a practical plan of systematic saving, and giving you a constantly increasing equity, with the knowledge that eventually you will own your property free and clear of encumbrance.

Then, too, if you ever have occasion to offer your property for sale, the question of who holds the loan is satisfactorily answered. The fact that it is held by a strong, conservative institution—one of the largest of its kind in the United States—is decidedly favorable, and may easily prove to be one of the deciding factors in the deal.

BUILDING LOANS

Arranging a long-term, amortized building loan through this Company means:

(a) Dealing direct with the principal thus insuring prompt action and minimum initial costs.

(b) Avoidance of the usual temporary building loan by having the initial loan serve as the permanent loan.

(c) The benefit of many years of successful experience in the financing of building projects.

LOANS ON INCOME PROPERTIES

In addition to the fifteen-year loans on single and two-family houses, we make ten-year loans on flats, apartments, courts and business buildings. Both forms of loan are repayable in easy semi-annual installments, and both are subject to the privilege of re-payment in full after a reasonable period.

Perhaps your present short-term loan could be advantageously replaced now with a long-term amortized loan.

No matter whether you want a long or short-term loan, you are cordially invited to call and discuss your requirements; or, if you cannot call, write and tell us the location and value of your property, present encumbrance, and amount of re-financing desired.

COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT

AVOCADO AREA GROWS RAPIDLY

Rancho Vista in Midst of Intensive Development

District Reports 500 Water Meters Installed

Fourth Unit Almost Ready for Realty Mart

Government and State horticultural experts have declared a limited area in California, and the United States, for that matter, exists for the successful development of the avocado. That area has generally been limited in Southern California to parts of Ventura, Orange and Northern San Diego counties.

The frostless climate necessary for the growth of this tree as well as the soil and dependability of water supply adequate for it have recently drawn the focus of expert opinion upon the Vista Irrigation District, six miles east of Oceanside, in Northern San Diego county.

About a year and a half ago favorable opinion of these experts hastened the purchase of some 1000 acres by the Phillips & Hambaugh Co., subsequently called Rancho Vista. Then there were about thirty water meters in the Vista Irrigation District when Rancho Vista was first conceived; today there are 500 water meters. The irrigation district is fed by Lake Henshaw, the largest impounded water supply in Southern California. During that time three units of Rancho Vista have been practically all disposed of, and the fourth, Mar Vista unit, is well on its way to completion, according to E. R. Mullen, treasurer of the Phillips & Hambaugh Co.

So rapid was the sale of this approved avacado, citrus and berry land that while a crew of construction men were constantly kept busy, they were at all times barely ahead of the selling crew under the management of Bert and John Rudd. Even the summer season did not bring a hitch in development, they declared.

A trip to the Vista district now reveals thousands of acres under cultivation. Rancho Vista is now in the midst of planting 17,500 avacado trees on its frost-protected slopes for the large number who have bought. Winter vegetables afford a valuable intercrop among the avacado trees.

REDLANDS ATTORNEY SELLS ORANGE AREA

REDLANDS, Dec. 3. (Exclusive)—Kirke H. CITY LACKS APARTMENTS AND HOTELS

Need of High-Class Units Pictured by Official of Building Corporation

Los Angeles is facing a shortage of high-class hotels and apartment buildings, though there is an oversupply just at present of the more ordinary type buildings of these classes, according to Luther T. Mayo, head of a corporation which specializes in designing and building apartments, hotels and business structures.

"All the thoroughly modern high-class hotels and apartment-houses in the city are now virtually filled, due to the large number of well-to-do families that are now pouring into Los Angeles," said Mr. Mayo. "It is evident that we are in need of more accommodations for families of this class.

"Of late there have been wonderful innovations in the designing of first-class hotels and apartment buildings. The old box-like buildings, with doors and windows of uniform style throughout, are being replaced by artistic creations that present variety in design, both inside and out. They also contain conveniences and comforts that were not thought possible a few years ago."

Railroads, Water, Ice Given as Reason for Great Progress Made by Imperial District

How water, railroads and ice have transformed in a comparatively few years a barren land into one of the greatest agricultural producing centers of the world, is told in a survey just made of the Imperial Valley by the Union Ice Company.

Approximately $3,000,000 worth of dairy products are raised annually in the valley at the present time, the survey discloses; the average lettuce crop is valued at approximately $4,500,000; 300 cars of tomatoes, 2800 cars of watermelons, 200 cars of grapes, 130 cars of peas, 15 cars of spinach, 35 cars of asparagus and 15 cars of strawberries are shipped far and wide every year. The valley grows approximately one-half a car of perishable products for every man, woman and child of its population, the report points out.

"Water, of course, was essential in the growing of the crops," the report continues, "but even then the products would rot in the fields if it were not for efficient transportation facilities. And the transportation facilities would be of no avail, especially so far as perishable products are concerned, if it were not for ice.

"Cantaloupes alone require for the initial icing of refrigerator cars approximately 100,000 tons of ice every year. The seasonable average production of 13,000 cars of 'cants' could be shipped only to a very limited area without ice. One shipment of fruit in 1923 required 4536 tons of ice. Without ice, land in the valley would be worth only a fraction of its present value."

Development of the ice industry at shipping points of the valley has kept pace with the growth of the vegetable, fruit and dairy industries, until today some of the largest and best-equipped ice plants of the West are located there, the survey reveals.

Land in the Imperial Valley was valued by the United States at $1.25 an acre as desert when water was first turned in from the Colorado River. Stock in the California Development Company, which represented use of water for one acre of land for each share, was valued at $8.75, thus making the land with water rights worth $10 an acre. The same land today is valued at from $100 to $1000 an acre. Crops had no particular value until the railroads were built, and then only the nonperishable crops, such as hay and grain, could be marketed to advantage.

GIFTS FOR CHRISTMAS IN RANCHES

Four Properties Reported Purchased at Fontana for Holiday Tokens to Friends

FONTANA, Dec. 3.—Poultry ranches as Christmas gifts!

That slogan appears to have "gone over big" here as indicated in the announcement by Phil G. Deicher, tract manager for the Fontana Farms Company, that four pieces of property were sold during the last week of November which will be turned over as gifts by the purchasers on the evening of the 25th inst.

PHIL G DEICHER

Mr. Deicher also pointed out that there had been a decided turn in sales activity during October and November, with the result that an increase of 50 per cent in business has been recorded over August and September. December has gotten off to a good start also, he reports, and he expects the last month of the year to come close to shattering records. Sales for the last week of November more than doubled the total for the previous three weeks, according to Mr. Deicher, and he discounts all reports that activity during December will drop to a minimum because of the holiday period.

More than 400 homes and poultry ranches were started or completed in 1927 up to the 1st inst., the tract manager added, the average cost of the buildings being $3000. That means that more than $1,250,000 has been expended so far this year for dwellings and poultry ranches alone.

Other construction work completed or under way bring the total to well above the $2,500,000 mark, shattering all building records for this community, figures in the San Bernardino County Hall of Records disclose. Included in the $2,500,000 are extensive improvements by public-utility concerns, including the erection of a telephone exchange building and the laying of gas mains to serve the community.

Cherries were known in Asia as far back as the fourteenth century, and records show that the first cherry tree was planted in England by the Roman conquerors.

Four Estates Bring $39,500

"Activity in the sales of residential estates at Los Feliz Woods on Los Feliz Boulevard, a Frank Meline project, continued during the last week with four estates being sold," said C. H. Lind, vice-president of the Meline organization in charge of the subdivision.

The aggregate sales amounted to $39,500. Two of the sites sold are located on the hillside with the others on level ground near Los Feliz Boulevard.

Skyscraper to Get Under Way on January 1

Foreman & Clark will start to demolish the one-story structure at the southwest corner of Seventh and Hill streets January 1, and will immediately begin the erection of a height-limit, thirteen-story Class A steel-frame store and office building.

Curlett & Beelman are the architects and Baker Iron Works has the steel contract. The building will be a notable addition to the changing skyline of the downtown district. It will occupy ninety feet of frontage on Seventh street and 130 feet on Hill street, containing 1500 tons of structural steel, which will be furnished, fabricated and erected by Baker Iron Works.

This firm has but recently completed the steel work for the United Artists-California Petroleum Building and has under way the steel work for the new University of California at Westwood, the Masonic Temple at Glendale, the Los Angeles-First National Bank at Glendale, the Los Angeles-First National Bank at Hollywood and the University of Redlands at Redlands.

Transfer Firm Closes Lease

The Williams Transfer Company has taken a term lease on the brick garage building at 645 South San Pedro street, with an area of approximately 8000 square feet, according to F. H. Greer of the J. W. Lewis Company, real-estate brokers in the wholesale and manufacturing district, who handled the negotiations. John J. Williams, the head of the company, states that the business has expanded so rapidly during the last two years that much larger quarters became imperative. A large fleet of special cars operated by the company makes three round trips daily covering the entire Los Angeles city limits, moving in the neighborhood of 25,000 tons of merchandise per year.

NEW APARTMENT HOUSE OPENS

Structure Largest of Kind in City

Represents Investment of $1,500,000

THE formal opening of the new Langham Apartment Hotel at Seventh street and Normandie, which took place on November 29, gives to Los Angeles, if not to the entire Coast, its largest apartment-house.

The Langham is an eight-story building, including the basement, of 400 rooms and is shaped like the letter E, which form of construction creates two large courts and permits all rooms to have outside exposure. The arrangement also allows ample space for attractive landscaping effects. The walls and partitions of the building are constructed of hollow tile which with metal-sash windows make of the building a fireproof structure.

The foyer and reception rooms of the Langham are decorated in fine taste, the foyer being a replica of the famous Davanzati Palace of Florence, Italy. A noteworthy feature of the furniture in the Langham is the fact that it was specially made in Los Angeles.

The building is owned and operated by the Seventh and Normandie Building Corporation, and according to Godfrey Edwards, president of this company, represents a total investment of more than $1,500,000, which amount includes furniture and equipment.

Charles F. Bloomingdale, formerly manager of the Garden Court Apartments of Hollywood, is managing director of the Langham.

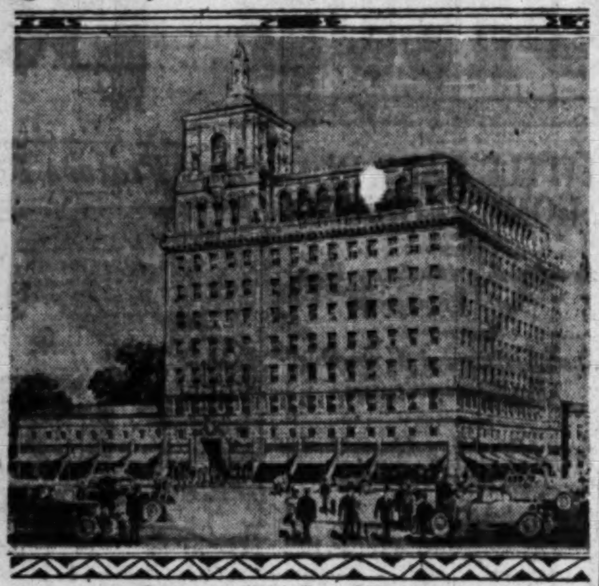
UNIT ANNOUNCED AT PHOENIX

Eight-Story Building to be Erected



Structure Will Cost $500,000

PHOENIX, Dec. 3. (Exclusive)—The Security Improvement Company plans to erect a $500,000 eight-story structure at Central avenue and Van Buren street, on the northern edge of the present business district, and just north of the new Hotel San Carlos.

The corporation has been formed by a group of Phoenix and eastern capitalists, headed by Dwight B. Heard of this city. Plans are by Curlett & Beelman, Union Bank Building, Los Angeles.

The material will be reinforced concrete, fully fireproofed. Included will be 174 offices, with stores on the ground floor and with a restaurant and garden on the roof. The main building will be 120x137½ feet, with a one-story extension to the southward, on Central avenue, 77x137½, with walls to carry up to eight stories at need. This will give a solid business frontage on Central avenue between Monroe and Van Buren, covering the eastern side of the Central school block, east of the Phoenix Federal Building.

Safety Sought in Oil Trade

In no branch of Southern California business activity is the slogan "safety first" finding warmer response than in the oil industry, it is declared by John A. Yerkes, general manager of the Economy Pump and Oil Tool Co., here.

Last year 250,000 [illegible] ifornia's industries were injured. This, coupled with the fact that in the twelve-month period, 800 working years and $2,000,000 cash were also lost through mishaps, indicates the problem's magnitude and supplies the reason why oil executives have been devoting time to accident preventive measures, Yerkes declared.

The new golf course of twenty-seven holes, recently opened on the estate of Duc de Gamont at Vallieres, France, is said to be the finest course in the world—not excepting Scotland's famous links.

"UNIVERSITY UNIT"—VIEWPARK

Now Open!

This unit, containing the highest elevation of "Viewpark," as well as the community playground—Monteith Park—is named in honor of the great University of Southern California, and of the many members of its faculty, alumni and student body that live in "Viewpark."

Home-sites—60—75 to 90 Foot Frontage
$2,500—$3,000 up to $5,500 for Big Corners

From the large home-sites of University Unit at the highest elevation of all "Viewpark" a view of Los Angeles and environs including Beverly Hills, Hollywood, the Verdugo Hills, Mt. Baldy, San Gorgonio, and San Jacinto Mountains may be obtained.

Careful restrictions protect the view from each home-site and insure architecture in keeping with the beauty of surrounding homes.

Monteith Park, the community playground of "Viewpark" is now being developed and beautified with trees, flowers, shrubs and walks, almost in the center of University Unit.

University Unit will have a community shopping center limited to 5 business sites and so located as to be convenient to all "Viewpark." Store construction must conform to the architecture of the project.

The high class improvements that mark other units of "Viewpark" are almost completely installed in University Unit, including the ornamental electroliers and underground conduits. These improvements are installed without assessment to purchasers.

The Growth of a Great University

From an enrollment of 55 students in 1880, the year it was founded, to an enrollment of 14,057 students today, from one small building then to a $4,500,000 educational plant now—that is the amazing story of the growth of the University of Southern California.

20-Year Struggle

For 20 years this now mighty seat of learning struggled forward. In 1900 it had but 538 students. For the following 20 years growth came slowly, but foundation stones of policies as solid as granite were being laid. In 1910 the enrollment was only 1,661 and in 1920 only 5,379.

Then Los Angeles and Southern California generally awoke to the institution's importance and recognized its destiny.

Seven years of astounding growth that made the University of Southern California the "Columbia of the West" followed, and today it counts 14,057 students, 13 important buildings, two others under construction and a campus of 20 acres, much of which has been recently acquired.

Effect of Growth

And in the process of this growth it has changed the entire character of the district in which it is located. The elevating, intellectual influence of the University has radiated. Families of its students have purchased homes nearby. So also has its faculty. And many of its alumni choose to live convenient to the great educational institution that fitted them for their success in life. And living there they are close to "everything worth while," for like "Columbia," the University of Southern California is in the heart of a great and growing city.

High Class District

These facts account largely for the record breaking sales this summer in "Viewpark," commanding a wide panorama of the city and environs from the eastern slopes of hills only 5 minutes west of the University of Southern California.

"Viewpark" is located just west of the intersection of Angeles Mesa Drive and West Vernon Avenue

Odd Houses Decline as More Conservative Type Rises

Dwelling Illustrated is of Ranch Architecture

Whitewashed Adobe Walls Urged in Residence

BY THEODORE A. KOETZLI

Within the past few years there has been a marked cooling in the public demand for that type of architecture that reveled in tile petticoats, fish spears and beach awnings as adornment for the walls of the small house supposed to be irresistibly appealing to the heart and pocketbook of the tourist.

The little house illustrated today, an example of the extreme opposite, has now a better opportunity for a hearing, and its adaptability to many suburban or small ranch locations will appeal to many who appreciate the unsophisticated and natural.

The architect's comments are as follow:

"Simply built of crude materials, the small house today derives its beauty from its guileless frankness in expressing a shelter from sun and heat. The low lines of its roof, the cool, inviting shadow of the porch, the deep window reveals and brick porch flooring all tend to accentuate this point and add to that early California ranch house flavor which is as much a part of our traditions as our missions, rodeos and Franciscan fathers.

"It is suggested that the walls be built of adobe, roughly plastered and then white-washed. The interiors should be quite simple, plastered walls with a slight sense of texture, but in their natural color. A minimum of trim, while all openings should have a plaster return.

"The floor should be stained a dark brown, then when all is subdued and quiet a note of life and hospitality and joy in living should be struck with the brighest of bright-colored hangings."

The cost of adobe construction is, of course, a variable factor, and this construction is not practical nor advisable unless all the conditions are favorable, i.e., labor skilled in the craft, soil on the site, etc. In such case this little house might readily be built for $3500, or even less. The design was made for the Allied Architects' Association.

Residence Follows Old Prototype

Plans for the above residence were prepared under the auspices of the Los Angeles Architectural Club of the Small House Plan Service, located on the sixth floor of the Metropolitan Building at Fifth and Broadway.

Increases in Building Seen

With actual erection of the Mack Sennett studios in North Hollywood started, an increased activity in home-building operations in North Hollywood and adjacent San Fernando Valley towns is predicted by B. E. Werminghaus, Van Nuys and valley builder of Pacific Ready-Cut Homes.

This stimulated activity has already been felt in an increased number of inquiries from prospective home builders which have been received by the Van Nuys builder during the last three weeks, it is stated.

Tract Starts Seed Planting

A beautification campaign was instituted last week in Glen Oaks with the planting of thousands of flowering plants in the parkways and level free spaces along the residential avenues of this new residential community, according to Guy M. Rush, who is in charge of this development.

Julius Cruse, head gardener for Glen Oaks, has propagated dozens of varieties of ornamental plants from seed in the specially constructed greenhouses at Glen Oaks. These young plants are now being set out following the completion of road construction throughout the tract.

ELECTRIC SERVANT EVOLVED

New Invention Declared Capable of Performing Home Tasks by Telephone

This age is regarded as that of the electrical home, but the present electrical facilities would seem overshadowed by the possibility of the electrical servant, endowed with senses almost human and capable of performing household tasks at an order given orally or over the telephone.

Such a device has already been developed by R. J. Wensley, an eastern electrical engineer. Radio principles and those of thermal and electrical research are included in its construction. While as yet perfected for use only in industrial activities the "electrical man" has reached a point in development wherein its use as a servant in the home is clearly forshadowed.

The apparatus as at present developed is capable of performing a number of tasks involving not too complicated a sequence of operations. The housewife, suddenly concerned over the state of the home furnace fire, or food cooking on the stove, gives her number and the home phone bell is answered by a relay which actuates the mechanism lifting the phone receiver.

By a combination of oral sounds she may order those things which she wishes done, receive a report from the automator and close the circuit by a code sound which returns the automaton to the "stand-by" position.

The possibilities inherent in the device would seem almost unlimited. There is nothing of the fantastic in its conception; no Frankenstein monster possessed of a semi-human mind. Electrical vocal and thermal principles are the only ones used in its governance and the only intelligence, or soul, possessed is that of the person who gives it its orders.

Sales Manager Given Post as Vice-President

H. H. Townsend, general manager of sales for the J. B. Ransom Corporation, has been elected vice-president and director of the community-development concern, according to an announcement made yesterday by President J. B. Ransom.

H.H. TOWNSEND

The elevation of Townsend to the vice-presidency and directorship comes as a fitting recognition of his great organization ability and remarkable sales record in promoting the various Ransom Corporation projects on Los Angeles' East Side, and principally Montebello Park, which is now well into the $6,000,000 of sales, Ransom declared.

Townsend will continue to act as general manager of sales for Montebello Park, the industrial city of Bandini, the new Montebello Park Golf Club property, Gainsborough Heath in San Marino and all other new properties of the Ransom corporation.

Improvement of Tract Begun

The program of improvement work in the Hollywood Beverly Highlands residential tract controlled by the Frank Meline Company, Sunset Boulevard in the 8600 block, was started last week, according to James A. Appleby, general sales manager for the west side subdivision.

The improvements which will cost in excess of $15,000, are being installed by the Eltinge T. Brown Construction Company and are expected to be completed within ten months. Improvements will include gas and electricity, telephones and other utilities. Although the Hollywood Beverly Highalnds tract will not be opened to the public until Monday, the 12th inst., there were six reservations made last week. Appleby emphasizes that there are only sixty-three residential sites available in the first unit.

School Offers Realty Course

ONTARIO, Dec. 3. (Exclusive)—Arrangements have been completed for establishing a course in real estate appraisals at Chaffey Union High School for members of Ontario Realty Board and others wishing to take advantage of the instruction.

Frank C. Coleridge, field secretary of the California Real Estate Association, and also affiliated with the University of California, has been in Ontario assisting the educational committee of the Realty Board, of which James R. Austin is chairman, in establishing the course.

"TIMES" IDEAL HOME NOW IN INTERESTING STAGES

Visitors to the Los Angeles Times demonstration home in Miramar Estates declare that the dwelling is now in one of its most interesting stages of contruction and hundreds of prospective home owners and home builders are inspecting the model dwelling every Sunday. All rooms on the lower, main and upper floors are partitioned and the rough plumbing, water lines and electrical conduits were completed yesterday.

To acquaint people of the Southland with the progress of the home in its construction program, a graphic drawing of the demonstration dwelling will be made by Charles H. Owens, Times staff artist, and will appear next Sunday in the real-estate and development section of The Times.

Real Estate and Building Law

[This department, which is conducted through the courtesy of the Legal Department of the W. Ross Campbell Company, is at the service of Times readers. Questions, however, should be addressed to the Publicity Department of the above-mentioned firm at its offices at 712 South Spring street and not to The Times.—Editor's note.]

Question: Man and wife hold property as joint tenants. Upon his death what interest do children of former marriage acquire in absence of will? If there is a will must a stipulated amount be mentioned?

Answer: The children acquire no interest at all. Property held in joint tenancy passes to the survivor upon the death of the other joint tenant. Property held in joint tenancy cannot be disposed of by will.

Q.: I am constructing a building that is on the line. My neighbor objects to me using his property for scaffold. Could I hang scaffold on my roof, although it would still be over his property?

A.: If the owner of the adjoining property objects to the use of his property for your construction work, your use of a hanging scaffold does not solve the difficulty. He could prevent it. You should make proper arrangements before building.

Q.: If I build house now and it is finished in ninety days, would I have to pay taxes on it this year? When would taxes commence?

A.: If construction were started on building at this time the assessor will make assessment as the condition exists on first Monday in March, 1928, as a basis for 1928-1929 taxes. There is no tax on the improvement for 1927-28. Taxes are levied and become a lien as of the first Monday in March of each year.

Q.: Tenant is three months in arrears in rent. Father and daughter are employed. How should I proceed to collect rent or get possession of premises?

A.: The landlord may sue for the rent in arrears and the monthly rent as it accrues. Attachment of wages may be had, as rent is a necessary of life under code exemptions. To obtain possession, notices to pay rent or quit should be given, followed by unlawful detainer action if necessary. Other required steps and the question of who is liable, the father or daughter, depend upon the terms of the agreement and other facts.

MANY VISIT HOMES SHOW

That the public is vitally interested in home architecture and home construction has been clearly demonstrated during the past week at the newly opened Lincoln Gallery of Homes, according to Frank Frerichs, sales director of the Lincoln Mortgage Company, which is sponsoring the exhibit.

He states that hundreds of people visited this exposition of architectural sketches and floor plans during the week, and showed marked interest in th veuiaa ojAede clared(aI.seu est in the various types of architectural designs displayed. No small interest was shown in the miniature models of Lincoln Homes which have been built on a small scale to duplicate in every way the actual home as it will appear when constructed.

Many features of interest to prospective builders have been incorporated in the exposition, including the exterior sketches and interior drawings in full color.

All of the architectural renderings are in the original form and are representative of nearly every type of residence adaptable to Southland construction, including English, Spanish, Mediterranean, Italian, Colonial, Norman-French, and English Norman architecture.

Prospects for 1928 Seen as Greatest Ever

The year 1928 will bring the western foothill area of Los Angeles the greatest activity, both in improvements and sales, this district has ever experienced.

This was the opinion of the Janss Investment Company, announced this week by Harold Janss.

The improvement of the University of California campus at Westwood Hills, Mr. Janss says, will be responsible to a major extent. Building and sales figures for the year 1927 have already shown it to be the most successful on record for Westwood Hills—particularly due to improvement gains shown during the last several months, during which period construction has doubled over last year.

This is only a forerunner, in the opinion of the Janss organization, to the major improvement compaign which should get under way immediately following the holidays.

Board Building Action Planned

Plans for the new administration and club building of the Los Angeles Realty Board have been practically completed, and arrangements for its immediate erection are being perfected, board officials announced last week.

President Harry H. Culver, under whose direction the funds for the building were raised during September, will head the committee who will supervise the construction. Serving with him will be president-elect Frank H. Brooks, W. Ross Campbell, Harold K. Huntsberger and N. J. Cordary.

HILLSIDE HOMES TO BE DRAWN

Special Designs Planned for Subdivision

Architects Inspect Plans

Roy S. Price and Robert B. Stacy-Judd, architects, and Frank Hogan of Hogan Finance and Mortgage Company.

ROBERT B. STACY-JUDD has been engaged as one of several architects to design for Beverlyridge Estates homes especially adapted to hillside architecture, according to John D. Beyer of Beyer & Provencher Company, sales managers for Hogan, Finance and Mortgage Company of Pasadena, owners of the estates.

"Hillside homes are becoming more and more popular in Southern California," said Mr. Beyer, "and the architects selected by the Hogan Finance and Mortgage Company are particularly qualified by many years' experience in building this type of home."

Mr. Stacy-Judd, commenting on the planning of Beverlyridge, said, "In Europe and Asia development of hillside homesites has been gong on for ages, and has attained a remarkable degree of efficiency. The Riviera, the Swiss resorts, the better class residential centers of China and Japan, as well as Scotland, Germany and Italy, afford notable examples. Beverlyridge Estates is most favorably located for the highest type of hillside architecture. Each estate is so situated as not to impair the scenery from any other estate on the property, so that every home will always have a marvelous view."

LITTLE CARE IN HOME REQUIRED

Comfortable One-Story Plan Easily Maintained

Design Awarded Honorable Mention in Contest

Long, Rambling Lines Mark Exterior Appearance

BY L. PORTER MOORE

President Home Owners Institute, Inc.

This attractive and practical one-story Spanish design is one winning honorable mention in the recent nation-wide Lehigh Portland Cement Company home competition, conducted through the Architectural Forum. The architect is Harry L. Wagner of Kansas City.

The exterior has the long, rambling lines usual in the homes of old Spain and losing nothing by their transplanting to American soil. This length of line is carried out in the front facade by the walls which at one side partly inclose the terrace and on the other flank the entrance doorway.

The reveals in which the doorway and the steel casement windows are inset lend a feeling of solidity to the walls in entire keeping with the architectural style. This is accented by the other Spanish characteristics, which include the rather flat roof covered with tiles, the heavy, flat-topped chimney, the round attic ventilators and the fountain in the terrace wall.

This latter item is one whose worth will be appreciated on those warm summer evenings, when the tinkling of a dripping stream lends a cooling note of its own to the pleasant atmosphere of the greenery-enshrouded terrace. The fountain is indicated in the plan by numeral 8.

The interior of the home has those advantages of ease in housekeeping work and maintenance consequent upon one-story design, and eliminates the often-heard complaint about "running up and down stairs." The bedrooms are both well ventilated by windows on two sides and will never lack for light or air at any time of the year.

Closets are ample in size and numerous. Two are provided in the hall, and one, indicated on the plan by numeral 1, is cedar-lined.

The kitchen is efficiently laid out for the quick performance of household tasks and the preparation of meals. The drainboard sink is placed under the window, where a pleasant outlook while working there is always assured. A ventilating fan, indicated on the plan by numeral 4, is located in the wall, and will remove any unpleasant warmth or cooking odors.

An electric refrigerator, installed in the entry where steps lead down to the bright and airy cellar, is indicated in the plan by numeral 5.

The hall is provided with a telephone cabinet. The indicating numeral here is 6. Other conveniences recommended by Home Owners' Institute and corresponding to keyed numerals on the plan are: 2, clothes chute; 3, decorative etched glass medicine cabinet in the bathroom; 7, studio type steel casement window in living-room.

Outline of recommended specifications follows:

Masonry—Concrete footings under all walls, as shown on drawings. All foundation walls to be poured concrete or concrete block made with Portland cement. Chimney of common brick, all flues lined. Fireplace of selected brick; provide ash dump with clean-out door.

Incinerator—Built-in incinerator with receiving hopper door located in or near the kitchen for disposal of garbage and trash.

Carpentry—All framing timber shall be well seasoned and free from large knots, either Douglas fir or yellow pine. California white pine for exterior mill work and interior trim; oak floors, steel bridging for floor joists. Interior doors and built-in kitchen cabinet as required in detailed specifications.

Hardware—Owner shall furnish all finishing hardware for doors and windows, for closets and casework. The contractor will furnish a correct list of hardware and is to put it on in a careful, workmanlike manner. All hardware on exterior openings to be of brass or bronze.

Casement windows—Steel casement windows used throughout.

Plastering and lathing—Three-coat work over metal lath is recommended. A less expensive job may be obtained through the use of one-half inch of plaster over flat rib expanded metal lath or even wood lath. We suggest you obtain alternate bids on metal lath and wood lath.

Metal work—Gutters, rain pipes, valleys and flashings to be sixteen-ounce copper.

Roofing—Roof of concrete tile or copperclad, asbestos or slate-surfaced shingles.

Painting—Strictly pure white lead and linseed oil in proper proportion with zinc oxide where desired or a good grade of ready-mixed paint may be used. Interior trim to receive two good coats of flat paint and one coat of flat enamel. Finished floors to be varnished or waxed throughout as directed.

Electrical work—Complete system of electric wiring from meter to all outlets, including panel boards, junction boxes and all other fittings. The installation must be in accordance with the rules and regulations of the National Board of Fire Underwriters.

Plumbing—A complete system and fixtures ready to use shall be provided as shown on plans and in accordance with local regulations. Brass piping for hot and cold water lines. Gas or coal-fired hot-water heater.

Tile work—Tile floor and wainscot in bathroom, with built-in china accessories.

Insulation—Throughout with insulating building board (or insulating quilting if preferred,) used as plaster base on second floor ceiling operates as roof insulation.

STIMULUS SHOWN IN LUMBER INDUSTRY

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3. (Exclusive) The lumber industry last week took the lead over corresponding week last year, says the National Lumber Manufacturers' Association, reviewing reports from 461 of the leading lumber mills of the country. Thirty-six fewer reporting mills had orders in excess of last year's total, and production and shipments were so nearly the same in the reports as to show that the preceding week there were apparently real increases in all three factors, with statistically evident increase in new business.

FOUNDATION FOR GREAT STAGES LAID

Work to Start on Eighteen Buildings on Sennett Lot at Studio City

With concrete foundations for two immense stages, 110 by 200 feet, mill and storage buildings completed and work on the remaining eighteen buildings for the Mack Sennett plant at Studio City to start the coming week, Supervising Architect Harold Cross announced yesterday that the huge production plant would be finished well within the time limit.

The movement of the motion-picture studios out Ventura Boulevard, which was augmented during the week by the announcement of the Christie Film Company that it had purchased thirty acres at Studio City adjoining the Sennett production plant, was given further impetus when Charles H. Christie announced yesterday that production of pictures on the new site and improvement of the property would begin the coming week. Christie stated that he planned the eventual centering of his company's entire film activities at Studio City.

Special Furnace Being Completed

Bearing out the oft-repeated assertion that "What the West can use the West can make," and showing the confidence of western manufacturers in production machinery manufactured this side of the Rockies, is an order just received by the James H. Knapp Company, Inc., Central Manufacturing District, for what will be the only industrial furnace unit of its kind in operation on the Pacific Coast, according to James H. Knapp, president of the firm.

This unit, consisting of connected hardening and tempering furnaces, is being made for the Edwin L. Stanton Company, Los Angeles, manufacturers of automobile axles, and will be one of the largest electrical-furnace installations ever made in the West.

BEAR VALLEY HOTEL

Structure Involves $305,000

THE Bear Valley Hotel, Inc., are making final announcements for the 150-room hotel now being constructed at a cost of $305,000, which will be ready for occupancy on or about May 15, at Pine Knot, Big Bear Lake.

In addition Bear Valley Hotel, Inc., has purchased the adjoining Blue Bird Lodge, consisting of twenty-four cabins, and will be conducted under the same management.

The hotel will have 150 rooms including two bridal suites, all strictly modern including baths, showers, toilet and lavatory. A swimming pool, capacity of 350, will be open both in winter and in summer. A bowling alley, pool and billiard room, three dining-rooms, banquet hall, roof garden, garage and repair shop for the accommodation of guests, and eight store rooms representing every possible need for our guests are included. A broadcasting station will also be erected.

The construction of the building will start immediately unless weather conditions will not permit, and will be finished in early spring.

The Bear Valley Hotel, Inc., has inaugurated a co-operative plan for their employees, under which they are being allotted 25 per cent of the net earnings of the corporation in addition to their salaries. The bonus will be awarded quarterly, according to George A. Baker, Jr., general manager of the corporation.

Luncheon to Be Given Tomorrow

With a program dedicated to those included in the new associate membership classification of the Los Angeles Realty Board, the regular semimonthly luncheon meeting of the board will be held in the music room of the Biltmore tomorrow.

Bruce Baxter, member of the faculty of the University of Southern California, will be the principal speaker, and a short talk will be given by Mason Case, vice-president of the board.

MEMBERSHIP GAIN SOUGHT

Local Realty Board Drives Throughout State to Bolster Broke Organization

Plans now being carried forward by the California Real Estate Association to conduct membership campaigns in connection with local real-estate boards throughout California will materially increase the membership of the State organization, according to announcement made by Hal G. Hotchkiss, president-elect of the association.

Mr. Hotchkiss, who takes over the reins of the association January 7, next, has worked out a method by which local real-estate boards can, at the option of their own members, enlist in the membership drive. It is planned to have the boards select eligible real-estate brokers in their cities, and through a campaign directed from the State offices, enroll these in the local organizations. Members enrolling in their local realty boards automatically become members of the State and national associations.

At present there are more than 18,000 persons holding brokers' licenses in California. The membership of the organization is more than 4000, although a recent statement from State Real Estate Commissioner Stephen Barnson to the effect that the members of the association are doing 60 per cent of the real-estate business in California reveals the fact that many of the broker's licenses are inactive.

With the drive for new members starting next January, it is expected to have the greater part of the active real-estate men and women in the State in the organization.

Coupled with the membership drive for new brokers will be a drive to obtain property owners as associate members of the local boards. This move, according to advices received from the national association headquarters in Chicago, will be nationwide, with Harry H. Culver, Los Angeles realtor, heading the national committee on the associate membership work.

Board Plans Texas Flight for January

Headed by President Harry H. Culver, a delegation from the Los Angeles Realty Board will fly to Houston, Tex., for the annual midwinter meeting of the National Association of Real Estate Boards in January, according to plans now under consideration.

President Culver, who is an enthusiastic supporter of commercial aviation, announced yesterday that if satisfactory arrangements could be made, at least one and possibly two twelve-passenger planes would be obtained for the trip.

The flying delegation will comprise only a small part of representatives of the Los Angeles board who will attend the meeting, indications being that this city will have one of the largest registrations at the convention. A committee composed of Vice-president Mason Case, and R. M Ashmun and Clarence Urban, directors, has been appointed to obtain reservations, which will be made through the local realty board office.

Members of the Houston board are planning an extensive entertainment program, and important current problems pertaining to real estate will be discussed by nationally known speakers. The meeting convenes Wednesday, January 25, and will continue three days.

BEST INDUSTRY YEAR FORESEEN

Pay Roll of $450,000,000 for 6300 Concerns

Plants Adjacent to City Included in Data

Total is Gain of 10 Per Cent Over Last Year

With an estimated $450,000,000 pay roll in approximately 6300 industries here, Los Angeles, by the end of 1927, will have credited to her the most successful year in the history of her development, according to the belief expressed in an exhaustive survey of local conditions prepared for the Guaranty Building and Loan Association.

The figure above, which for the purposes of the survey embraced wages paid in plants adjacent to this city, part of her commercial structure, such as Torrance, Vernon, Huntington Park and the harbor strip, represents an increase of about 10 per cent over the total for 1926. The pay roll for the year 1924 in the principal industries here amounted to $318,000,000, it was pointed out, while that of 1925 was about $350,000,000, and 1926 approximately $400,000,000.

Establishment of new industrial plants and expansion of old ones every year have been primarily responsible for the constant and steady growth of Los Angeles' wage rosters. It has been demonstrated that the expansion item alone, for the past several years, has kept pace with the new plant growth, the older manufacturers in the field having been quite as alert as the newcomers to the local trade opportunities.

NEW PLANT PROJECTS

However, the most spectacular development during 1927 was in the line of new plant establishment. During the past eleven months, one national concern, the Sears-Roebuck organization, has built, and three international concerns, the Ford Motor Company, the B. F. Goodrich Rubber Company and the Firestone Rubber Company are building. Before the end of this year it is highly probable that the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company and the General Motors Corporation, both of which have options on manufacturing sites here, will have definitely decided to establish plants in Los Angeles.

So far the Sears-Roebuck Company is the only one of the "Big Six" actually in operation. It has been estimated, however, that when all of them reach the production stage they will provide employment for 20,550 men capable of supporting a population of more than 100,000 persons.

Many major industrial operations, launched in 1926, reached fruition this year and resulted in tremendous additions to the city's pay roll. Notable among them was the removal to Torrance by the Columbia Steel Corporation of the plant of the Pacific Sheet Steel Company from South San Francisco. It involved a cost of $2,000,000 and included the removal and erection in Torrance of six rolling mills and the construction of a new open-hearth furnace.

FACTORIES PROGRESS

The Ford Motor Company is well along with the erection of its $3,000,000, forty-acre plant at the harbor; the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company added another $500,000 factory unit this year, bringing the daily capacity up to 8000 tires and 10,000 tubes; the American Can Company has practically completed its $1,500,000 expansion, as has also the Union Iron Works on its new thirty-acre plant in the Laguna-Bell district, while the Shell Oil Company, which acquired a 383-acre tract in 1926, is nearing completion of its new $6,000,000 refinery.

These are only a few of the largest operations, launched or completed in 1927, and do not take into account the multitude of smaller companies which established at the rate of about one a day throughout the year.

It is not only in the matter of per capita wealth invested in industry that Los Angeles city and county take a leading position, but also income here and in Southern California generally has been built up to a point where it is far in excess of the average income for the United States, a study of recent economic research reports reveal.

Industry Boon to Small Towns

Industrial activities in and near the port of Los Angeles are having very marked influence on the growth of the adjacent small towns. Compton alone now boasts thirty-one factories, a $1,000,000 high school, many grade schools, fine churches, three large banks and the claim of being one of the two fastest-growing small cities in Southern California.

A thirty-two-foot pavement has been completed on Central avenue from Los Angeles to T. J. Nestor's West Compton tract, and the county is now working on the west end of a forty foot strip on the eighty foot Riverside-Redondo Boulevard, which extends from Redondo to Atlantic Boulevard. The completion of the pavement on these two main highways has given the property in the West Compton tract an added value, it is said.

Height-Limit Building Sells for $4,000,000

A transaction, which sets a new record for the largest single cash deal in the history of Los Angeles real-estate circles, was announced last week with the purchase of the Sun Finance Building at Sixth and Olive streets by the Los Angeles Income Properties, Inc. The Sun Realty Company were the sellers. The limit-height structure involved in the $4,000,000 transaction, is shown with inserts of Rolden Lee Borden (upper) and Isadore Eisner, presidents of the Los Angeles Income Properties, Inc., and the Sun Realty Company, respectively. Robert Baker, real-estate broker, with offices in the Sun Finance Building, represented both parties in the transaction.

INDUSTRY EXPANSION SEEN

Impetus Expected to be Given Valley Movement With Organization of Chamber Branch

Industrial expansion in the San Fernando Valley is expected to follow the organization of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce branch for the district, which has almost the requisite number of names for recognition, it is stated.

A plea for an industrial survey of the valley, made before the manufacturing and industries committee recently by Victor Girard, is expected to bear fruit as soon as the branch chamber is established at Van Nuys so that economic experts may work out of that office in gathering their data, chamber officials state.

The selection of sites for motion-picture studios in the district has given impetus to the campaign for valley industries, according to Victor Girard, who is a community builder in the west end and has founded the town site of Girard and subdivided Walnut Acre Farms close by.

"The movement to spread out our industries in units over a wider area than at present is being recognized as a necessary method of providing pay rolls for persons who are seeking homes in the suburbs. Traffic congestion in the closely settled city areas makes travel by auto or by street car uncertain and workers cannot ride long distances—and be tardy, to boot—and expect to hold their jobs.

"The modern idea is to plant an industry on an inexpensive piece of ground in a neighborhood where workmen can buy land or homes at advantageous prices and terms and so form an industrial community with homes within walking distance. These units can be built along a railroad line or highway for miles and thus give employees good homes near by.

"The San Fernando Valley is particularly adapted to this kind of development because of its wide, level area, its comparatively low land prices, its four lines of railway and its Aqueduct water and plentiful electric power. I expect to see a great industrial growth in the district during the next few years, with a great influx of population."

Concern Wins Contracts for Large Cranes

Declared to be one of the largest single orders for traveling electric cranes ever placed in the West, the Doheny Stone Drill Company has just announced the awarding of the contract for five Shepard cranes to the Union Iron Works of California in Los Angeles.

The contract calls for three ten-ton transfer cranes, one ten-ton double-girder crane and one five-ton double-girder crane. All of these cranes have a span of sixty feet and are cage controlled, the two double-girder cranes being featured as having the control cages built in the center of the cranes, thus affording better visibility for the operators.

These new traveling electric cranes will be installed in the new plant of the Doheny Stone Drill Company near Torrance and will provide an area of 72,000 square feet under the crane ways.

Rapid Progress Made on Mills

W. S. Trueblood, general superintendent in charge of milling operations for the Monolith Portland Cement and Monolith Midwest companies, returned from a three weeks' trip to Laramie, Wyo., last week with the report that rapid progress is being made on the construction of the new Monolith mills there.

He said the 150-foot concrete stack has been completed and pouring of cement for the giant silo and other mill units is in full swing. When the new mill is put in operation Mr. Trueblood said he expected to divide his time about equally between Monolith, Laramie and the general offices in Los Angeles, keeping in constant touch with activities throughout the entire western territory.

Company Cites Industrial Jobs

Increasing activity in industrial building is indicated by contracts for steel frame industrial buildings which have been awarded to the Union Iron Works of California within the last few weeks.

These contracts include a steel frame, corrugated steel covered mine warehouse building for the Riverside Portland Cement Company; three steel frame boiler houses for the Union Oil Company at Santa Fe Springs; a steel-frame powerhouse for the Union Pacific Railroad at Las Vegas, Nev.; steel frame for the main garage building of the Southern California Edison Company on South Avenue 21, and the steel for the addition being built to the Sperry Flour Company plant in the Central Manufacturing District.

The Union Iron Works is also manufacturing for the Gay Engineering Company a lever-operated twenty-four-foot span traveling crane, equipped with Shepard electric hoist, to be placed in the plant of the Union Ice Company at Oceanside.

Building to Be Mercantile Unit

HANFORD, Dec. 3. (Exclusive)—One of the largest store buildings in this city, the MacFarlane Building on Seventh street, has been leased by Montgomery Ward & Co., and the interior is being entirely remodeled.

The company has a large store and building in Oakland, but this is the second of its branches it has established in the San Joaquin Valley, the first being at Modesto. It is reported that it intends ultimately to establish a chain of stores through the valley.

ATTRACTIVE HOMES AT ATTRACTIVE PRICES

If you are in the market for a beautiful, nicely constructed small home of five rooms and bath, with every modern convenience, and if you wish to purchase a home in which you would be proud to live, we are offering a few very attractive and desirable houses, which will be sold at once at prices which, in our opinion, can not be duplicated in the city of Los Angeles.

These houses are located just off Western avenue on open, high ground which commands an excellent view. They are well situated within a couple of blocks of a bank, suburban shopping center, and grammar and junior high schools.

If you possessed enough money to pay all cash for a house and lot, you could not duplicate what we have to offer at the price.

These houses will be purchased by people who realize the value of good construction and beautiful location with every modern convenience. They will not be on the market long, and if you are desirous of getting more than 100 cents for your dollar, you should come and see these places at once.

We are offering these few homes at a real sacrifice and suggest that before you come to see them that you look at other values, so that you will realize we are telling the truth. Open for inspection beginning Sunday. 2052 WEST 70TH ST.

UNIQUE SPANISH RESIDENCE In Beverly Hills Distinctive Upper Roxbury Circle

Stepping from your car at a dignified motor entrance one enters a huge patio and sheltered cloister, with fountain in the center. Many hanging baskets of ferns and greenery, along with well selected pottery, gives a splendid atmosphere.

Entering the reception hall, the woodwork is antiqued to resemble that of driftwood, but sighlighted with a touch of gold leaf and pastel colorings.

Here one's eye is attracted to a pair of wrought iron grills leading into one of the most beautiful drawing rooms ever created, the fixtures in this room costing almost as much as jewelry, the fireplace is a masterpiece, the floors are of one inch plank ribbon grained tobacco mahogany, doweled down.

The doors leading to the dining room are of 3-inch solid mahogany, hand carved, this room being extremely large for entertaining purposes.

The breakfast room is a dream, carried out in rose, the ceiling is a hand molded replica of a large tea rose, with a frieze of hand decorated rosettes.

The [illegible] room is very cosy and has a delightful fireplace. Leaded glass doors lead out to a sunken garden and gold-fish pond.

The downstairs lavatory and rest room is large enough to accommodate a Chaise lounge, occasional chair, console table, bench and mirror.

The master bedroom has a sunken bath with fernery and is tiled in peachbloom colored tile.

The three other charming bedrooms all have a view of Mt. Baldy, Catalina Island, as well as overlooking Los Angeles.

Other features such as electric control for opening and closing garage doors, electric refrigeration, attractive kitchen and butler's pantry that is large enough, three servants' rooms, and chauffeur's quarters. Laundry in the garage.

Fish ponds, bird aviary, pergola, etc.

For those who contemplate the purchase of a well built home of exquisite taste, I cordially invite your inspection.

MONEY WANTED—
Real Estate, Collaterals —76

REFER THIS TO YOUR BANKER!

Ask his advice. When he tells you the earning promises as here outlined are as represented—investigate my standing as head of one of the biggest and most successful automobile distributing companies in Southern California, with a high rating in Los Angeles business circles.

Here's My Proposition

I intend to establish a separate department to handle the paper on sales made by my own company; paper that can be liquidated on short notice, and in the handling of which, along with the insurance, there is immense profit. In other words, the entire financial transactions involved in automobile selling will be taken care of under one roof.

This will require an investment of $100,000, and I shall expect 50 per cent of the profits. A proposition involving less money or less profit will not interest me.

If you have the money, investigate the STABILITY and EARNINGS of the automobile finance business; then have a talk with me. I will show you an opportunity to make more money than offered by any other investment. Address B. box 66. Times Office.

BY HOWARD C. KEGLEY

The difficulties that beset the operator who tries to recomplete a comparatively shallow well in a deeper zone are well illustrated by the experience of the California Eastern Oil Company at Signal Hill in its Maaser No. 1 well.

This well originally was on production at about 5250 feet, but was killed to carry down to the deep zone which had been the secret of success of half a dozen 3000 to 4000 barrel wells. The well was drilled to a total of 6340 feet—one of the deepest in the field, and it was planned to set an oil string. Then the four and one-quarter-inch pipe was stuck in the hole at about 5550 feet, and it was necessary to cement it through perforations, and run a liner to the bottom.

The initial rate of production of the well was reported variously, but yesterday the well was doing about 1300 barrels gross production a day, with a cut of 65 per cent. The gas production is 2,000,000 cubic feet a day, which is considerably above the average yield.

Jergins Well Good

A contrast to the Maaser No. 1 is the Jackson No. 2 of the Jergins Trust, which is on production for the first time, at about 5800 feet, and is producing about 2500 barrels a day—the best well that has been completed in the deep zone for about a month. The oil is perfectly clean, and shows a gravity of 31.1 deg.

This is the first deep sand well to be completed by the Jergin syndicate, which, however, has several other wells drilling and contemplated.

Building Rig

The Carpenter well in the Potrero district has its derrick over the hole of the old Julian-Cypress No. 1 well just about completed, and should be moving in machinery and equipment some time this week. The hole was abandoned at 5050 feet, and the Carpenter syndicate figures it will be worth while to make a few hundred feet more of hole to see what the prospects may be of picking up the Associated-Cypress sand.

Son Suspends Work

The Shoreline well which Charles A. Son and Joe Crall are drilling south and east of Santa Ana, has been suspended, at about 3600 feet, according to field reports. No definite showings were found in the well, although it is understood that the general geological conditions were favorable.

May be Higher

The Associated Oil Company's Patterson No. 1 well in the Rivera district is drilling ahead at about 3500 feet, and although there have been no actual showings reported, persons interested in the district are inclined to feel encouraged over the report that the well seems to be higher on the structure than previous tests in that vicinity.

Sign Ventura Lease

Five Ventura citizens are interested in an oil lease of Seacliff land signed recently. The tract is thirty-eight acres lying just north of La Conchita subdivision. Its owners are Milton and William Ramelli, Robert Georyeson, Harry Waud and Richard Langdon. The lease, made by an individual, is said to be for one of the major oil companies to which it soon will be assigned.

SIGNAL PLEA REFERRED

A request for the installation of traffic signals at the intersection of Twenty-fourth street and Vermont avenue was referred by the Council yesterday to the Traffic and Street-lighting Committee.

PAVING RECOMMENDED

The improvement of Ninetieth street between Halldale and Western avenues has been recommended by the Public Works Committee.

ESTATE ROW WITH BANK ADJUSTED

Foley Company Trustees Compromise on Funds Held by Creditor

By a compromise entered into yesterday between the trustees of the bankrupt estate of E. Y. Foley Co., Fresno grape and raisin shippers, and officials of the Pacific Southwest Trust and Savings Bank, on behalf of the former Pacific Southwest Bank, the suit of the trustees against the bank for $127,000, asserted to have belonged to the estate, was settled for $97,388.

A verdict was given by United States District Judge McCormick against the bank four years ago, but the case was carried to the United States Supreme Court. It was asserted that the bank wrongfuly withheld the money from the bankrupt estate, whereas the bank asserted that certain moneys had been advanced to the Foley company to avoid bankruptcy, and this was deducted.

A meeting of all the creditors of the estate was recently held in Fresno where it was decided without dissent to accept the compromise. The compromise was carried through between Theodore M. Stuart, attorney for the estate, and the bank officials. The settlement was returned yesterday to Judge McCormick, who signed it. F. M. Withers, a creditor, who protested against the settlement, was denied a hearing on the ground that he did not protest at the creditors' meeting in Fresno.

Barber Dies in Spite of Shift in Death Plan

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent

LONG BEACH, Dec. 3.—An attempted suicide by gas led to death by burns, according to police, when Clarence Martin, 23 years of age, a barber, died at Seaside Hospital at 1:30 p.m. today. Financial difficulties are believed to have prompted Martin's attempt to end his life.

He told attaches of the hospital that when he rented a room at 555 East Seaside Boulevard Friday night, it was with a firm resolve to end his life. Accordingly he turned on the gas, but lost his nerve and turned off the jet before he lost consciousness. Later, police believe, he lighted a cigarette and a terrific explosion followed. The windows and door of the room were blown out and Martin was terribly burned. He is said to have had a wife living at Gardena.

New Play Place for Boys Opens

Saturday morning chores around the house were left undone when boys in the vicinity of Third and Oxford streets attended a big celebration and dedication exercises marking the formal opening of a playground for boys of that neighborhood.

The playground was established through the efforts of the Wilshire Optimists' Club, which obtained the lease and financed the project. "Skinnay" and "Freckles" and "Shanks" and all others in the neighborhood who could get away were at the informal exercises. J. C. Pollard will be in charge and the grounds will be open to the boys every afternoon and all day Saturday.

DATE SET FOR BENEFIT

Culver City Event for Costigan Family to Be on 22nd Inst.

Culver City citizens who are giving a benefit for the family of their late Chief of Police, Al F. Costigan, have selected the 22nd inst. as the date. The affair will be in the Culver City Stadium.

Aside from the thirty rounds of boxing and the twelve rounds of exhibition bouts, other entertainment will be provided. Through the Hal Roach, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Cecil B. De Mille studios many screen players will appear.

The committee in charge, headed by Frank Kerwin, has obtained the backing of all the civic organizations in Culver City and of many in Los Angeles. The affair also is being sponsored by the Culver City American Legion Post, No. 46.

CHARLES J. WORDEN EXPLAINS MISTAKE

Accounts of the arrest of Charles A. Worden, 623 South Alvarado street, with two others, charged with selling stock in violation of the Corporate Securities Act, have caused embarrassment to Charles J. Worden of 109 North Orange Grove avenue, Pasadena, he reports. The similarity in names caused people who know Worden to think he was the one in custody. He says, much to his annoyance and discomfort. He is not related to the Charles A. Worden involved in asserted illegal stock deals, the Pasadena Worden declares.

SOROPTIMIST MEETING

Theodora Balsbaugh of the Southern California Music Company is to present the Top-Notch Trio, Grace Nelson, Betty Jane Bierce and Billy Hall, at Tuesday's meeting of the Soroptimist Club at noon in the music room of the Biltmore. CLUB COUNCIL TO MEET

The members' activities council of the Masonic Club will hold its semi-monthly dinner meeting Thursday at 6 p.m. in the club dining-room. The club also will hold its second bridge party of the season the same evening at 8 p.m. in the spacious lounge.

MASONS TO HEAR ROTH

David M. Roth, memory expert, will be the speaker guest of the Masonic Club at its luncheon Friday noon. The Masonic Club orchestra, under the direction of Carl Pirie, will furnish the musical numbers.

FAMOUS VISITOR ALMOST UNNOTICED

John Charles Van Dyke

VAN DYKE IN CITY ON WAY TO FAR EAST

Author and Art Expert to Gather Material in Java for Another Book

One of America's most distinguished authors, Dr. John Charles Van Dyke, to whom "Who's Who in America" devotes more space than to the average three celebrities, very nearly slipped in and out of Los Angeles unnoticed yesterday.

Only when ship news reporters on the Lassco liner City of Los Angeles, departing for Honolulu, noticed the semilarity of names and questioned Dr. Van Dyke did his presence here become known.

Author of a score of books on art subjects, Dr. Van Dyke probably is best known for his book "Rembrandt and His School," published in 1923, which became an international art battleground overnight. In this, Dr. Van Dyke asserted that Rembrandt instead of being responsible for some 800 paintings, really can be credited with only a few more than a score. The author was the target for a series of attacks from all parts of the globe but, as he chuckled to ship news reporters yesterday, "managed to hold my own pretty well."

Another book, "The Desert," based on the Mojave Desert of California and published in 1901, still is rated as an exceptional "seller."

The visitor is en route to Java, he stated, to gather material for new books. He expects to be gone a year on his journey and probably will circle the globe before returning to his home in New Brunswick, N. J.

Dr. Van Dyke at present occupies the chair of history of art at Rutgers University, a post he has held since 1889. He also is lecturer at Columbia, Harvard and Princeton universities, and has been librarian of the Sage Library since 1878. His last visit to Los Angeles was fifteen years ago, when, he remarked yesterday, "the mud banks were just being dredged to make room for the dock from which this steamer is sailing."

Students to Give "Masqueraders"

"The Masqueraders," a modern four-act play by Henry Arthur Jones, is the drama chosen by the Kap and Bells dramatic society of the University of California at Los Angeles for its annual presentation.

Francis Miller has been selected to play David Remon, the male lead, while Alice Turner will enact the role of Dulcie Larondie, the female lead. Howard McCollister takes the part of the villain, Sir Brice Skene. Esther Gilbert is Dulcie's sister, Helen Larondie. Others in the cast are Ernesta Lopez as Lady Crandover, Muriel Ansley is Lady Crandover's daughter, Clarise, Reuel Yount is Montague Lushington, Everette Sjaardema is David Remon's brother, Eddie, Jack Pinner is George Copeland, Irving Oine is the Honorable Percy Blanchflower, Leon Blunt is Sharland, and Paul Rechenmacher is Brinkler.

Miss Evalyn Thomas, director of dramatic productions at the University of California at Los Angeles, is directing the play. It will be presented Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights in Millspaugh Auditorium at U.C.L.A.

BRUCE BAXTER WILL TALK TO REALTY MEN

Bruce Baxter of the University of Southern California will speak at a meeting of the Realty Board at noon tomorrow in the music room of the Biltmore. The program is to be dedicated to the new associated membership classification, recognizing salesmen as associated instead of salesmen members, and is a compliment to the "fellows of the firing line." Luncheon is to be served at 12:10 p.m.

IMPROVEMENT SPEEDED

The Public Works Committee yesterday recommended that the Norris street and Montague avenue improvement district, and that the assessment district map for the improvement of Riverside Drive and Whitsett avenue be approved.

ACT ON CANYON ROAD

Recommendation of the petition for improvement of Tuna Canyon Road between Honolulu avenue and Sunland was voted yesterday by the Public Works Committee. The engineer was instructed to proceed under the Mattoon Act and to follow the lines of the County Surveyor.

MAP SUBMITTED

The City Engineer yesterday submitted to the Council the assessment district map for the opening of Bayer street from Western avenue to a point 610 feet east of Wilton Place. This was referred to the Street Opening and Widening Committee.

WOMAN TO SPEAK FO DR. LOVE

Miss Rose Harris to Health Talk Thurs Place of Usual Lectu

Rose Waterman Harris, physical culture correction offices of Dr. Philip M. Lov take the place of Dr. Lovell in his usual talk at the Manufacturers' Exhibit, 130 South Broadway, Southwest Building, next Thursday afternoon, and will demonstrate by the use of living models her theories of better physique and how to obtain it.

A rostrum will be erected in the main hall of the exhibit and on it Miss Harris and her models will pose and illustrate the points to be brought out in her talk. This is an innovation, and if it proves popular it is probable that a series of such talks and demonstrations with living models will be arranged for women only in the demonstration hall of the exhibit.

Christmas Programs to be Given at Twenty-two Major Playgrounds

Twenty-two major playgrounds of Los Angeles will give Christmas entertainments and dramas, many featuring Christmas trees and carol singing. At most of these centers plays already are under rehearsal under direction of the department of drama and pageantry of the Los Angeles Playground and Recreation Department.

Costumes and scenery are being arranged with the plan of having the dramatic events given outdoors. The entertainments will be variously scheduled for Friday, Saturday and Monday, the dates to be announced later.

The plays so far selected by playground dramatic groups are:

Arroyo Seco, "The Christmas Jest" and "Christmas Eve;" Downey, "The Christmas [illegible]" and "The Dream Dolls;" Echo, "[illegible] the Holidays" and "St. George and the Dragon;" Elysian, "Christmas Eve at Santa's House;" "The Transfiguration of the Gifts;" [illegible] "The Dream Dolls;" Harvard, "The Christmas Story" and "The Dream Dolls;" Pecan, "[illegible] Christmas Eve;" Poinsettia, "Oh, Christmas [illegible]" and "The Transfiguration of the Gifts;" [illegible] "The Dream Dolls;" Recreation Center, "[illegible] mas at Old Mother Hubbard's" and "St. George and the Dragon;" Sawtelle, "The Christmas Story" and "The Christmas Book;" Tak, "[illegible] mas Eve at Old Mother Hubbard's;" [illegible] "The Little Match Girl," "The Christmas [illegible]" and "The Christmas Book;" Queen Anne, "[illegible] Transfiguration of the Gifts" and "The Dream Dolls;" Terminal Island, "Christmas Eve at Santa's House;" Verdugo, "The Transfiguration of the Gifts" and "The Christmas Book."

HIGHWAY CONSTRUCTION IN CALIFORNIA TO BE GREATEST THIS YEAR

JAYWALKERS FACE ARREST

Police Instructed to Strictly Enforce Pedestrian Law

Increased Christmas Traffic Reason for Move

Victims of Wrecks Are Most Often Foot Travelers

[illegible] that the police department [illegible] enforce the Los Angeles "jaywalking" ordinance during the Christmas shopping period was made [illegible] Police Commission during the [illegible] sent by the Traffic Commission. [illegible] the ordinance arrests may be [illegible] by fine and imprisonment [illegible] the offender.

With the sidewalks crowded to capacity, and the streets filled with an [illegible] number of motor vehicles and street cars, especial care should be taken, the commission said, in order that there will not be an increase of accidents in the downtown and other business centers.

"Jaywalking," always dangerous, is doubly so while the streets are overcrowded. While the temptation to cross a street between blocks may be a little stronger when the [illegible] are filled, the pedestrian should remember that his chances of having a merry Christmas will be greatly enhanced if he walks across the street at authorized crosswalks, with the signals.

The local traffic ordinance makes it a misdemeanor, punishable by fine and imprisonment, for a pedestrian to cross a roadway other than by a crosswalk, in the central traffic district. While the police seek to avoid arrests for this offense, they have the right, under the law, to compel full compliance with this provision.

Statistics show that the victims of [illegible] per cent of all automobile accidents are pedestrians, and that the greater number of pedestrians who are injured are hit between intersections. This shows that jaywalking, together with children running and playing in streets, is the most serious cause of accidents involving automobiles.

[illegible] Kelso, general counsel of the Auto Club, says: "Pedestrian fatalities disclose the need for enforcement of pedestrian regulations as contained in the uniform traffic ordinance adopted in many California cities. Pedestrians must use the crosswalks in any business district or central traffic district. Jaywalking across or down the middle of a business street is strictly prohibited under the ordinance."

The uniform ordinance, according to Kelso, grants pedestrians the right of way in marked crosswalks and at other intersections, upon giving signal by holding up the hand toward approaching traffic. Elsewhere in residential districts, pedestrians in crossing the roadway shall do so at right angles and are required to yield the right of way to approaching vehicles.

ROAD SURVEY STARTS

[illegible], Dec. 3. (Exclusive)—A survey of the proposed Carmel-San Simeon Coast Highway route will soon be started from the north end, supplementing the work now under way from the southern terminus, according to information received here this week. It is probable that a second prison camp will be established in the Big Sur section not far from the upper end of the route, in addition to the one already planned for the San Simeon end.

Local proponents of the coast route from Carmel to San Simeon were greatly encouraged by a recent interview with State Senator C. C. Baker on the occasion of his last visit to Monterey county.

Senator Baker has just received a communication from State Highway Department engineers relative to plans for work on the new highway, in response to a letter from him asking why activities were being concentrated upon the southern portion of the route rather than being begun from the north. Decision in the matter, he was informed, had been guided by consideration of the great accessibility of the southern end, especially during winter conditions.

Various methods of delivering supplies to the convict camps had been studied, Senator Baker said, including the possibility of using ships and unloading by means of cables. Finally, however, it was felt that approach roads from the south offered the most feasible mode of solving the problem and for this reason it was decided to establish the first camp in the Cambria sector. This camp should be in use by the middle of next summer.

It was also stated by Senator Baker that funds for upkeep of the camps are expected to be derived from Federal sources, as the $600,000 available from the State appropriation will be used only for payment of the convicts' wages.

FIGURES SHOW RECORD TO FALL

Road Expenditures for South to Total $30,000,000

Realignment of Curves Large Part of Projects

Great Outlay in City Next Year Predicted

The present year will pass into history as the best to date in highway construction work in California, it is revealed in preliminary reports of these activities received by the Automobile Club of Southern California. When the final figures for 1927 are available, they are expected to show that in Southern California alone more than $30,000,000 will have gone into new roads, new bridges, widening, resurfacing, realigning and general improvement.

These millions represent the total provided by the cities, counties, road districts, State and Federal aid. While this estimate is only preliminary, it is believed to be conservative.

NOTABLE PROJECTS

Notable among the projects completed this year are the Mountain Springs grade on the State highway between San Diego and El Centro. This former seven miles of bad curves and climbing is now a smooth paved highway, and it is expected that by the first of the year the Meyer's Canyon Road that was washed out during the last heavy rains in Imperial Valley, will be relocated and completed.

LOS FELIZ WIDENED

Much heavier flow of motor traffic between Hollywood and Glendale will be accommodated over the Los Feliz Boulevard route, it was revealed yesterday in the announcement by the Hanrahan Company, contractors, that widening and paving of the portion of Los Feliz between Vermont avenue and Riverside Drive at Griffith Park, will be completed early next year.

This artery, which already has been paved with heavy-duty asphaltic concrete along the portion that adjoins Griffith Park, is becoming one of the heaviest-traveled in the northwestern section of Los Angeles. The mile and one-half now being paved by the Hanrahan Company will have heavy-duty asphaltic concrete, eight inches thick, most of the distance and will be seventy-four feet from curb to curb.

USE OLD PAVING

According to H. A. Dase, engineer for the contractors, the present pavement, twenty-two feet wide, is being resurfaced and shoulders built at each side, the old paving serving as base for the center portion of the new street. In some places, where old macadam pavement has existed, all new pavement of the asphaltic concrete type, eight inches thick, is being constructed.

The portion between Vermont avenue and Western avenue, already has a fairly wide asphalt pavement and is in excellent condition, according to the engineer, so the completion of the link now being improved will offer one of the finest intercity, short-cut highways in the Los Angeles metropolitan area.

Approximately 500,000 square feet of paving will be laid, in addition to other improvements, including ornamental lights, the total cost being $269,000.

ANOTHER PROJECT

According to the city engineering department proceedings for the improvement of Riverside Drive, which feeds into Los Feliz Boulevard at Griffith Park, are under way. When that project is completed, it is pointed out a direct, well-paved highway between Hollywood and Glendale boulevards will be provided motor traffic.

Just as was the case when the Griffith Company paved the completed link of Los Feliz, traffic will not be shut off from the portions now under construction, it is announced. As wide a roadway will be left open to vehicles as possible, especially during the heavy travel over the week-end period.

There is a Reason for Packard Reputation

EIGHT out of ten Packard Six buyers give "reputation" as one of their first reasons for purchasing.

Packard reputation is based on two fundamental things: Quality of product and fair dealing with the public.

Every Packard in a long line of distinguished cars has been a little better than its predecessors. The Packard Six of today is the finest Six Packard has ever built. No one questions Packard quality.

Fair dealing with the public has meant proper pricing of new cars, proper allowance on used cars and good service from reliable dealers.

Packard Six sales have increased twenty-fold in seven years—reflected in constantly lowered prices. The five-passenger Six sedan today costs less than half its introductory price. Your used car will bring its highest market value from a Packard dealer who expects to continue to sell and service Packard cars the rest of his life.

Consider these important reasons for Packard reputation and at least give yourself the pleasure of driving a Packard Six before you decide on your new car.

License Plate Suggested as Holiday Gift

Something novel in the way of Christmas presents available to motorists this year is a shiny, new 1928 license plate for the family gas chariot.

Between the opening day of the renewal period, December 15, and January 30, the last day allowed by law for reregistration, approximately 1,000,000 license plates will be issued.

Motorists from other States and members will again be served with licenses through headquarters and the thirty-two branch offices of the Automobile Club of Southern California. The fee for passenger cars will be $3, the same as last year. The only paper required for license renewal is the white certificate of registration. The certificates should be legible and contain the correct address of the applicant.

BIG PAVING JOB BEGUN IN VALLEY

More Than Eight Miles of Asphaltic Concrete for Sherman Way

Sherman Way, one of the chief east and west arteries between the rapidly growing cities of Van Nuys and Owensmouth, in the San Fernando Valley, soon will have a permanently paved surface to accommodate the traffic burden, it was announced yesterday by officials of the Western Asphalt Association.

Work has been started by the George R. Curtis Paving Company of Los Angeles, resurfacing the old macadam road for a distance of eight and one-half miles with asphaltic concrete, averaging thirty feet in width. The pavement is being laid on the south roadway, which will be kept open to traffic during the period of construction, it is announced.

According to a recent survey the population increase in this part of San Fernando Valley has nearly doubled the motor-vehicle traffic of two years ago, and an equally heavy increase is expected in the next two or three years.

In places where the old road cannot be utilized for base for the new surface an asphaltic concrete base will be laid. It is estimated that 41,000 tons of material will be required and the cost of the project will be approximately $208,000.

The asphaltic concrete type was chosen for the improvement because of its adaptability to resurfacing and the resultant economy in construction cost and time consumed.

Service Plan Meets Demand

Owners of high-grade motor cars that represent a considerable investment in luxury, beauty and comfort are usually very particular how their property is handled and safeguarded when it is necessary to have repairs made or other servicing done. That is the reason why Stephen S. Nerney, Lincoln dealer, was so careful in laying out his service department, he declares.

"We service Lincoln cars in the largest shop west of Chicago that is built without pillars," explained Mr. Nerney. "Cars can be moved around when necessary without any danger of denting fenders against obstructions or otherwise marring them. There is room for forty-five cars to be serviced at one time. We give prizes to our mechanics regularly for neatness which insures clean work benches and floors. The great shop is protected against fire by a supply of chemical extinguishers and an automatic sprinkler system throughout."

ROAD WORK FOR YEAR IS RECORD

through the Rindge ranch has been graded through to Oxnard and Hueneme Beach. This stretch of coast route will be finished next year and resurfaced with paving and oil and gravel.

Three new bridges will be constructed during the year in Imperial Valley and approximately a dozen more in other sections of Southern California.

A separation of a dangerous grade crossing at Del Mar has been constructed and two bad right angle turns eliminated. A new bridge at San Juan Creek at Sierra and two grade separations have been installed in addition to a mile of paving along the coast highway. Widening and resurfacing of the highway between El Cajon and La Mesa has been completed.

These are only a few highlights in the general constructive activities.

However, as road building is reckoned by jobs and not dates, they tell only a part of the big story in Southern California. Work has already started or soon will commence on the Foothill Boulevard, east of Pasadena. This well known scenic drive will be widened and improved and many of the worst curves taken out. Plan are under way for work on the San Fernando Road from Dayton avenue at Los Angeles city limits to Newhall Tunnel. A survey has been made for a new road around the Newhall Tunnel to relieve the traffic congestion at this point.

WORK NEXT YEAR

Surfacing and paving of the coast highway from Santa Monica to Oxnard will be completed next year, as much of this wory already has been finished. The Midland Trail between Little Lake and Olancha will be completed and surfaced. The State highway between Irvine and Galaven in Orange county is being widened and will be pushed to completion.

In addition to State work, the counties and cities have been busy. It is expected that between $7,000,000 and $8,000,000 will have been spent during 1927 on the streets of Los Angeles.

Beginning last July an additional cent tax was levied on gasoline which will go to the State for new construction work only, so that next year additional funds will be available for building the State highway system of more than 6600 miles.

LONGEST HIGHWAY

"The greatest distance one can travel on a main highway through a California county is over the National Old Trails road in San Bernardino county from the county line near Claremont on through San Bernardino, Victorville, Barstow, Ludlow, Amboy and Needles to the inter-State bridge over the Colorado River at Topock, sixteen miles below Needles, a total distance 280 miles," states Robert S. Breyer, vice-president and general manager of the Troy Motor Sales Company, Nash distributors.

Vacation Trip Already Thing to Think About

"It is not too early for the motorist to be thinking about his next summer's vacation trip, for, after all, a great deal of the actual pleasure derived from a trip is in the anticipating," says Robert S. Breyer, vice-president and general manager of the Troy Motor Sales Company, Nash distributors.

"Too often the motorist pays little attention to where he shall go on his vacation tour, with the result that, after all is said and done, he really goes no place in particular, or else covers a region with which he is already familiar—and perhaps becomes bored to distraction.

"Living in such a highly scenic and interesting region as the Pacific Southwest, the Southern California motorist should endeavor to become familiar with some of the principal scenic attractions of the region. To many this means a trip to Yosemite, and, if the motorist has not already visited it, the jaunt to Yosemite is to be recommended.

"But there are so many other places of interest, that the motorist who fails to visit some of them simply because he has been to Yosemite once or twice and therefore feels that he has seen all that is scenic or interesting in this region, is simply cheating himself and his family, for Sequoia and General Grant national parks, the Grand Canyon, Zion National Park, Bryce Canyon, Cedar Breaks, Rainbow Bridge, Monument Valley, Owens Valley and Lake Tahoe all have a peculiar charm of their own, and are most worthwhile touring objectives.

"For the much-traveled motorist who has viewed all of the above scenic wonders, there remain outstanding features farther afield, such as truly marvelous Crater Lake in Oregon, unique and vastly interesting Yellowstone, and the great Columbia River Highway in Oregon."

NAME MOUNTAINS

"The United States Geographic Board, through its chairman, Frank Bond, recently announced that the San Gabriel Mountains (of which Mt. San Antonio—Old Baldy—is the highest peak) are to be known only as such, the often-used name 'Sierra Madre' mountains being no longer applicable," says Robert S. Breyer, vice-president and general manager of the Troy Motor Sales Company, Nash distributors.

GAS IN CLEAN SWEEP IN SPEEDWAY RACES

Cars fueled with Union Ethyl gasoline made a clean sweep of the automobile races held at Ascot speedway last week. George Souders, driving a Miller-engined car, won first in every event in which he competed. Fred Frame, driving a Locomobile Junior Eight special, placed second in every event but two, when he won a first and third position. Each used Union Ethyl gasoline.

Both Souders and Frame attributed the wonderful performance of their engines to their choice of Union Ethyl gasoline, and which they said gave them the necessary extra power which brought them to the finish line ahead of competitors. Pitted against a field of outstanding racing stars of the country the winning combination of Union Ethyl gasoline, mechanical perfection and expert driving proved too great a handicap for the other entries.

FORD HOLDS INTEREST

DETROIT, Dec. 3. (Exclusive)—The week's headline in the automotive industry was the long-awaited public exhibition of the new Ford cars, which took place in Convention Hall.

Known as the Model A, the car is vastly different from the well-known Fords of the last fifteen years, showing an improvement in practically every detail. It is larger with a more sturdy appearance and, according to Mr. Ford, is the best low-priced car he knows how to build.

Claim is made that the car will run twenty to thirty miles on a gallon of gasoline, and has a horsepower of forty, with aluminum pistons, which will drive the car fifty to sixty miles per hour.

Other mechanical details are: Standard gearshift, new pump, splash and gravity oil system, a multiple dry-disc clutch, thermo-syphon cooling system, new battery, coil and distributor ignition, low center of gravity and minimum unsprung weight, which combines with the hydraulic shock absorbers to make it an easy-riding car. There is an irreversible steering gear, with the column and housing of the gear mechanism welded into a single all-steel unit; a seamless, all-steel torque tube; one-piece welded steel-spoke wheels; three-quarter floating rear axle in a forged-steel housing of exceptional strength, and thief-proof coincidental lock.

Steel forgings are used throughout except for the engine castings. The Ford company possesses its own ore mines, coal mines and timber lands and the source of most of its raw material. Cars built between now and Christmas will be used by dealers throughout the country for display purposes. After Christmas, it is expected, dealers will be able to begin filling orders.

The Model A is appearing at a time when it can give a big part in what now promises to be the biggest year the auto industry ever experienced. Mr. Ford last week stated that before 1929 he will have spent approximately $800,000,000 for labor and material for the new Model A car. His Detroit plants and the various assembly concerns throughout the country will have a capacity of 12,000 cars every twenty-four hours.

At the present time Ford plants in Detroit alone are giving employment to more than 80,000 men, and this number will be steadily increased along with production. When running at capacity, 140,000 men will be on Detroit pay rolls.

Ford is now preparing to become absolutely independent of other manufacturers of automobile units and materials, and the time is not far distant when he will produce every unit entering into the make-up of his automotive products. This will bring to Detroit millions upon millions of dollars that heretofore have been going to several other cities.

JOURNEY OFFERS WONDER POINTS

elevation of 5600 feet, the opposite wall of Death Valley on the Nevada border line is obtainable a view that is doubtless the most wonderful picture ever beheld by man—below is revealed what is at once the most glorious and terrifying sight in the world. A feeling of stunned, silent awe, may be the first reaction, but as the marvels of the view unfold, there comes an indescribable fascination. The walls of the cliff drop almost perpendicularly to the floor of Death Valley, appearing like a great vat of molten metal pouring out in different directions, flowing like a great river for 125 miles, north and south between the Funeral Range and Panamint mountains. In the distance, and, seemingly, in the rarefied atmosphere, but a stone's throw, may be seen the setting sun tinting the snow-covered crown of Mt. Whitney and its slightly smaller sister peak, Sleeping Beauty—with the raising of the eye one feels that he has seen a bit of hell and caught a glimpse of heaven without the turning of the head.

But even nature's "hell" with the advancement of man has lost its terror. Desert resorts such as Stove Pipe Wells in the heart of Death Valley among the shifting sand dunes, where this Thanksgiving tourists and desert pioneers rubbed elbows and partook of the choicest viands of the season—lobster cocktails and roast turkey with frozen dainties from Death Valley's own ice plant, have transformed this region into another California playground.

COOL IN WINTER

That the lowest, dryest and during the summer, hottest, although it must be borne in mind that from October until May the climate in Death Valley is most delightful, and its highest with immense fields of living ice, trout-filled lakes and woods abounding in game, are but a day's journey from Los Angeles and both within view of one another, is a priceless asset to the scenic attractions of the Southland.

This great recreational area lies almost exactly north of Los Angeles and includes en route Red Rock Canyon, in itself a scenic wonder well worth the trip. The "Lady at the Organ" is a marvelous carving wrought by the hand of nature, other erosions suggest cities of skyscrapers, cathedral spires and castles of the Moorish Granada.

The route from Los Angeles and Southern California is by way of San Fernando Valley, Saugus, Mint Canyon, Lancaster and Mojave, a distance of 100 miles over paved highway. From Mojave north to Lone Pine, a further distance of 125 miles, the route is by way of Red Rock Canyon, Little Lake nad Olancha, over a fine dirt road, a part of the State highway system, kept in excellent condition by the Highway Commission.

Lone Pine is the starting point for sportsmen and vacationists visiting the Mt. Whitney country. From Lone Pine a branch road leads to Cartiago and the industrial town of Keeler at Owens Lake, where are located the world's largest soda ash plants, the mining town of Darwin and onto the new Eichbaum road through the Panamint Valley and over Townsend Pass to Stove Pipe Wells, the direct link connecting the heart of Death Valley with Los Angeles via a direct California entrance.

In England, blind radio owners, who are properly registered, are exempt from the usual license fee. Nearly 30,000 persons are benefited by this provision.

"POWER plus SPEED, STAMINA, STABILITY

THIS is the first of a series of commendatory letters from people of position in Southern California concerning Gardner Eight-in-line performance.

—that's the GARDNER," (EIGHT-IN-LINE) SAYS

THE 14-inch mobile railway gun shown in this drawing is the pride of Uncle Sam's Ordnance Engineers. Captain Conable, overseas veteran of the World War, is in charge of its operation at Fort MacArthur.

BATTERY "B," THIRD COAST ARTILLERY

TO sit at the wheel of a GARDNER is to enjoy a performance of power—plus speed, stamina, stability . . . As a military man, I compare its engineering advancements to the sturdy 14" mobile railway gun of the Harbor Defenses of Los Angeles, thusly: "One gun in a million! One car in a million!" Then, too, it is a car of grace and color. I wish the GARDNER the success it so justly merits.

M. E. Conable
Captain, 3rd C. A.

Thanks, Captain!

THE spirit of today demands the utmost in dependability—beauty—color—superlative results . . . The GARDNER, with an entirely new motor performance—smoother, more brilliant, more satisfying than ever before provided by an automobile—fulfills every wish. Being worthy of comparison with the "blue-ribbon" gun of our Army, under your valiant command, is indeed a tribute!

LEAVITT JOINS WILLYS

Entire State Distribution Taken Over by Firm in Business on Coast Quarter Century

By one of the largest and most important motor car transactions ever consummated on the Pacific Coast J. W. Leavitt & Co. has been appointed distributor of Willys-Knight and Whippet automobiles for the entire State of California.

The deal involves the marketing of $15,000,000 worth of Willys-Knight and Whippet automobiles annually and the purchase of all Willys-Overland factory-branch properties in the State. It became effective December 1.

BUY ALL PROPERTIES

By this great transaction J. W. Leavitt & Co. announces that it takes over the Willys-Overland factory-branch buildings and equipment, all stocks of automobiles, parts, service facilities and personnel of the company.

The announcement is of national interest as it unites one of the world's greatest automobile manufacturing organizations with one of the largest, oldest and strongest distributing companies in the entire West, with experience of nearly a quarter of century in motor-car merchandising.

The change will not disturb the Willys-Overland dealer organization and all sales and service will continue as in the past. The transaction, however, will add the facilities and experience of the big Leavitt organization to those of Willys-Overland throughout the State.

WILLYS WIRES

In approving the transaction John N. Willys, president of Willys-Overland, Inc., at Toledo, O., sent the following telegram to J. W. Leavitt:

"It is with keen pleasure that I approve the appointment of your company as our California distributor, knowing from long experience the high rating your firm enjoys in California. Your mechanical knowledge, your resources, your fair and able handling of dealers and your enviable reputation for service rendered to the public make it a great compliment to Willys-Overland, Inc., that you have chosen to cast your fortunes with us. I am confident that the combination of Willys-Overland, Inc., and J. W. Leavitt & Co. will establish record sales of Willys-Knight and Whippet automobiles in the great market of the State of California."

STARTED TIME PAYMENT

The linking of these interests has much meaning for Willys-Knight and Whippet owners. Willys-Overland has maintained large factory branches both here and in San Francisco, while it has dealers in every city and town of any consequence in the State where service and parts are available. J. W. Leavitt & Co. also has distributing headquarters in both Los Angeles and San Francisco and about 135 dealers throughout the State.

J. W. Leavitt & Co. started in business in San Francisco in 1894 and became distributor in 1906 for the Stoddard-Dayton and other cars. Mr. Leavitt is credited with being the originator of vehicle sales on the installment plan. The lease contract used today in motor-car sales was inaugurated and developed by him.

ORGANIZATION STRONG

Later the Leavitt company became distributor for the Chevrolet and Oldsmobile. In 1918 Chevrolet Motor Company took over the Leavitt interests in that car when it established factory branches here and in the north. The Leavitt compainy continued to handle Oldsmobiles until January 1 of this year, when it became distributor for Peerless automobiles. In April the new Falcon-Knight line was added.

Throughout these years Mr. Leavitt has headed a very strong organization and has been very successful in the motor-car field. J. W. Leavitt is president of the company, A. D. Plughoff is vice-president and general manager at San Francisco, L. V. Starr is vice-president and general manager in Los Angeles and William J Pedler is a vice-president also, located in San Francisco.

Car Control Necessary to Real Safety

Perfect control of a motor car at all times is essential to safety in these days of heavy traffic and high speed. This control is provided by quick acting, powerful equalized brakes, an engine with quick acceleration and reserve power and by easy steering qualities, declares Willard Barrows, distributor of the Moon six line in Southern California.

"When the factory engineers designed the newest Moon six they had these things foremost in mind," explained Mr. Barrows. "After months of study and experimentation they selected the units deemed best to supply these needs. The result is that the Moon six is the easiest car to handle that is on the market today.

"Safety frequently lies in quick action in keeping away from trouble. This is not possible always with a sluggish automobile or one that is hard to handle. The Moon six engine has amazing acceleration and ample power to whisk a car away from trouble instantly. In addition to that it is good for an all-day drive at high speed because it is lubricated by the full force feed system and stanchly built.

"The Moon Lockheed four-wheel hydraulic brakes insure safe, positive stop. They stay equalized against skidding. The hydraulic brake is built to anticipate and overcome the inherent faults of the mechanical types. The hydraulic principle dictates that a fluid under pressure is transmitted equally to all surfaces, thereby insuring positive equalization at all times."

Accessories for Car Are Gifts

The practice of giving automobile accessories as Christmas gifts has expanded very rapidly during the past few years and is worth thought as automotive gifts are both pleasing and lasting.

The usual "Do your shopping early" advice is being taken seriously this season, according to the Western Auto Supply Company, and many wise gift seekers are looking over the stocks of accessories and making their selections.

"Our window displays are designed this year to bring to the attention of the shopper the giving of practical gifts and to mail their purchases early," says Hal Baker, general manager of the Western Auto stores. "We are prepared to give aid to the Christmas buyers by relieving them of their mailing troubles and preparing their packages for mailing."

FOOTHILL PROJECT RECEIVES APPROVAL

Indorsement of the major traffic project of widening, extending and paving Foothill Boulevard from Allen avenue, in Pasadena, to the San Gabriel River east of Monrovia was given by the Sierra Madre Chamber of Commerce this week. The work is to be done under the Mattoon Act, according to local understanding.

At the meeting of the chamber A. A. Roe, secretary of the United Foothill Boulevard Association presented a petition prepared by the county highway department and the Regional Planning Commission and approved by the State highway department for the beginning of the work under this act. Mr. Roe says the improvement and extension would be of incalculable value to all the communities within the San Gabriel Valley and the Foothill cities. He said the boulevard would become one of the most beautiful highways in this part of the country under the plan. A double drive is planned from Santa Anita avenue, in Arcadia, to Sierra Madre avenue, in Pasadena, to preserve the trees.

SPEED CRITICS ANSWERED

Replying to criticisms which have appeared recently concerning "speed" advertising, Paul G. Hoffman, vice-president of the Studebaker Corporation of America, and head of the Paul G. Hoffman Company, local Studebaker-Erskine dealers, has just issued a statement in which he explains the policy of the corporation in this respect. The corporation recently has been running a series of advertisements telling of new world records set by Studebaker cars.

"Present-day merchandising demands presentation of the proof of the quality of a product in a forceful, dramatic way," Mr. Hoffman said. "After tests made on our own 800-acre proving ground, we knew full well the extraordinary endurance built into the Studebaker Commander. But we also realized that the only way we could translate this stamina to the public in terms which could be readily understood was to institute a test unparalleled in automotive history.

"We are now advertising that three strictly stock Studebaker Commanders each traveled on the Atlantic City Speedway, 25,000 miles in less than 25,000 consecutive minutes under the sanction and observation of the American Automobile Association. But this can no more be taken as an invitation to the public to use the speed of which this car is capable than the practice of a well-known watch manufacturer showing a watch inclosed in a cake of ice could be interpreted as a suggestion for all owners of such watches to store them in the icebox overnight.

"The ability of a car to maintain better than a mile a minute speed for a distance of 25,000 miles—equivalent to a circuit of the world at the equator — more conclusively proves the advance design of that car, the high quality of materials which go into it, and the precision workmanship contributing to its construction than any other method we know of.

"That is why we turned the three Studebaker Commanders loose on this 25,000-mile run on the Atlantic City speedway."

PASADENA AUTO MEN WILL HOLD MEETINGS

A series of unusual programs beginning this week will feature meetings of the Pasadena Automotive Trades Association, according to an announcement made by President A. W. Marcy, at a dinner attended by representatives of motor-car companies, brake specialists, battery and ignition houses and accessory dealers. Each of the various crafts will be given a meeting during which they can discuss their own problem. Secretary Lawrence E. Stauch reported that the membership was increasing and members were paying their dues consistently. G. Rust Anderson and George W. Clark were named as members of the December program committee. President Marcy announced that Edward Moore, brother of H. N. Moore, is the new chairman of the service station unit of the association. Fred W. Birne was made chairman of the membership committee.

BRITON DESCRIBES CAR

Our English cousins know automobiles but sometimes they have a rather quaint way of describing them, declares Clair R. Savage, general sales manager for J. W. Leavitt & Co., distributor of the Falcon-Knight sleeve-valve six. Mr. Savage made this remark after reading a lengthy description of the Falcon-Knight written by Edgar N. Duffield, motor-car expert, in the London Graphic. The article is written in the purest English and Mr. Savage calls attention to the following excerpts:

"Mr. John N. Willys is America's automobile counterpart of the late Sir Augustus Harris. Year after year Mr. Willys does a big thing and does it largely. His latest achievement for 1927 is the release of the Falcon-Knight, a six-cylinder car of most presentable appearance. It sells for £365. How and why I cannot say. That is Mr. Willy's secret, but it does and Willys-Overland-Crossly, Ltd., are reaping very richly from Mr. Willys's husbandry.

"The cylinder head is pretty much like that used on any Knight engine with sparking plugs centrally located. Ignition is by battery and coil with automatic regulation of the firing point. The note of the electrically operated horn suggests the presence of a really capacious battery in reserve. Getting under way one realizes there is a Knight engine in the chassis inside thirty seconds. It accelerates manfully, but so stealthily. There is no bounding, no leaping, no dog-racing effect."

Writing of the gears he states: "Second is lowish as it usually is upon trans-Atlantic machines. But the gears change quite nicely and this is a top gear car anyhow, unless one essays positive mountaineering."

"The body in the chassis loaned to me," he continues, "was a comfortable roomy four-door saloon. Its doors closed in a safe-like fashion, but without any slamming, and it was completely innocent of rattles, squeaks or drummings."

Give Her the World's Champion Car

JUST two bright keys in a dainty jewel case! But no Christmas package ever held a greater treasure of happiness—for out in the drive stands a smart, trim Studebaker Commander—and those keys make it her own.

What pleasure you'll take in giving her this world-champion motor car—the car that climaxed its championship career by traveling 25,000 miles in less than 23,000 minutes! This dramatic run was made by strictly stock Studebaker Commanders under the supervision of the American Automobile Association. Nothing else on earth ever traveled so far so fast.

Neither she nor you may be interested in the high speed which The Commander is able to maintain for long distances. But you are interested in the sturdy design which made possible better than a mile a minute for a distance equivalent to a circuit of the world. Such stamina spells utmost reliability on your trips across town or across the continent. It means long life, low maintenance cost, superlative service.

There's justifiable pride that you and your wife will take in driving a car which has so conclusively demonstrated its ability as the "world's champion." You'll sense this pride when you step on the accelerator and flash ahead of the crowd; when you "zoom" up hills or "step-out" on the open highway.

And what joy to show The Commander to her friends, for its beauty of line and finish win instant admiration.

Drop in today and we'll give you the Keys. Her Commander will be at your door Christmas Eve or Christmas morning—whenever you say. Then no one's wife will have a happier Christmas than yours!

Newspaper Man Prefers Motor to Rail

M. C. Mogenson, well-known newspaper representative, is the owner of a new Locomobile 90 Victoria sedan. He travels around the country in his motor car, preferring the driver's seat of his car to a Pullman.

Scribe Finds Car Economy for Traveling

In these days of keen competition time is precious indeed. Delays because of slow moving trains are costly to the man who has business to attend to. Several years ago the fellow who found it necessary to do all his traveling by rail spent weeks to do a job that can be accomplished today in hours by automobile.

M. C. Mogensen, well-known newspaper representative of this city, with offices in seven of the largest cities in the United States, is one of a group of young and enterprising business men who swear by the automobile as the proper means of transportation for serving clients wherever they might be located.

In his work Mogensen has a big list of newspapers to service and he does practically all his work by automobile. He travels late into the night in order to closely follow his itinerary and does his work by day.

The other day Mogensen purchased from the Locomobile Company of California a model "90" Victoria sedan. When he drove this very handsome automobile in front of his offices some of his staff wanted to know why he bought such an expensive type of car for the work and traveling he has to do. His answer was, "My motto has always been to buy the best at first and be happy you bought it. There is no way to evade paying quality's price. A cut in quality makes possible lower prices," said Mogensen.

Nation's Travel Cost Mounts in Last Few Years

In the last five years the nation's automotive travel cost has doubled, according to the statistical department of the Gilmore Oil Company, pioneer producers of oil products in Los Angeles and whose new winter high-compression gasoline has been given a very favorable reception by motorists, according to officers of the company.

The present transportation "plant" of the country is valued at $50,000,000,000, and between $18,000,000,000 and $20,000,000,000 is spent annually in the moving of persons and property in this country alone, it is declared.

Half of the huge sum at which all forms of transportation in the country is valued is represented in automotive equipment, highways and factories used in the manufacture of automobiles and tires and tire factories, the report asserts. A similar sum represents the value of the railways and their equipment.

"Twenty-five years ago, shortly before the Gilmore Oil Company came into being, the $25,000,000,000 which represents the valuation of trucks, stage coaches, passenger automobiles, paved highways for their use, tires and factories for their making, was not included in any inventory that might have been made of the transportation facilities of the country," said B. E. Gilmore, president of the company.

"That quarter of a century has seen immense strides in the development of all forms of transportation, but mostly in gasoline-propelled vehicles. The production of gasoline in itself is one of the biggest industries. The Gilmore Oil Company at one time produced only fuel and road oil. Today the refining of gasoline is one of its major divisions."

Safety Found Greater Here Than Outside

That highway safety is more advanced in Southern California than in many other parts of the country even in the face of greater traffic volume and higher speeds in vehicle operation is due to the necessity to cope with the greater transportation problem, in the opinion of W. M. Kinney, general manager of the Portland Cement Association of Chicago, here yesterday on a tour of western offices.

"The factors that promote highway safety so evident here are wide highways and arterial streets, smooth, even suracing with low tractive resistance and high powers to prevent skidding, strip method construction or painted traffic lanes, well regulated pedestrian traffic and tunnels for school children," Mr. Kinney declared. "On the highways outside of the city, new alignments have reduced grades and curves and the progress in railway grade crossing elimination is amazing.

"Skidding on wet, slippery pavements causes most of the serious smashes on city streets and careless drivers cause most of the wrecks on the highways. The best nonskid road presents an even plane of travel over a surface texture in the concrete which will provide good traction when brakes are applied. Finishing methods used here show a marked advancement in buildinfg such a road."

Wheelbase of Car Tends to Be Shortened

There is a very marked tendency on the part of manufacturers generally to build lower and shorter cars.

According to Harry A. Lord, president of the Lord Motor Car Company, this is the natural reflection of what the public wants. A few years ago most people wanted a big package for the money. They wanted cars that gave them the greatest number of wheelbase inches for each dollar of price asked.

Wheelbase was the measure of price in a motor car just as the number of rooms used to be the standard in homes. Wider education and consequent improvement in the national sense of good taste have changed all that to a tremendous degree in the last five years. People today build smaller and simpler homes but they build of better materials and include richer furnishings and every conceivable convenience.

Size is no longer the measure of value, even in automobiles. During the past five years, practically every manufacturer in the industry has reduced the average wheelbase of his line, and has brought his cars much lower to the ground. Jordan showed the high-grade small line of custom cars at the last New York automobile show.

"The impractical baby cars one sometimes sees in Europe will never be popular in this country," says Mr. Lord, "but the small high-grade car of exceptional quality and comfort with real beauty of design and a rare ability to perform has been accepted socially. This will be brought home very emphatically to every one who visits the big national motor car shows this year."

Worm Gears Add Life to Motor Cars

Quiet operation, long life and smoothness are outstanding features of the quality motor car that the foremost automotive engineers of the world have studied and experimented for years to achieve. They have practically muffled all engine noise and by the adoption of a very old principle they have even banished the hum of the final drive by use of worm and gear, states Lee S. Collins, distributor of Stearns-Knight motor cars.

"Because the worm and gear final drive had not been generally employed by automobile manufacturers owing to its costly construction, the uninformed believed it was something new," declared Mr. Collins. "But it is old—very old. The principle is the same as that of Archimedes's screw, which came into use some 2000 years ago.

"Stearns-Knight cars are fitted with worm and gear final drive, chosen because of its silence, great efficiency and extremely long life. It has unusual strength and has been employed in motor truck construction for many years, where strength was demanded."

PROTEST ON ROAD WORK VOTED DOWN

The Yosemite Drive and West End improvement associations have agreed with the Chamber of Commerce not to protest the assessment in Eagle Rock for the Figueroa-street extension plan, a major traffic project which will lead a vast amount of traffic out of Los Angeles over the Los Angeles River into Eagle Rock and Pasadena by way of Yosemite Drive or the Eagle Rock highway. Traffic here is becoming more congested, and those who have studied the situation declare that the extension of Figueroa street and the opening and widening of new streets through this city will greatly relieve the situation here. The work will go on, even if the protest is made, it was brought out.

PRICE CUT AIDS SALES

The recent price reduction affecting all models of the Hupmobile Eight have greatly stimulated eight cylinder business for the Hupmobile sales organization of Greer-Robbins Company, California distributor, according to A. R. Reedall, manager here.

"New prices for the eight-cylinder models make these cars outstanding in value," Reedall declared. "Among the thousands who have come in our showrooms recently to inspect the new six cylinder models, many of them have turned to the eight upon learning of the new price scale, which is the lowest ever placed on Hupmobile's eights.

"In this eight-cylinder model, Hupmobile was the first to perfect high compression, a feature that has won attention from motor car buyers all over the world in the past two years. In addition, Hupmobile has built the utmost in comfort and luxury in its eight-cylinder models, and this too wins high praise."

WEST-COAST ROAD SOON UNDER WAY

NOGALES (Ariz.) Dec. 3. (Exclusive)—Official declaration has been made that on January 1 will be started work on a new west coast automobile highway, from Nogales southward to Hermosillo, whence it is to be continued to Guaymas, Mazatlan and the City of Mexico. Already it has been designated, though unofficially, as the Coronado Trail, commemorating the march, in 1540, of Francisco Vasquez de Coronado from the City of Mexico through Culiacan to the Seven Cities of Cibola, the present Zuni villages of Western New Mexico. These villages today are to be reached by roadways running northward from this point.

Yanks Build Road Across Cuban Isle

Thirty years have passed since the cannon at San Juan roared the doom of foreign oppression, but an American army still fights in Cuba. It is a peace army, now. Rifles have been exchanged for muck-sticks and caissons have given way to motor trucks. Today the struggle is not being waged against tyranny, but against the tangled morass that is the Cuban jungle.

Cuba's long-dreamed-of trans-island highway is under construction at last. When the work is completed, a ribbon of modern pavement will stretch the entire length of the island. This great project will be finished in five years at the cost of $20,000,000.

It was with pride that the Moreland Motor Truck Company loaded a fleet of five six-wheel, dual drive, ten-ton trucks on the S.S. Ecuador, Panama mail liner, last month consigned to Kaiser Paving Company in Comaguey, Cuba, where they will be used in the building of the new highway. Henry J. Kaiser, internationally known highway construction expert, and president of the Kaiser Paving Company selected the Moreland six-wheelers after he had made an extensive survey of his gigantic job. Kaiser has contracted to build the highway through the Province of Comaguey, and half way through the adjoining province. The great road-builder believes that Moreland's six-wheel dual drive truck is particularly adaptable to the soft, murkey Cuba terrain.

Dr. Melville Cumming, who last year organized a system for co-operative shipments of strawberries in Colchester county, Nova Scotia, has been appointed director of the recently created division of marketing and will make products of that province known to the world.

MACHINES AT CLUB APPEAR LIKE SHOW

In word from Leigh Garnsey, manager of the Rainbow Angling Club, the parking space in front of the club was described as looking like an automobile show last Sunday, when one of the largest crowds of the winter season went fishing. Some of the anglers turned up in their new cars, thus the auto show atmosphere.

Fishing at this time of year at Rainbow is excellent. The days are warm with just a tang of crispness in the air. The stream is running clear and cold and the trout are taking flies or bait.

Garnsey announces that he has contracted for 5,000,000 trout eggs from Idaho, the first lot to arrive at Redlands within the next week. At the present time there are nearly 1,500,000 half matured and maturing fish at the club's plant in Redlands.

MARMON 8

In its remarkable feats of performance an entirely new chapter has been written 70 honest miles per hour, with ease and safety.

Lightning acceleration, surpassing that of any car.

Handling, beyond all doubt the easiest you have ever experienced.

An entirely new type of smooth, bounceless riding, without great size or bulk.

Prices $1795 and upward, all under $2000, f. o. b. factory, including complete and luxurious equipment. Convenient credit plan enables you to take delivery of Marmon 8 on a moderate down payment.

THIS Marmon 8 has the effect on your pulse of sudden good news—the first actual thrill you have had out of any new automobile in years—or since your very first car

—a car that unmistakably outstrips the best of them on the get-away

—a car that gets to the top of its speed range with one thrust of the foot

—a car that cares not a rap whether the workmen who laid the paving or built the road did their work well or half-way

—a new, vivacious, fast-footed type of car capable of snapping in and out while the rest of heavy-footed traffic is trying to get set —the easiest, most modern and thrillful way of getting about so far ever developed.

Its motor is a straight-eight—a new type of straight-eight which appears to be most prophetic of the industry's next big trend.

Its chassis is extremely low-swung, with the longest springs in proportion to wheelbase of any car in the world—mounted in rubber and supplemented by hydraulic shock absorbers of the most expensive make—therefore producing a new degree of easy riding.

It has an air of distinction which heretofore has not been found in automobiles of less than $3000. It is every inch a genuine Marmon, built in Marmon factories, and of Marmon quality throughout.

Don't buy any car until you have fully investigated what this Marmon 8 is and the remarkable things it will do. Will you give us just fifteen minutes of your time some day this week?

NEW DODGE MODEL NOW SHOWN HERE

Leather Upholstered Sedan in Addition to Senior Six Line; Colored Gray

Albertson Motors Inc., Los Angeles distributors for Dodge Brothers automobiles and Graham Brothers trucks, have announced the addition to the Dodge Brothers senior six line of a five-passenger sedan upholstered in polo grain gray leather. Some of the models of this new leather finished car have been received and are now on display at the Venice Boulevard and Figueroa street branch, according to Roy D. Heartz, manager of the downtown sales room.

This is the first leather upholstered car in the company's senior line, Mr. Heartz pointed out yesterday and, contrary to the usual custom in the industry, it is priced lower than models done in mohair.

"The new sedan," Mr. Heartz said, "meets the requirements of many buyers who prefer leather to fabric upholstery. Leather has the advantage of being easier to keep clean and of offering maximum resistance to rough usage.

"The new car is particularly attractive in that the polo grain gray leather is in pleasing contrast with the Brunswick blue lacquer below and the black lacquer above the belt line on the bodies. The window reveals are deep and are set off by the same Brunswick blue lacquer in which the body is finished. Wheels are painted blue to match the body and the fenders and shields are finished in black enamel.

"Production in large volume, the company has announced, allows this car to be introduced at a substantially lower price than that at which the other types of the senior six line sell."

New Limousine Being Displayed Locally

CAR SUGGESTS PRESENTS

With the automobile a prized possession in most families, it should be an easy task to select an appropriate Christmas gift for the entire family in the automotive merchandise line, is the belief of Hal Baker general manager of the Western Auto Supply Company.

"Nowadays almost every family has a car," says Baker. "Most every family wishes for accessories to beautify it or make driving safer and more comfortable. When you give something for the car you make the whole family happy. Most folks put off buying accessories and Christmas is the time to give them the needed ones.

"The practice of giving automobile accessories as Christmas gifts has expanded very rapidly during the past few years and is worth of considerable thought as automotive gifts are both pleasing and lasting.

"Accessories are easy to select too. Just visit your nearest Western Auto stores and look over the attractive displays. You'll find something for practically every one you wish to make happy. You will be proud to give accessories as they are lasting reminders of your thought.

"Giving automobile accessories will make the Christmas budget go farther as the one present serves as a gift to the entire family.

"The Western Auto Supply Company with over 150 accessory stores can offer a real service to the Christmas shopper. Accessories purchased from our stores will be wrapped and mailed at the will of the buyer. A gift exchange card will be inclosed in each package that will enable the receiver to exchange the gift at any Western Auto store should his car be equipped with the gift he receives.

"This is an exclusive Western Auto feature as there is no other company that has such a wide distribution of branch accessory stores."

To impart a Spanish atmosphere the dusty antique finish is employed for walnut and mahogany furniture.

Limousine on Display Here

Marked by its new, handsome lines and luxury in every detail, the first seven-passenger Pierce-Arrow Series 81 inclosed drive limousine has arrived here, announces William E. Bush, Southern California distributor. This new series motor car has many innovations that make it stand apart in the quality automobile world, he declared.

The limousine is obtainable in many colors but the first one here is finished in Carthage blue with black fenders, upper structure and a black belt. A note of brightness is furnished by the orange striping and Carthage blue window reveals, Mr. Bush stated.

"The interior is most beautiful and luxurious," he explained. "The car is lined and upholstered in blue-gray broadcloth of very fine texture and seats are of the semitufted type, very wide, deep and set at just the right angle for an all-day's ride. The woodwork is of polished walnut embellished by inlays of colored woods. There are two full sized additional chairs that fold into the floor and back of the front seat when not in use. The rear compartment is unusually spacious giving the fullest degree of comfort."

SUNDAY AUTOS FATALITIES SHOUT NEED FOR SAFETY

Fatalities on the streets and highways of the nation numbered more than 22,000 during the first ten months of 1927, according to a report just received by the Automobile Club of Southern California. The public safety department of the motoring organization points out that this appalling record is evidence of the need for greater attention to safety.

Car Popularity Demonstrated in Heavy Sale

The popularity of the new Chrysler "72" roadster is well shown by the ever-increasing number of sales on this model, according to Frank B. Hughes, sales manager of the Greer-Robbins Company, Chrysler distributors in Southern California. Sales reports from all parts of the country, show that the new roadster is even surpassing the distribution of the original Chrysler "70" roadster which played such a great part in reviving and maintaining public interest in open-model cars.

Many of the outstanding features of the new Chrysler "72" roadster have heretofore only been found on the Chrysler imperial "80" model and other higher-priced automobiles.

The low and long snappy lines which have been characteristic of all Chrysler roadsters have been further enhanced by adding nine and one-half inches to the length of the frame. This adds to the model's appearance and carries out the suggestion of speed and pep. Models placed on display within the past few days disclose an entirely new color scheme of Mojave brown on body above and below body beads—the body beads being finished in a deep maroon.

"The most-talked-of feature on the new '72' roadster," Hughes said, "is the new 'red head' engine, which is standard equipment on all Chrysler roadsters. Its performance has proven surprising to the most skeptical. Chrysler '72' roadster owners and people who have visited our showrooms and have asked to drive the new '72' roadster are continually telling us that they have never driven or never dared hope to drive such a marvelous performing automobile. One driver remarked that its speed possibilities seemed unlimited."

For the colonial room a mahogany footstool with a tapestry top gives a pleasing touch.

CLOSE-COUPLED SEDAN ARRIVES

Tan, Gray, Black Colors Used

Miss Jean Rivers with new Peerless six-eighty short coupled sedan.

FILLING the requirements of those who like a commodious yet compact motor car with special provision made for carrying luggage, a new Peerless six-eighty close-coupled sedan has arrived here. It has just been received by J. W. Leavitt & Co., distributor of Peerless, and is the first of its type produced by the great factory, according to Clair R. Savage, general sales manager.

"The new Peerless is a high-quality automobile, beautiful, luxurious, most comfortable and efficient," declares Mr. Savage. "It contains all the refinements of the 1928 Peerless line, which is marked by its drawing-room atmosphere," he stated.

"Finished in a dark shade of tan with gray window reveals, black top and fenders, this Peerless stands apart from the ordinary automobile," stated Mr. Savage. "The interior is lined with plain taupe mohair of a fine grade. Seats and black cushions are covered with the same material bearing an effective figured design. These seats are divided into pillows that give the utmost in comfort because of the deep, soft upholstery. The front seat has two cushions and there are three in the rear section."

Probably the most fragile will on record was that round which a legal battle was waged in the law courts of London. It was written with an indelible pencil on an egg-shell. As, however, it was not properly witnessed, the judges refused to recognize its validity.

TRIP YIELDS DESERT HOLLY

Plant May be Picked by Autoist

Chevrolet party exhibiting desert holly picked near Owens Lake.

PICKING the California mountain holly is against the law now, except on private land where written permission of the owner has been secured. But there is no taboo yet on the beautiful desert holly that grows on the barren foothills of the Colorado and Mojave deserts and up through the Owens River Valley in the Nevada.

Actually it is not holly at all, nor is it distantly related to the shrub whose green leaves and brilliant red berries are so closely associated with the holiday season. "A triplex hymenlytra," the scientists have named it, and the chief resemblance it bears to real holly is in the shape of its silver gray leaves to those of the real holly. It bears a tiny pink berry at this season of the year and it is becoming more and more popular each year as a California Christmas time decoration. Made up in wreaths with a few real holly berries interspersed it is a decoration of very real and lasting beauty, for it does not wither easily.

It is most common on the slopes of the desert hills of the Colorado and Mojave deserts. The hills near Red Rock Canyon east of Mojave usually have an excellent crop of desert holly. A party of Chevrolet tourists last week discovered a splendid growth just east of Owens Lake on the road between Olanche and Darwin on the way to Death Valley. It can be found in countless other places, however, and search for it lends another attraction to the lure of winter journeys to the desert country.

BOYS' LETTER DESCRIBES MOTORING A LA VIENNESE

The average owner of an automobile in Vienna is regarded as being in the wealthy class and most cars are chauffeur driven. Gasoline costs more than twice as much as it does in the United States and one has to hunt a garage instead of buying it on a corner. Garages provide individual stalls, padlocked at night for cars left for storage. Cars left on the street unwatched are soon surrounded by a crowd, who hold the opinion that it is a stolen car because there is no paid watcher near by.

These and other interesting facts are contained in a letter just received in Los Angeles from two young men who are touring Europe in a Buick sedan. Their letter is so laudatory in the statements made as to the performance of the car that it has been added to the long list of other similar communications in the files of Harold W. Tuttle, Assistant General Manager of the Howard Automobile Company of Los Angeles.

Sam Firks, 6434 Eulalia street, Los Angeles, and Richard Diller, 1085 McAllister street, San Francisco are the two young men who paused on their tour to let it be known in the States just what they thought of this product of their Buick.

From their letter it would seem that the old country would offer a splendid market for used cars, if some method could be devised to get them across the water transportation free, for their Buick sedan, run 4000 miles, cost them $2000. Diller declares since he purchased the car in August that it has run about 7000 miles with no mechanical trouble of any kind. He also tells about the Buick he owned before he left for Europe and the satisfaction he had out of its use. But let them tell about their interesting experiences.

"We find ourselves in this land of Viennese beauties—world renown—where the slender dames have poise, grace and charm! Talk of 'Hoflichkeit'—that means courtesy—each man you meet tips his hat to you. Can you imagine one gentleman tipping his hat to another? When you come into your hotel, the doorman tips his hat and says 'Guten Tag' (good day,) a little further another porter does likewise, then all the desk employees, then the elevator boy, then the maid, I have to doff my hat sixteen times daily at the hotel alone, but I'll fool 'em yet—I'll lose my hat!

"These Viennese all go to five o'clock teas. All they earn is about $30 to $50 a month (very good pay in Vienna) and you can see all Vienna at five o'clock drinking coffee and dancing. The cost is only twenty cents in any of the 1200 cafes in Vienna. At the dances the big handsome Austrian must kiss the hand of 'lady fair' after each encore. Really, it's polite and absolutely a social obligation. Well, these Viennese ladies will have to wash their hands with Colgates before I adopt this custom.

"I bought a 1927 Buick standard sixty horse power used car (run about 4000 miles) in London, Aug. 5, 1927, from a used-car dealer, paying $2000. We are driving all over Europe a la Buick, Ltd., and sure is a treat. It is the only way to really see the country. We see all the small towns en route, the life in the small villages and see the big cities the way they should be seen. We belong to A.A.A. and the Royal Auto Club. They have outlined excellent tours for us, giving us the smallest villages all on a typewritten chart and books with maps and places of interest to see in each town passed through, so you don't have to be a Lindbergh to find your way.

"We expect to sell the car in London again, as I have already placed an order with the Buick people for a new car upon my return to San Francisco. I gave them my old car to sell before I left. Sam also has a Buick in Los Angeles now, a 1925 open standard six, which has run eighteen months at 2000 miles per month—the valves have only been ground once.

"We save garage hire, too, here in Vienna. At night we leave the car standing in front of the hotel all night. The garages are all either too far away or it takes half an hour to put it away. First, there's a big ten-foot gate which is opened by the watchman after you ring a bell. Then he takes your life history for police records. Then he opens up an entirely individual stall, you drive your car in and then he closes it with a massive lock. Even a fly couldn't touch your car.

"Wherever we leave the car on the street—particularly Vienna—a dozen people will come up and offer to watch the car for hire. We tell them, 'No, we are insured.' They are amazed when we leave the car unwatched. It represents so much money to them, they think someone will steal it. All our friends are amazed that we have no chauffeur. It's not considered nice to do such menial work as driving your own car—only chauffeurs should do that. So they take us for a couple of chauffeurs—that's a fact. A gentleman will not drive in Vienna. And you should see the way they go dressed for motoring. They have huge duster coats, goggles and duster caps. They don't wear their good clothes either, because they think they will get dirty. They're centuries behind us!"

Popular Truck Output Larger for Every Year

With 1927 fast growing to a close, in so far as manufacturing records are concerned, that of Graham Brothers, the truck division of Dodge Brothers, Inc., bids fair to be a repetition of every year since the trucks were first brought out in 1921, according to J. H. Cassidy, sales manager of the truck division of Albertson Motors, Graham Brothers and Dodge Brothers dealers here.

Mr. Cassidy pointed out yesterday that at no time since the Graham Brothers trucks were first offered has each succeeding year failed to show an appreciable gain in sales and production. While no figures are yet available for this year it is confidently believed the total will be well over 50,000.

The growth of the popularity of the Graham Brothers truck—a popularity that has resulted in it leading in the truck sales field in California for the first ten months of this year—was pointed out by Mr. Cassidy.

In 1921, 1086 trucks were made. In 1922, 3401 were made and sold, a gain of 213 per cent; in 1923 the output was 6971 units, a gain of 105 per cent; 1924 saw a production of 10,791, a 55 per cent increase; there were 24,056 made in 1925, an increase of 123 per cent and last year 37,463 trucks were made, a gain of 56 per cent. In six years the gain was 3400 per cent.

The factory has set a minimum of 70,000 trucks for 1928.

YUMA ROAD LINK TO DRAW TOURIST TRAVEL

MESA (Ariz.) Dec. 3. (Exclusive)—C. Fred Brackett of California Dairies of Los Angeles, declares that paving the highway between Buckeye and Yuma is a real necessity in the development of Arizona. He said: "The lobbies of the big hotels in San Diego, Los Angeles and other coast cities are thronged with moneyed people who have big cars and who are fretting for new places to go. Though the story is exaggerated, they are sure to hear about terrible desert roads and thus be kept from visiting Arizona. They do not know that Maricopa county has exceptionally good roads, but they hear about the relatively short stretch east of Yuma that is not in fine condition."

CAR GETS PRAISE OF CAPTAIN

Qualities of Auto Held Comparable to Giant Gun

The hobby of Capt. M. E. Conable, commanding Battery B at Fort MacArthur, is the firing of big, rip-roaring, ear-splitting guns; coast-defense weapons at the harbor. Among them is the huge fourteen-inch mobile railway rifle recently added to the husky batteries at San Pedro.

Capt. Conable is quoted as saying that the Gardner eight-in-line motor car "has power, speed, stamina, stability," and that its engineering advancements are as pronounced as those of the "Big 14" itself. He is paying the Gardner the highest of tributes, for the mobile gun is the captain's one and particular hobby.

"One gun in a million, one car in a million," adds the "warrior" to his comment anent the Gardner. "Furthermore, it is a car of dashing grace and contour."

In replying by letter to Capt. Conable's written appreciation of the Gardner car, Harry A. Sperl, distributor for this automobile in Southern California, said:

"The Gardner is rising higher and higher in public esteem among those who yearn for the better things of life. The spirit of today demands the utmost in dependability, but with that there must be beauty. The Gardner, with an entirely new motor performance fulfills every wish of the exacting motorist. Being worthy of comparison, mechanically, with the 'blue-ribbon' gun of the United States Army, the operation of which is under your valiant command, is indeed a tribute sincerely appreciated."

Capt. Conable, charge d'affaires of the world's largest mobile weapon, was recently a guest of Mr. Sperl on a tour of Los Angeles and environs, during which he was at the wheel for part of the time.

Mr. Sperl announced yesterday that rate reductions of 25 per cent on theft insurance, 20 per cent on accidental collision or upset insurance, 20 per cent on bodily injury or death insurance, 20 per cent on property damage and 50 per cent on insurance covering accident to owner or guests have been put in effect by the Gardner Motor Company.

The theft insurance rates heretofore in effect on Gardner eights-in-line were based on experience with Gardner cars prior to this year. Since the adoption of the Fedco theft-proof numbering system with loss-of-use insurance by Gardner, there has been a drastic reduction in the number of stolen Gardners, with a corresponding reduction in the number of claims on which insurance companies have had to make good to Gardner owners.

Big Brother in Ford Line Also Changed

To the purchaser or prospective purchaser of small and inexpensive cars the Ford announcement of this last week, together with the first public showing of the new "baby Lincolns" has been of outstanding interest. Of equal interest to those that are in the market for de luxe motor cars has been the announcement by the Lincoln division of the Ford Motor Company of vital improvements to the Lincoln—improvements which, it is emphasized, may be installed on any Lincoln models, not matter how old.

In this connection, Eddie Shenberg, general sales manager for Maddux, Inc., local Lincoln representative, points out that the consistent policy of Lincoln always has been to arrange changes so that they may be incorporated inexpensively in all past models.

"In the matter of headlights, for example," said Mr. Shenberg, "it will be recalled that a change in the style of head lamps within the last year caused a change in appearance of the front of the new Lincoln. Those, however, who wished to replace their old 'drum type' with the newer lights, were able to do so at a minimum cost so that none could tell but what their cars were newly purchased ones. That was true of the new six-wheel brake system. Now with double fly-wheel, new instrument board, lower bodies, smaller wheels, and so on, Lincoln owners still may renew their cars. There is never any penalty inflicted by Lincoln changes and improvements on Lincoln owners."

DECIDEDLY AWKWARD

"Tell your boss I have come to see him," said a tall, broad-shouldered man, bursting open the door of the clerk's office. "My name is Daniels."

The office boy, a puny little fellow, gazed awe-stricken at the visitor.

"You're Mr. Daniels?" he exclaimed. "How very awkward."

"Awkward? What do you mean? Is your boss in?"

"Yes, but I've got orders to throw you out."—[London Tit-Bits.

New decorated enamelled bath stools add a smart touch to the bathroom.

Brake Expert Finds Ready Market Here

Los Angeles is more brake conscious than any other metropolis in the United States. Weather which permits all-the-year motoring, faster driving on straight highways, roads which actually pull up into the clouds and as rapidly dip into valleys, all these are factors contributing to realization of the care and protection which must be given brakes.

Into Los Angeles Jack O'Halloran has brought his A-C Brake Shop, where he has introduced brake specialization. It's a case of brakes only. As far as Jack and his mechanics are concerned, the automobile hasn't any other mechanism that is important. They apply about 2000 feet of brake lining each month and handle a business which grosses from $4000 to $5000 for that period. Fifty thousand aluminum rivets are used every three or four months.

Reasons Given for Purchase of New Auto

Seven reasons why prospective new-car purchasers may buy motor cars to advantage at this season are enumerated by J. M. Sterling, general manager of the Paige Company of Southern California who explained that many persons put off the purchase of a new car until spring, not realizing that by buying in the fall they often save considerable expense. Here in detail are his reasons for present buying. "First, your present car will undoubtedly require some reconditioning to fit it for winter use. Save this expense and apply the money toward a new car.

"Second, winter driving on worn tires is unsafe, and changing tires in wet weather is a real hardship.

"Third, your present car will be rated as a year older by spring.

"Fourth, these fall days are ideal for breaking in a new automobile—no excessive heat, fewer gruelling trips and plenty of time to have the car well worn in before wet weather.

"Fifth, if you happen to be driving a car with two-wheel brakes and high-pressure tires, you cannot afford to risk your safety and that of your family during another winter. Paige hydraulic four-wheel brakes with balloon tires are much safer on wet pavements.

"Sixth, the new finish used on Paige cars is not affected by win like the old-style paint jo

"Seventh, the big advant ing a new car for winter greater comfort, security ment it affords."

Everybody knows about the Superior Smoothness of a Six—the Finer Quality of a Fisher Body—That's why a price of makes the Pontiac Six such an unusual "Buy"

$745 AT FACTORY

The widespread appeal of the Pontiac Six is based on its extra smoothness, extra snap and the longer life it provides. The world-wide reputation of Fisher bodies is based on known superiorities of Fisher design in styling, comfort and passenger protection.

And because the Pontiac Six is the lowest priced six with Body by Fisher, its success has become the talk of the automotive world.

Do you actually know what luxuries you can enjoy in today's Pontiac Six? Have you experienced the superior performance, the added comfort, the extra satisfaction assured by the ownership of this great General Motors product?

Why not come in for a demonstration today? Why not learn as so many thousands have—that a Fisher body is finer—a Pontiac Six is smoother—and a price of $745 makes it a truly unusual "buy".

New lower prices on all body types (Effective July 15th): 2-Door Sedan, $745; Coupe, $745; Sport Roadster, $745; Sport Cabriolet, $795; Landau Sedan, $845; De Luxe Landau Sedan, $925. The New Oakland All-American Six, $1045 to $1265. All prices at factory. Delivered prices include minimum handling charges. Easy to pay on the General Motors Time Payment Plan.

Influencing The Truck Industry

More than two years ago Moreland gave truck operators a light six-cylinder truck—the Road Runner. That the popular trend of speed truck design is swinging toward Road Runner principles is a tribute to the foresight of Moreland engineers.

IT IS STANDARD

Moreland is a standardized truck; parts are interchangeable. This is a distinct maintenance economy. The Moreland Road Runner is the ideal high-speed, low-cost motor truck.

Small corner posts on the sturdy and comfortable Road Runner cab permit maximum driving vision.

The Road Runner, with two-ton payload and speed up to 50 miles an hour, is the ideal vehicle for fast, low cost hauling.

At Aviation Exhibition

AIR SHOW HELD FOR STUDENTS

Demonstration Given as Educational Feature at Huntington Beach

What is believed to be the first aviation exposition and aerial demonstration ever staged strictly as an educational feature for school students was held last Tuesday at Huntington Beach, where oil and ocean meet and derricks are so thick that this prosperous little city is almost "out of sight."

Sponsored by city officials, the Huntington Beach Chamber of Commerce and American Legion and the California Petroleum Corporation, the entire day was given over to the program arranged by Mayor C. O. Boster, Capt. F. W. Young and their colleagues.

Lieut. Leslie Arnold, world flyer, who flew from Long Beach to deliver the address of the day, and Lieut. D. W. Tomlinson, crack combat pilot from the United States Naval Air Station at San Diego, headed a corps of more than twenty prominent flyers from airports all over Southern California who participated in the various aircraft displays and aerial demonstrations planned especially to familiarize school students with modern aviation progress.

Miss Margaret Shank, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. O. A. Shank, was unanimously chosen Queen of the Air for the day and officially christened Miss Calpet.

The day's events started in the morning with a parade, which formed in the business section under leadership of City Attorney A. J. Theddick, marshal of the day. Miss Shank, dressed entirely in white, with her long brown curls decorated with the official crown of Miss Calpet, headed the procession.

The boys' band from the Fullerton Union High School added a martial touch to the affair and the line of march led the crowds to the airport on the outskirts of the city prepared by Calpet and city officials for the reception of visiting flyers.

As soon as the flyers landed their planes were lined up and fueled with Calpet aviation-grade gasoline, provided through the courtesy of C. L. Coppage, vice-president and director of sales of the California Petroleum Corporation. Mr. Coppage said this is the regular-run gasoline now being distributed at all Calpet stations.

At noon guests and officials were entertained by the Queen of the Air and her court at luncheon in the banquet hall of the Rotary Club. Lieuts. Arnold and Tomlinson then spoke to the school students in the high-school auditorium, after which the various makes of aircraft were displayed and demonstrations were staged by the visiting pilots over the airport near by.

Grove Visits City as Coast Representative

More than 200 Southern California Oakland-Pontiac dealers assembled at a banquet in the Biltmore Hotel Wednesday night to welcome H. P. Grove, newly appointed representative of the Oakland Motor Car Company for the San Francisco district, which includes all of California, Arizona and Nevada. Mr. Grove succeeds A. L. McMeans, resigned, the appointment becoming effective on the 1st inst.

H.P.GROVE

Mr. Grove comes to the Coast with a noteworthy record established in the service of the Oakland organization. Formerly with the district offices of the company at Minneapolis he was sent to Butte as district representative, remaining there two years. He was then placed in charge of the Pittsburgh district offices and after two very successful years in Pittsburgh comes to the Pacific Coast to assume charge of the three States operating under the San Francisco office.

On his current swing around his new territory, Mr. Grove is accompanied by L. M. Dreves, Pacific Coast zone supervisor of sales for the Oakland Motor Car Company. Previous to arriving in Los Angeles the two officials met with dealers and salesmen in San Francisco and Fresno. Leaving this city they journeyed to Phoenix, Ariz., to attend a meeting.

In announcing Mr. Grove's appointment, Mr. Dreves said:

"We are very fortunate in being able to get a man like Mr. Grove to supervise this district because of his long experience with the Oakland company and his knowledge of conditions and policies. I am sure that he will be well liked by our dealers and that Oakland and Pontiac interests in California, Arizona and Nevada will continue to prosper under his guiding hand.

FENDER HEADLIGHT RETAINED ON AUTO

Since the announcement of the new Series 81 model of the Pierce-Arrow, Worthy Butts of Butts-Andrews, Hollywood and Beverly Hills dealers, has received many queries regarding the famous fender headlights of the Pierce-Arrow and if they would be retained on the new model.

"Because the first reports laid emphasis on the fact that the new car would be totally different in appearance from anything heretofore designed by Pierce-Arrow, a considerable number of people are asking whether it will carry the famous Pierce-Arrow fender headlamps," says Butts, "particularly because a modern crown airplane type of fender has been adopted. The answer is that while many of the new cars will show a special design of bracket headlamp, the well-known Pierce-Arrow headlamp fenders may also be had.

Meet the Airplane

by Frank J. Carmody

Just as the automobile has its proving ground, so has the airplane its wind tunnel. While the functions of the two are similar, there is one significant difference between them. At the proving ground, the complete automobile is sent through various tests but in the wind tunnel, diminutive models, instead of the full-sized airplanes, are tested for various qualities, capacities and performance.

Despite the fact that the wind tunnel has not yet reached perfection in one or two important features, it has been even more indispensable to aviation than the proving ground has been to motordom. As a matter of fact, the Wright brothers credit their original flight in 1903 to the light that their first small, crude wind tunnel threw upon one of the most important fundamentals of aeronautical science, the proper shape of the airplane wing.

Since that time the wind tunnel has come along splendidly, and in the wake of its development has come the airplane. But, in spite of its prominence in aviation progress, the wind tunnel has pretty well escaped public attention, except as a name. Flying has had so many more fascinating and romantic aspects than this laboratory feature that it was inevitable that the wind tunnel should fail to appeal to any one save the engineer.

Technically, a wind tunnel is much more than a large conical-shaped tube through which air is passed at a terrific speed, but if the layman gets this picture of it, he has enough to understand the layout of the airplane's "proving ground."

Huge dynamo-driven fans located at the large end of the tube force air through at any desired rate of flow—up to 300 miles an hour against the stationary model. This description

CARS USED ALL YEAR

Road Development and Maintenance Through Winter Keep Motor Out of Storage

Volume of automobile travel is rapidly becoming equalized throughout the year. The storing of cars for the winter is practically a thing of the past. In the North, the more general removal of snow from the highways, and over the country the extension of good roads and the increasing vogue of winter touring, combined with the growth in popularity of the closed car, all have been important factors in dispelling the bogey against winter driving.

The change in seasonal attitude on the part of motorists has been reflected in sales, according to H. M. Stephens, general sales manager of the Cadillac Motor Car Company, and the change has been particularly marked during the past two years. While there always must be variation in sales volume, due to general conditions, the factors of weather and climate, according to this executive, are constantly becoming less important. An analysis of Cadillac sales during the past two years and orders for both Cadillac and LaSalle during the current season indicate that motorists buy cars when they want them, and that a new car for a winter tour to the South is as likely to be the occasion for a purchase as is the summer tour to the mountains.

ROADS GROW YEARLY

"We already have over 500,000 miles of surfaced highways," Mr. Stephens states, "and this mileage is increasing at the rate of 35,000 miles every year. Every new highway is a new incentive to automobile travel. Around the large cities good roads and the clearing of trunk lines have made all-the-year suburban residence practical, and this development also has greatly increased winter driving.

"The evolution of the closed car to the point where it has become safe, dependable and comfortable during cold and stormy weather has given the final impetus to all-season travel by motor car. In fact, the closed body has made the automobile even more useful in inclement weather than in good weather. It is by all odds the most comfortable and most protected way to travel between two given points. Improved manufacturing methods with increased production of this type of body have brought the closed car into the same price range with open cars. Mechanical improvements in engines, making starting easier in cold weather, and eliminating crankcase dilution, increased skill in the use of antifreeze solutions and the introduction of various accessories such as the closed-car heater, have done away with the inconveniences and dangers of venturing out upon snow-swept roads during zero temperatures.

OPEN CARS APPEAL

"For other reasons—reasons which ignore the protection of closed bodies—we also find in the Cadillac and LaSalle lines that open cars, hand-tailored with as much care as custom closed cars, make an entirely new appeal. At one time purchased as a matter of economy, the open car is today custom-built and used as a sports car. For winter driving in the open, with the dash and color of its design, it is particularly alluring to the younger generation, and is especially popular in the two-car family."

Years Taken in Developing Smooth Car

As the automobile has been developed from the "one-lung horseless carriage" of years ago, smoothness of engine operation has steadily increased. Today the modern eight-cylinder power plant represents the highest development in smooth-flowing power, declares Selig Cahn, vice-president of the White Auto Company, distributor of the Auburn line.

The eight-in-line engine also prolongs car life, gives added speed, more power and flexibility, he points out.

"The old one-cylinder engine made the car go, but with a great loss of energy and a great deal of noise," explained Mr. Cahn. "Then came the two-cylinder motor, which was better. The four was a great improvement over that and then came the six with its overlapping power strokes. Later the eight was developed with a smooth, continuous flow of energy."

Mountain Road Severely Tests Brake Linings

Very few highways offer more difficult transportation problems than the various mountain roads in Southern California. On the sharp curves and winding grades of these mountain highways heavily laden, heavy-duty trucks are forced to their capacity, both ascending and descending, and must be equipped with every safety device available.

Traversing these picturesque mountain highways the motorist will encounter large numbers of Mack trucks of the Lange Transportation Company. These trucks, in addition to being kept in the very best of mechanical condition, are equipped with Emsco-Royal brake lining to insure braking efficiency for the loads carried and the grades encountered. It is a splendid recommendation that this new lining has proved highly satisfactory for the requirements of this exacting service.

Emsco-Royal is a new type of wire-inserted woven asbestos lining produced by a recently perfected process which gives the material a higher coefficient of friction than any other friction material heretofore developed, according to Jack O'Harroren of the A. C. Brake Shop, which uses Emsco-Royal for most of its relining work. The process of manufacture is one of the really big achievements in brake-lining engineering, it is claimed, and is the result of intensive research and laboratory work extending over a period of many months. The excessive weight and solid weave of the lining, combined with extreme pressure in impregnation, gives it great durability and long life, as well as a smooth, easy and highly efficient braking action. This lining is applied and serviced by the A. C. Brake Shop.

WISE CRACKS PAY FOR CAR

Title-Writer Purchases Second Auto

John Krafft, title writer for Cecil B. De Mille, on the left, in front of his Beverly Hills home as he took delivery of his second Reo Flying Cloud. It was Krafft's third Reo and he now has two Flying Clouds in his garage.

TWO thousand years ago Aesop said—or should have said "If you know your stuff you're all set."

Which leads down to John Krafft. When John was a little boy and somebody tried to kid him along, John came right back with a wise crack. The graybeards shook their heads and predicted that "the Krafft young 'un wouldn't come to no good end."

But when John grew a few inches taller and broke out in long pants he got himself a job on a newspaper and continued wise-cracking, using the printed page to broadcast his stuff. Finally he landed on the Indianapolis Star where he conducted a column for the edification of the younger set, and one day, shortly after he had been voted by New York newspaperdom as one of the seven leading wise crackers of the United States, along came a telegram from Universal Pictures offering a contract.

Right there is where John separated himself from a journalistic career and started on his climb to a home in Beverly Hills and two Reo cars in the garage.

When Mr. De Mille made The Yankee Clipper, John Krafft wrote the titles, and at the time he was steeping himself in the lore of the ancient sailing days he had no idea that the Reo Motor Car Company was to bring out a model called the Flying Cloud. He already had one Reo at home, but when the new ones arrived, he promptly purchased a coupe, and kept the old car for the rest of the family to use.

Tired Feeling From Nerves, Not Exercise

Neurologists who have made a close study of the cause of fatigue after a long-day's drive in an automobile, attribute a large share of that tired feeling to nervous strain rather than muscular effort. The constant jarring and vibration transmitted to the driver through the steering column and wheel irritate and strain the nerves until fatigue is apparent, states Ralph Hamlin, president of Franklin Motors, Inc., distributor of the new Franklin Airman air-cooled six.

There is likewise a nervous strain resulting from mechanical rumbles and body rattles which are present in some cars, Mr. Hamlin pointed out. Passengers suffer, too, from the anxiety for their safety and fear of being tossed against the car ceiling when going over rough roads or bumps at high speed, he stated.

"Realizing these truths the new Franklin Airman is constructed to eliminate all road shocks and jars possible," explained Mr. Hamlin. "Full elliptic springs provide a soft cushioning effect that permits the car to be driven at high rates of speed all day without fatigue to either passenger or driver. Light weight, scientifically balanced and distributed eliminates the usual jars felt in the steering wheel of the ordinary automobile."

CAR INCREASES PLAY FOR MODERN FOLKS

"In this day of two-car families, the individually owned and operated transport unit has incalculably enlarged the capacity of mankind for working and playing," says J. M. Sterling, local Paige dealer. "Not until he owned a car did man fully realize all the liberty which was his to enjoy.

"It is significant," continued Sterling, "that in America, where the greatest measure of personal liberty prevails, the great bulk of automobile ownership is registered.

"Real liberty is more than merely the right to come and go as one pleases. It also involves the ability to come and go as need or desire indicate. Not so long ago the family with one car was believed to enjoy a freedom that would supply all desire to travel. There was much talk about a mythical saturation point in the automobile market when every family owned a car. Now it has been found that even the family two-car policy would not saturate the market. There are adult members of such groups, other than the heads of the family, whose wants for individual liberty can only be satisfied with an individual unit of transportation."

DISPLAY BODY BUILT HERE

East Has Fine Coach Made Locally

Muriel Evans with a Packard eight convertible roadster. The body is by Walter Murphy Company of Pasadena for Earle C. Anthony, Inc.

CALIFORNIA can boast one of the leading custom-body builders in the country, in the Walter M. Murphy Company at Pasadena. The artistry, craftsmanship and quality which the Murphy company builds into its designs have gained them recognition as one of the first three coach builders in the country, and the motor-car manufacturers are sending chasses 3000 miles to obtain their bodies.

The convertible coupe shown is built on a Packard eight chassis. It is finished in green, with pigskin upholstering and the top when collapsed goes into the rear deck, disappearing completely. The rear deck also contains a roomy rumble seat, which, by reason of the disappearing-top feature, does not isolate its occupants from the driving compartment. The top of the car is only sixty-five inches from the ground, giving it a long, rakish appearance, with plain, sweeping lines. The car is for eastern display purposes.

"The Packard, with its straight, slender lines," says Mr. Spring of the Murphy company, "lends itself perfectly to the simplicity which is necessary for real beauty."

Strikingly New!

There is a new scion of the house of Pierce-Arrow—and nothing more beautifully modern was ever shown. The car has a patrician smartness. Also, a moderate price.

"...the little more and how much it is!
The little less, and what worlds away"

When one sees something of finest material, exquisitely wrought by hand, the searching truth of the above becomes clearly apparent.

The object may be anything: a garment or a jewel, a tapestry or a motor car. To be treasured because it has that which is without price: "the little more!"

And thus the new Pierce-Arrow is preëminently fine—because its builders work to the dictates of a tradition that knows no compromise with ordinary excellence.

PIERCE-ARROW

You may purchase a Pierce-Arrow out of income, if you prefer. A simplified financing plan makes this a most practical procedure. Your present car accepted as cash up to the full amount of its appraisal valuation.

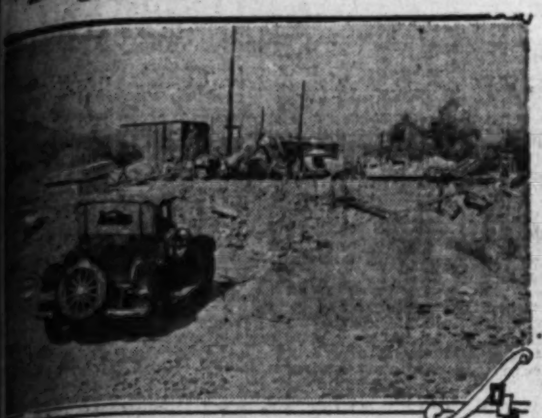
Bridge to Span Storm Stream



[illegible] of last winter conclusively demonstrated that the water courses [illegible] Jacinto Mountain are likely to change overnight from dry [illegible] to raging torrents. A Chandler big six roadster is here shown [illegible] to the reinforced concrete span over Tahquitz Creek, near Palm [illegible]

[illegible]CTIVITIES IN AERONAUTICS

[illegible] wind tunnel is so simple [illegible] it belies the tremendous [illegible] of its equipment. [illegible] over-all size, requiring [illegible] delicate features and [illegible], a wind tunnel that [illegible] accurate and valuable [illegible] expensive proposition. The [illegible] tunnel at Wright Field, [illegible], O., the army air service experimental station, for in[illegible], will be the most ex[illegible] single unit of the lay[illegible]

[illegible] expense, naturally, pre[illegible] majority of aircraft man[illegible] from erecting their [illegible] wind tunnels. At present, [illegible] about twenty-five such [illegible] in the United States, a [illegible] of these established in [illegible] with government ex[illegible] stations or in con[illegible] with aeronautical [illegible] courses offered by [illegible] universities. A majority [illegible] necessarily are restricted [illegible] their operations by inade[illegible] budgets, because in addi[illegible] being expensive to build [illegible] costly to operate.

[illegible] wind tunnel has made it [illegible] for the aeronautical en[illegible] safely to test out any [illegible] of design he may have [illegible] going to the expense of [illegible] a full-scale plane and [illegible] it through its paces in [illegible], with the possibility of [illegible] life as well as loss of [illegible] in case it failed to [illegible] up to anticipated per[illegible]. Actual flying condi[illegible] can be simulated in the [illegible] tunnel.

[illegible] one wants to know [illegible] a plane—its flying, cruis[illegible] or landing speed, its [illegible] climb, propeller thrust, [illegible] lift, resistance, stability, or [illegible] characteristic—is deducible [illegible] the results of a wind tun[illegible]. That these perform[illegible] are deducible from, [illegible] shown by, tunnel test [illegible] is due to the fact that [illegible] must be made for [illegible]," the difference in [illegible] between the test model and [illegible] plane, or part thereof. [illegible] instance, the performance [illegible] model one-twentieth the [illegible] of the actual ships is not [illegible] simply by multiplying [illegible] model's performance by [illegible]. There are correction [illegible] to be applied, but they [illegible] fairly definitely estab[illegible] and are known to the tun[illegible]. With this knowl[illegible] "scaling-up" the tunnel [illegible] performance is not diffi[illegible], at least to the technician.

[illegible] process of preparing for a [illegible] test is one requiring the [illegible] accuracy. Models made [illegible] tests must be absolute [illegible] of the full-scale [illegible] that has been designed. [illegible] curve in the shape of [illegible] machine, regardless [illegible] insignificant it may seem [illegible], there must be an [illegible] curve in the model. In [illegible] respect, it makes no dif[illegible] whether the product to [illegible] tested is a complete [illegible], a wing, propeller, engine, [illegible] other feature. If it is [illegible] exact duplicate in form, [illegible] flight will not be ap[illegible] in the test. The [illegible] of which the models [illegible], however, need not be [illegible] with those of the full-[illegible] ship.

[illegible] from such practical tests [illegible] actual planes or parts, [illegible] wind tunnel is especially [illegible] as an agency of research [illegible] the more abstract phases of [illegible], such as studies in the [illegible] of speed indicators, [illegible] shapes, slotted wings [illegible] many other features.

One of the recent important tests of the latter character involved the wing radiator which is used on several army pursuit ships powered with water-cooled engines. This test made at McCook Field, now deserted, but the scene of many of the army's splendid contributions to aviation, quickly demonstrated the deficiency in this type of cooling equipment. When the radiator was tested in actual service, it was found that heat dissipation was much less than when used in the tunnel.

Further tunnel tests revealed that, in actual flight, air collected in the cooling system, limiting water circulation in such a way that the engine overheated. The slight change in design was simple to make.

One of the chief deficiencies of the wind tunnel, cited by E. N. Fales, army aeronautical engineer, in a recent address before the Society of Automotive Engineers, is the lack of standardized scale correction factors. Another weakness is that results obtained from different tunnels do not always check, he pointed out.

These two shortcomings, which are expected to be the subject of intensive remedial efforts, do not nullify the fact of the wind tunnel's importance to aviation development. For, in spite of these and less important defects, the wind tunnel is regarded as the sole useful agency in making aviation an exact science.

The tunnel, indeed, is aviation's proving ground.

Fall Expected for Sales Mark in Big Contest

Excitement is rapidly nearing fever pitch among the three sales teams in the Southern California territory of Reeve Gartzmann, Inc., Oakland and Pontiac distributor, in the novel "big-game" hunt which started three weeks ago and which will close at midnight Christmas Eve, the 24th inst., at which time several records for sales of Oaklands, Pontiacs and used cars are expected to be shattered.

The three teams in the Gartzmann territory are chieftained by G. Ray Jones, Wallace O. Gates and Louis Tefft, Oakland-Pontiac field representatives. Competition among the three divisions, spurred by an elaborate selection of valuable gifts offered salesmen and sales executives by the Oakland Motor Car Company, is heightened by individual wagers among the team captains and added trophies pledged the winning teams by Reeve Gartzmann. Late this week the Jones contingent was presenting an array of impressive figures to prove its leadership in the race, but these, however, were met with quite as imposing counterclaims by both the Gates and Tefft teams.

According to W. R. Tracy, vice-president in charge of sales for the Oakland Motor Car Company, the opportunity offered by the unusual "hunt" is in the nature of an acknowledgement by factory executives of the excellent work done by members of the nation-wide sales force during the last year. It is being conducted on a point system, a certain number of points being awarded to a salesman for every new car delivery and for every used-car delivery with a price of $200 or more on the vehicle.

While the architectural note is conspicuous in the new station, the practical is also embodied in the layout. The approaches are wide and the paved yard sufficiently large to provide for free movement of automobiles and for the extension of service. The opening of the new station gives the Union Oil Company four distinctive stations in Beverly Hills and forty-four in the city of Los Angeles.

ROADS EAST OF CITY UNDER CONSTRUCTION

REDLANDS, Dec. 3. (Exclusive)—Travel between Redlands and Los Angeles is not just as pleasant over the highways now as it might be, due to the fact that work is being done on all of them. On the valley route there is work being done between Redlands and Yucaipa, which does not bother Redlands people but does all those coming from the east. Then there are three bridges being rebuilt between here and Colton with detours to be made and there is considerable work being done on the road west of Pomona and toward Walnut.

On Foothill Boulevard there is work being done on the road near Monrovia, and also near San Bernardino, where detours are to be made. The Arrow route, which is to be the new direct way into Los Angeles, is not yet completed.

YOU FOLKS FROM HOLLYWOOD?

Movie City Citizens Picked for "Ask-Me-Another" Candidates While Touring Northwest; Charlie's Feet Discussed

Charges that the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce is not functioning at a peak of efficiency are made by Dr. Silas A. Lewis, eminent Hollywood surgeon, as the result of an automobile trip in a Pierce-Arrow series 80, through the Northwest.

Dr. Lewis has just returned to his office in the Taft Building with a memorandum book filled with evidence to support his charges.

The evidence consists of questions asked the surgeon and Mrs. Lewis at every point on their tour, about Hollywood, its residents, its real-estate values, its marriages, its births and appendices. A check of the speedometer when they departed from the Butte & Andrews Pierce-Arrow agency on Sunset Boulevard, and rechecked when they returned, showed an average of one question asked them about Hollywood for every three miles of the total trip of 5500 miles.

Dr. and Mrs. Lewis claim they maintained a vacation mood until they made their first stop at a small town in Southern Nevada. There, they say, the gas-station attendant eyed the Hollywood name plate attached to the license plate and inquired:

"Can you tell me if it's true that Charlie Chaplin always walks that way?"

At Bryce Canyon, Utah, they sought refuge from inquiries by seeking a guide to explain things of interest. A page in Dr. Lewis's memorandum book shows this notation:

Question: How far is it from here to the other rim?

Answer: Is it true what they say about the sun shining all night in Hollywood?

Q.: How many different colors are in those erosions in the canyon?

A.: Bet you've made a lot of money with that Hollywood land boom.

LOMPOC BENEFITS BY GASOLINE TAX FUND

SANTA BARBARA, Dec. 3. (Exclusive)—Santa Barbara county will receive approximately $60,000 of State gasoline tax funds early in December, to be utilized in highway construction. The bulk of the money will go into the new San Julian road, running from Las Cruces to Lompoc.

The completion of the San Julian road will result in a saving of nine miles between Santa Barbara and Santa Maria, eighty-five miles north, and will at last place the thriving town of Lompoc on the main highway north. At present the Coast Highway passes through Buellton, eighteen miles from Lompoc, with only laterals connecting that city with the main line of travel. Surveys for this work have been completed.

Big Deal!

J.W. LEAVITT & COMPANY appointed
California Distributor for Willys-Knight & Whippet
Motor Cars

Contract involves distribution of more than fifteen million dollars worth of automobiles annually

THIS announcement is of national interest, for not only does it involve one of the largest automobile contracts ever closed, but it unites a manufacturer of world-wide importance and a California Company that has for twenty-five years been a leader among automobile distributors.

Willys-Overland, Inc. has been for twenty years one of the largest automobile producers, with a background of more than one and one-half million cars produced.

Mr. John N. Willys, President of Willys-Overland, Inc. put his stamp of approval upon this big deal in the following telegram received by Mr. J. W. Leavitt:

> "It is with keen pleasure that I approve the appointment of your company as our California Distributor, knowing from long experience the high rating your firm enjoys in California. Your mechanical knowledge, your resources, your fair and able handling of dealers and your enviable reputation for service rendered to the public make it a great compliment to Willys-Overland, Inc., that you have chosen to cast your fortunes with us. I am confident that the combination of Willys-Overland, Inc., and J. W. Leavitt and Company will establish record sales of Willys-Knight and Whippet automobiles in the great market of California."
> John N. Willys

The name of J. W. Leavitt and Company has always been synonymous with leadership in the automobile industry of California. Its personnel is composed of men of the highest ability and experience. Mr. Leavitt's principal executives, who have been associated with him for many years are, A. D. Plughoff, Vice President and General Manager; L. V. Starr, Vice President, and William J. Pedler, Vice President.

This transaction gives to J. W. Leavitt and Company, complete control of all Willys-Overland, Inc., facilities in California, including factory branches, buildings, plants, equipment, parts, service facilities and personnel.

The improved Willys-Knight and Whippet models are now on display at the distributor's show rooms in Los Angeles and San Francisco, and at all dealer points throughout the territory.

"Bravo" and Gaylord Martin studying Martin shocks.

CHRISTMAS is just the time for "shocks," according to Gaylord Martin, but the kind of "shocks" he is talking about have to do with spring control on motor cars.

"Bravo" is the name of a young matron who sought out the Martin Iron Works to find out all about a set of Martin dual-control shock absorbers and Gaylord Martin says her name suits her perfectly because she knows what she wants and then goes right out and gets it, and that spirit deserves a cheer any time.

It seems, according to Martin's version of the story, that Mrs. Bravo had her mind set on obtaining a set of Martin shock absorbers for her husband for Christmas and she wanted to get them installed on his car without his knowing it until the feat was accomplished.

"When she came out I took an absorber apart for her and showed her how the Martin is really two absorbers in one, so adjusted as to work independently, or together, according to the amount of spring control required by road conditions. I explained how the smaller single-disc device works by itself to smooth the spring action on the small, choppy, corduroy bumps where there is not so much recoil, and how the larger multidisc clutch comes into play when bumps throw the car hard enough to trip the ratchet."

Resort Notes

Ideal weather and a wonderful turkey dinner brought many people to Glen Ivy Mineral Hot Springs, near Corona, over the Thanksgiving weekend.

The navel oranges at Glen Ivy are ripening very rapidly and, as has previously been the custom, have been the first to be picked and shipped from Corona. Many guests can testify to the excellent quality of the Glen Ivy oranges, advises Frank S. Johnson, owner. He makes a specialty of Glen Ivy oranges and orange juice on his daily menus.

The following were among those guests who visited Glen Ivy Mineral Hot Springs over the Thanksgiving holidays: Mr. and Mrs. B. Weinreich and daughter Betty; Mr. and Mrs. D. N. Rice and daughter; Ethel I. Salisbury; Jaine P. Duggan, Chester Bickel, Clarence Crane, Miss Ruth Gordon, Mrs. M. Riggs, Mrs. A. Gordon, E. Gordon, J. Guire, Miss Frances McComb, Ella J. Moore, M. L. Benson, Miss M. Ingham, Miss M. A. Shepard, R. E. Fleming, B. Floyd, Mr. and Mrs. B. S. Unger and daughter Harriet, and Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Marvin, all of Los Angeles; Mr. and Mrs. A. Gripp and son Bob of Santa Monica, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Shippee and son William, Mr. and Mrs. William Vatcher and children, Mrs. Grant Waldref and son Jerome and Miss Helen Scarlett, all of Hollywood; Mr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Pyle, son and daughter; Mrs. Norman E. Kay and Mrs. Maggie Riggs, both of Pasadena; Mr. and Mrs. George M. Boyd and son Bob o' Monrovia; Mrs. Edna H. McCoy of Elsinore, Mr. and Mrs. P. Greeley of Balboa and Mr. and Mrs. Edward Reed of Pico.

Last night guests of Switzer-Land Resort enjoyed an exceptionally interesting program of violin and piano numbers given by Ingwald Wichs, popular Norwegian violinist, and Mrs. Wichs, concert pianist, who have been heard in many cities in Europe and America. The program included several of Mr. Wichs's own compositions.

Saturday night programs to be given at Switzer-Land in December will include a popular entertainment by the Alumnae Glee Club of Franklin High School on December 10; soprano solos by Mrs. O. N. Meland on December 17, a special Christmas entertainment on December 24, and an appropriate New Year's program on December 31.

Sunday morning services at the Switzer-Land chapel in the upper Arroyo Seco Canyon are drawing unusually large groups of hikers this season. Last Sunday an audience of nearly 200 listened to the Cheyenne Indian Chief, Thunder Bird, who gave a most interesting account of the life and traditions of his people before the coming of the white man.

This morning at 10:45 o'clock a large group of young people from the community church at Lankershim will conduct the chapel service.

Special music will be furnished by Ingwald Wichs. Next Sunday the Alumnae Glee Club of Franklin High School will sing at the chapel service.

Recent Los Angeles arrivals staying at the Hotel Virginia in Long Beach included Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Kendall, Dr. and Mrs. Harry W. Bates, Mr. and Mrs. D. Dougherty, Mrs. Pearl B. Luff, Marianna Luff and Mr. and Mrs. J. K. Macomber.

With the Japanese current warming the water around Del Mar, visitors there are enjoying all the sports available during the summer months, namely, swimming, fishing, golf, tennis and horseback riding, as well as hunting, which sport is only possible during this season of the year.

With these many delightful means of recreation at their disposal, time passes only too fast for visitors there. The Carey Cooks of San Raphael recently planned to stop at the Del Mar for a few days, but a month had passed before they finally decided to leave.

Recent Los Angeles guests at the hotel include Miss Georgia Truman, Mr. and Mrs. Leo J. Trattner, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Shaw and family, Mrs. Guy Barham, Miss Millicent Barham, Mr. and Mrs. V. R. Irin, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Frost, Mr. Lawrence Frost, Mr. T. G. Somermeier and family, Mrs. A. W. KleinSchmidt, Mr. and Mrs. J. McWonell, Mr. and Mrs. H. Golabam, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Renault, Mr. Dave Shore, Mr. J. S. Bain, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Frisbie and Miss Beth Frisbie.

The following were among the guests from Los Angeles sojourning at the Carrillo Hotel in Santa Barbara last week: Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Brown, Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Stiner, Mr. and Mrs. Rikio Okada, Mr and Mrs. R. F. Graver, Miss Virginia Robinson, Mr. and Mrs. George C. Koehler, Mr. and Mrs. Max Lajas, Mr. and Mrs. A. F. MacDonald, Miss Betty Dunlap and Miss Lucille DeArmond.

On next Tuesday evening the Business and Professional Women's Club of Long Beach will hold the first of their semimonthly dinner meetings at the Breakers Hotel in that city. An attendance of 200 is expected. That club has been holding dinner meetings once each month in the past at the hotel, but has now decided to hold them twice each month.

On the evening of the 17th inst. the American National Insurance Company will hold its annual meeting and dinner, to be served in the Hall of the Galleons of the hotel. An attendance of 200 is expected at that meeting.

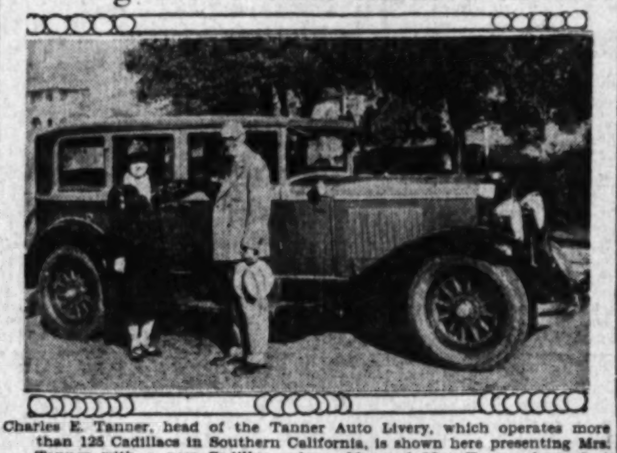
The lure of the desert is attracting many Angelenos to California's lowest and most weirdly fascinating playground, Death Valley.

Among the many Los Angeles guests at Stove Pipe Wells last week, the unique resort among the shifting sand dunes, in the valley of ever-changing lights and phosphorescent nights, were Mrs. Hazel Wallendorf and daughter, Miss Clara Wallendorf; Mrs. Elizabeth K. Russell, Miss Emma Bystrom, Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Bryan, Miss Bessie Platt, Mrs. Christiana V. Forsyth, Mr. and Mrs. William Dermody, Mrs Peter F. McManus, Mr. and Mrs. E. Halberstadt, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Turner, Mr. and Mrs. Art C. Burns, Mrs. Stella W. Carver, Mrs. Cecilia Abbott, Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Brierton, Miss Rebecca T. Allen and Miss Clarisse Millitmore.

A tour through Titus Canyon and over the great salt beds of the Devil's Golf Course was enjoyed by the guests.

TRAVEL IN AMERICA INCREASES

Touring Californians Amused in East



Charles E. Tanner, head of the Tanner Auto Livery, which operates more than 125 Cadillacs in Southern California, is shown here presenting Mrs. Tanner with a new Cadillac sedan. Mr. and Mrs. Tanner have just completed a long tour of the United States.

KIPLING had it wrong. The phrasing should be "East is West and West is East," in the opinion of Charles C. Tanner, head of the Tanner Auto Livery, just back from an eastern trip during which he learned that 12,000 Californians had visited New York the past summer. People of one section of the country are seeing more of other sections as a result of better transportation, he thinks.

Mr. Tanner holds unusual interest in transportation as head of the Tanner Auto Livery. He owns and operates more than 125 Cadillacs and has purchased a new sedan, which he presented to Mrs. Tanner as her personal car, purchased from Don Lee, California distributor for Cadillac and La Salle cars.

Mr. Tanner believes thousands of easterners are coming here this winter. "Our hotels deserve a good word —their rates are 15 to 25 per cent lower than eastern hotels, for the same class of service," he said. He also spoke of California's famous highways but said that the East is catching up in this respect.

Mr. Tanner, Mrs. Tanner, Charles H. Prisk and Mrs. Prisk made up a party of Californians traveling in the East. They went to Detroit by train where they visited the plant of the Cadillac Motor Car Company, took delivery of a new sedan, and motored to the Atlantic.

Mr. Tanner reported an unusual experience in Montreal, Can. Driving up to a prominent hotel, the Californians were surprised to see between fifty and sixty horse-drawn vehicles parked in the neighborhood, with a limited number of automobiles in sight. The lack of horse-drawn transportation in California caused them to make inquiries. As a novelty the party hired a hansom drawn by two horses to see the city. The biggest surprise came, when upon completion of a trip through the business and residential district, the driver of the hansom informed them that the fare was $4 an hour. "This was astonishing to me, because in California we can offer the newest Cadillac for $3.50 an hour with driver," said Mr. Tanner.

Cities Should Supply Space for Machines

"The parking problem in cities has not been given the attention it deserves," says W. P. Herbert, president of the W. P. Herbert Company, local Chandler representatives, in commenting upon present-day automobile owner's parking problems.

"The aeronautical industry is fortunate that so much attention is being given to the provision of airports, municipal or otherwise. Cities are vying with one another to make themselves air centers of the future.

"Seagoing vessels have adequate terminal facilities. So do railroads. It's only in the automobile world that we find so little attention paid to the provision of satisfactory facilities for the stopped vehicle.

"The public spends huge sums of money annually on our highways to make transportation more rapid and comfortable, but little or nothing is being spent by public interests to take care of the parking of automobiles.

"Municipal parking spaces in business sections would help solve the problem. It would not only be a great help to the automobile owner, but it would relieve traffic congestion and would bring more business to the sections so provided. This frequently means a walk of many blocks for the motorist who has business to attend to and wishes to leave his car. Private garages and parking stands have helped to alleviate the situation in some places, but the municipality has a responsibility which should not be overlooked."

DAUGHTERS OF MINISTERS

At least five of the First Ladies of the Land were the daughters of ministers. They were: Abigail, the wife of the first John Adams. She was a daughter of Rev. William Smith, a Congregational clergyman; the first Mrs. Fillmore, who was the daughter of a Baptist minister named Rev. Lemuel Parsons; Mrs. Franklin Pierce, the daughter of Rev. Jesse Appleton, president of Bowdoin College; the first Mrs. Benjamin Harrison, daughter of Rev. John W. Scott; and the first Mrs. Wilson.—Harry Capon, Kansas City.—[Pathfinder.

High Record Made in Use of Gasoline

In a total distance of nearly half that from here to New York City, a Star six touring car recently was driven 1633.9 miles with an average gasoline consumption of 31.9 miles to the gallon.

All but 239 miles of the 1633.9 were under observation of newspaper men from the towns through which the car passed. It was driven by Ben Knoth, local Star dealer and special testing engineer of the Star Motor Company.

The run covered every county in Southern California, over paved highways, dirt roads and detours, through city traffic and, in short, under the same conditions as an everyday driver would encounter in driving over the State highways between Southern California cities.

It is significant that for the 239 miles that the car was not under observation—from Santa Maria to Bakersfield—the average was lower than for the time when neutral observers accompanied Knoth and measured every quart of fuel used and every mile traversed.

There was not a one but who declared that the Star six, so far as his personal experience was concerned, set a new record for fuel economy and each was loud in his praises of the performance of the Star six under, at times, severe conditions.

The run was instigated to prove that the Star six is capable of being run economically. It is common knowledge among those acquainted with the Star four cost records that it is economical in operation, assert Star officials, and this latest performance of the Star six adds further laurels to the established records.

Picture Bits in SPAIN

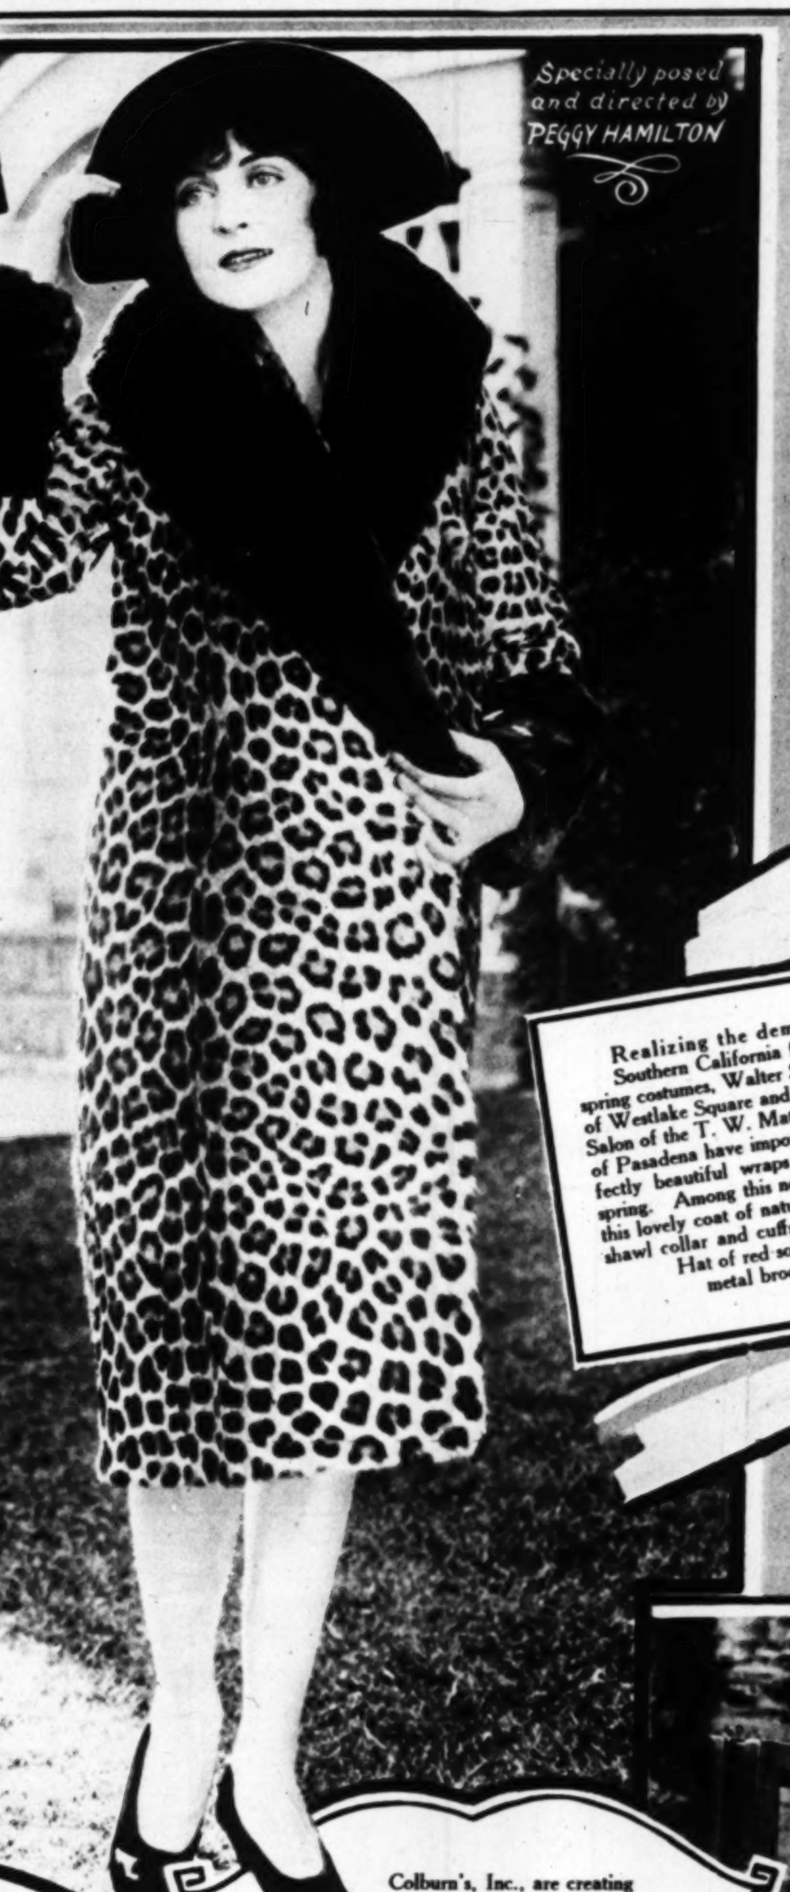
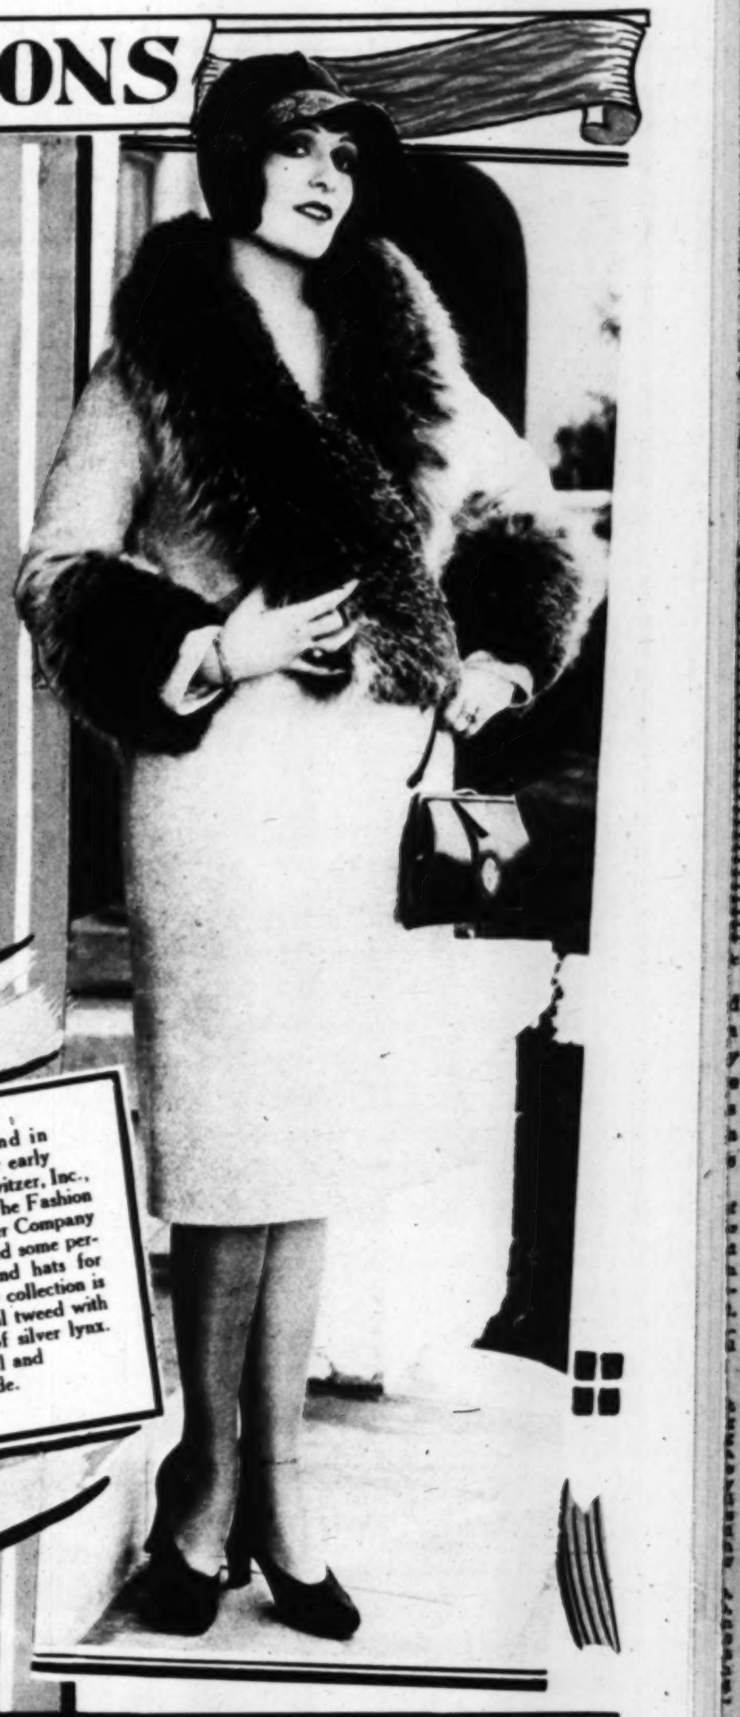
HOLIDAY FASHIONS

Laura La Plante finds in Doraldina's "Allura" a perfect screen make-up—giving a transparent appearance to the skin both for social and professional use.

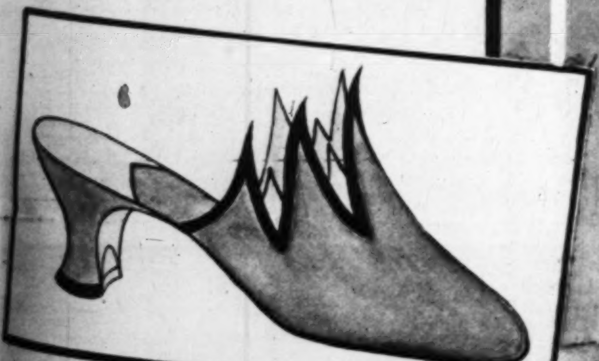
Peggy Hamilton



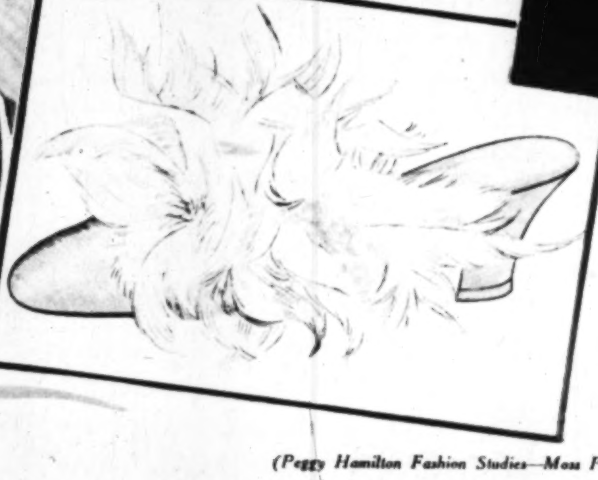
Specially posed and directed by PEGGY HAMILTON



Realizing the demand in Southern California for early spring costumes, Walter Switzer, Inc., of Westlake Square and The Fashion Salon of the T. W. Mather Company of Pasadena have imported some perfectly beautiful wraps and hats for spring. Among this new collection is this lovely coat of natural tweed with shawl collar and cuffs of silver lynx. Hat of red soleil and metal brocade.

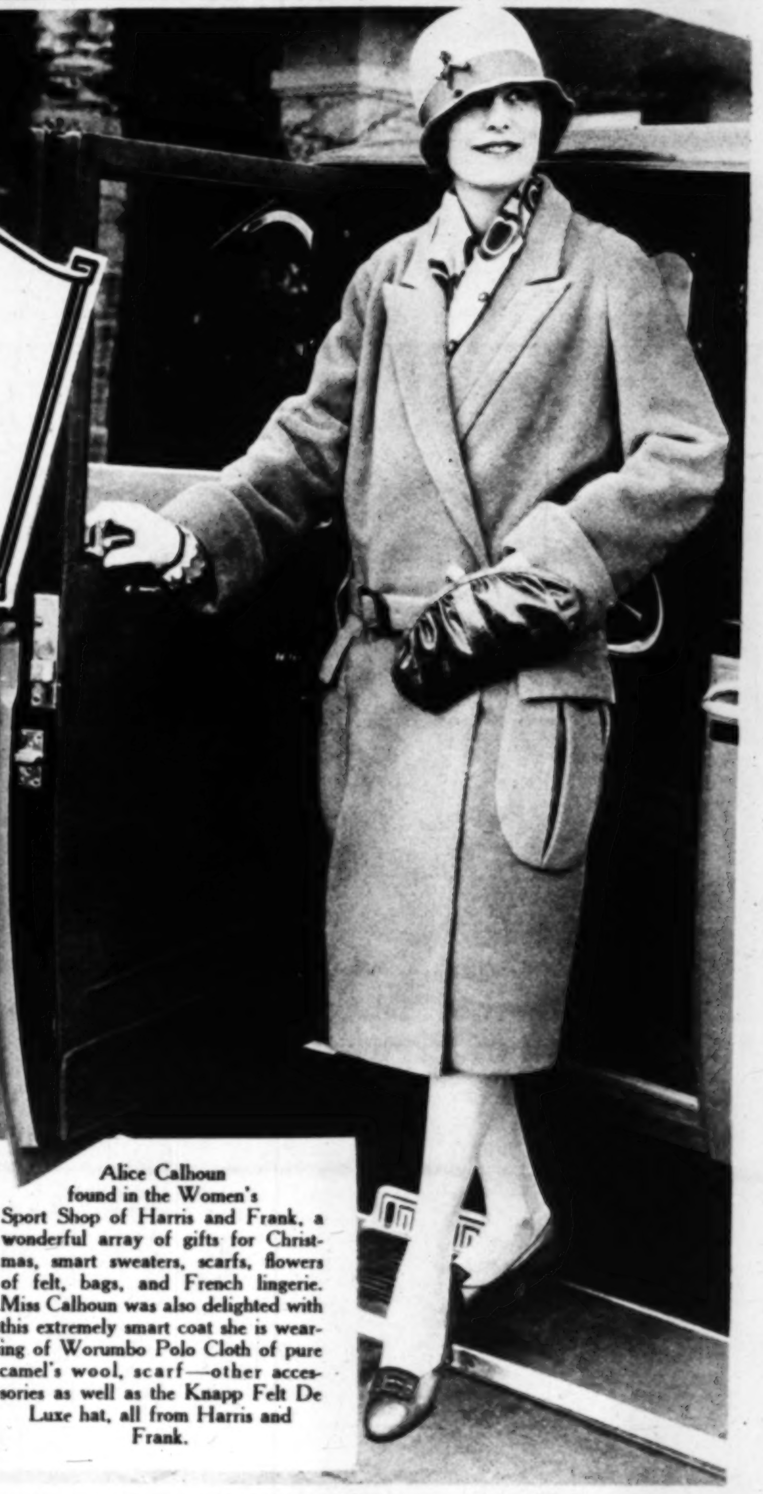


Colburn's, Inc., are creating especially for the holiday season elaborate evening wraps of various combinations of furs, and street coats fashioned of fur which are appropriate for sports as well, such as is worn here by Dorothy Dwan, charming screen star. This wrap is fashioned of leopard with natural beaver collar and cuffs. Colburn's also announce a marvelous collection of fox skins, which make ideal Christmas gifts.



For the Christmas gift, nothing is more acceptable than a dainty pair of boudoir slippers. Juliette Paulais is shown here with two of her favorite models from The Bootery of Los Angeles and Pasadena. Other models which this firm have imported are smart new heel strap mules in red and blue kid, also patent leather; black satin with gold and silver straps interwoven with the black; black satin D'Orsay mules with ostrich trim in rose, orchid, peach, and copen. Satin mules in turquoise blue, American beauty, pink and white with contrasting cock feathers trim; silver kid mules with colored silk linings.

Georgia Hale, star of the Tiffany-Stahl Studios, gives William Hepner the credit for her noted quick changes, for she declares that without William Hepner's "Halotres" it would be impossible for her to appear in so many changes of costume during the day, from sports to afternoon and evening—the short boyish bob to the elaborate headdress of evening such as Miss Hale displays here.



Alice Calhoun found in the Women's Sport Shop of Harris and Frank, a wonderful array of gifts for Christmas, smart sweaters, scarfs, flowers of felt, bags, and French lingerie. Miss Calhoun was also delighted with this extremely smart coat she is wearing of Worumbo Polo Cloth of pure camel's wool, scarf—other accessories as well as the Knapp Felt De Luxe hat, all from Harris and Frank.

With Dick Loynes of Long Beach and J. H. Rand, Jr., of Buffalo, as the outstanding contenders for possession of the great Elgin National Time Trophy, now held by the latter, the national championship speed-boat races will be held at San Diego next Saturday and Sunday with seven eastern and ten California entries competing. Color will be added to the affair by a race of Navy "gondolas" and by races between airplanes and speed boats.

Not only the luxury of rest

ALL DAY thousands of people hurry their way along the sidewalks. Streets are clogged with vehicles, chugging, honking. Hurried people are everywhere, in the clattering restaurants and the crowded shops.

At 3301 Wilshire Boulevard is leisurely quiet. Here Dorothy Gray has her salon. You will find here not only rest, but scientific help in caring for your skin. Miss Gray's method, by stimulating a rapid, healthy circulation, corrects sagging muscles and rebuilds broken down tissues. That is why in the restful rooms of the Dorothy Gray Salon, under the care of skillful operators, the lines left by hurried days disappear from the faces of Los Angeles women.

SESSIONS WESTMINSTER CHIME NUMBER TWO, $34. OTHERS $32 TO $37

express your Christmas sentiment

TO THE FRIEND you cherish most, send this most graceful gift,—the new Sessions Clock of choice mahogany with famed Westminster Chimes. Day after day, every quarter-hour, its lilting chimes will sing anew your jolly holiday remembrance.

By a masterstroke of scientific workmanship, Sessions now can sell these clocks at a price far below that of other Westminster Chime clocks. They cost but $32 to $37, less than even ordinary chime clocks. Yet there has been no compromise with quality or workmanship. The full five tone bars are here, with an exclusive Sessions Chime stand that creates lingering, floating notes, richer and fuller by far than is found in clocks more costly. And these clocks tell the time correctly, for many years.

Let these lovely chimes speed your yuletide message. If your dealer hasn't these new Sessions clocks, send for detailed information about them. The Sessions Clock Co. New York, 233 B'way. Chicago, 5 N. Wabash Ave. Factories, Forestville, Conn.

EVERY OTHER HOUSEWIFE

If two or three women were to say that they preferred Calumet to other brands of baking powder, you possibly would not be deeply impressed. You might think that their choice was swayed by little personal likes and dislikes, or that they were not well posted on the subject of leaveners. But, if out of millions of housewives, every other one were to tell you that she employed Calumet you would immediately decide that it must possess exceptional merit, because it would be utterly impossible for so many to be mistaken in their judgment.

Think of that. More Calumet is used than of all the other brands combined. There must be a sound reason why this is so. There is—Calumet is the world's biggest selling baking powder because it deserves to be.

DOUBLE ACTING

There are many reasons why millions do use Calumet. Some like it because of its absolute purity; some because of its great economy; some because it gives best results, finer, lighter, better tasting bakings; others prefer it because it is so dependable; and many use it because it is double acting, meaning as you know that it contains two leavening units; one begins to work when the dough is mixed; the other waits for the heat of the oven, then both units work together.

So, regardless of what your baking needs or desires may be, you will find that Calumet meets every one of them. You may specialize in fine pastries, or bake for exhibition purposes, you may want to give your family more healthful and nourishing foods; or perhaps reduce living costs; or get rid of baking worries — you will have your wish gratified through the use of Calumet. Try it and you will surely say "This is my idea of an ideal baking powder."

From forty different tropical lands
..... these countless coffee flavors

THEY come by sea from the four corners of the earth—huge, fragrant sacks of berries for your breakfast cup. From Arabia and San Salvador, from Brazil, from Haiti, from Abyssinia.

Countless natural flavors—the world's choice coffees from more than forty tropical lands!

Yet, one by one they have all failed. No single coffee grown has ever pleased those men and women in America who most appreciate the good things of life.

It is no single flavor but a rich mingling of many flavors that has now won the first real nation-wide fame that ever came to a coffee. A blend created years ago in the South.

A special shade of mellow goodness

Born with a genius for flavor, brought up in a land of good things to eat and drink, Joel Cheek long ago dreamed of a new coffee flavor.

In the blend which he finally perfected down in old Tennessee, there was a shade of difference, an added touch of mellow goodness that quickly won it the approval of the critical men and women of Dixie. Years ago Joel Cheek's blend became the favorite coffee of the South.

Today the news of that special richness has spread rapidly throughout the entire United States. From New York to Los Angeles it is now pleasing more people than any other coffee ever offered for sale.

Known to the South alone a few years ago, Maxwell House is now the largest selling coffee in the entire United States.

A new experience awaits you and your family in that shade of difference, in that special mellow richness of Maxwell House Coffee. Its very fragrance will tell you why this blend has won such fame. Grocers have Maxwell House Coffee in the sealed blue tins. Cheek-Neal Coffee Company, Nashville, Houston, Jacksonville, Richmond, New York, Los Angeles, Chicago.

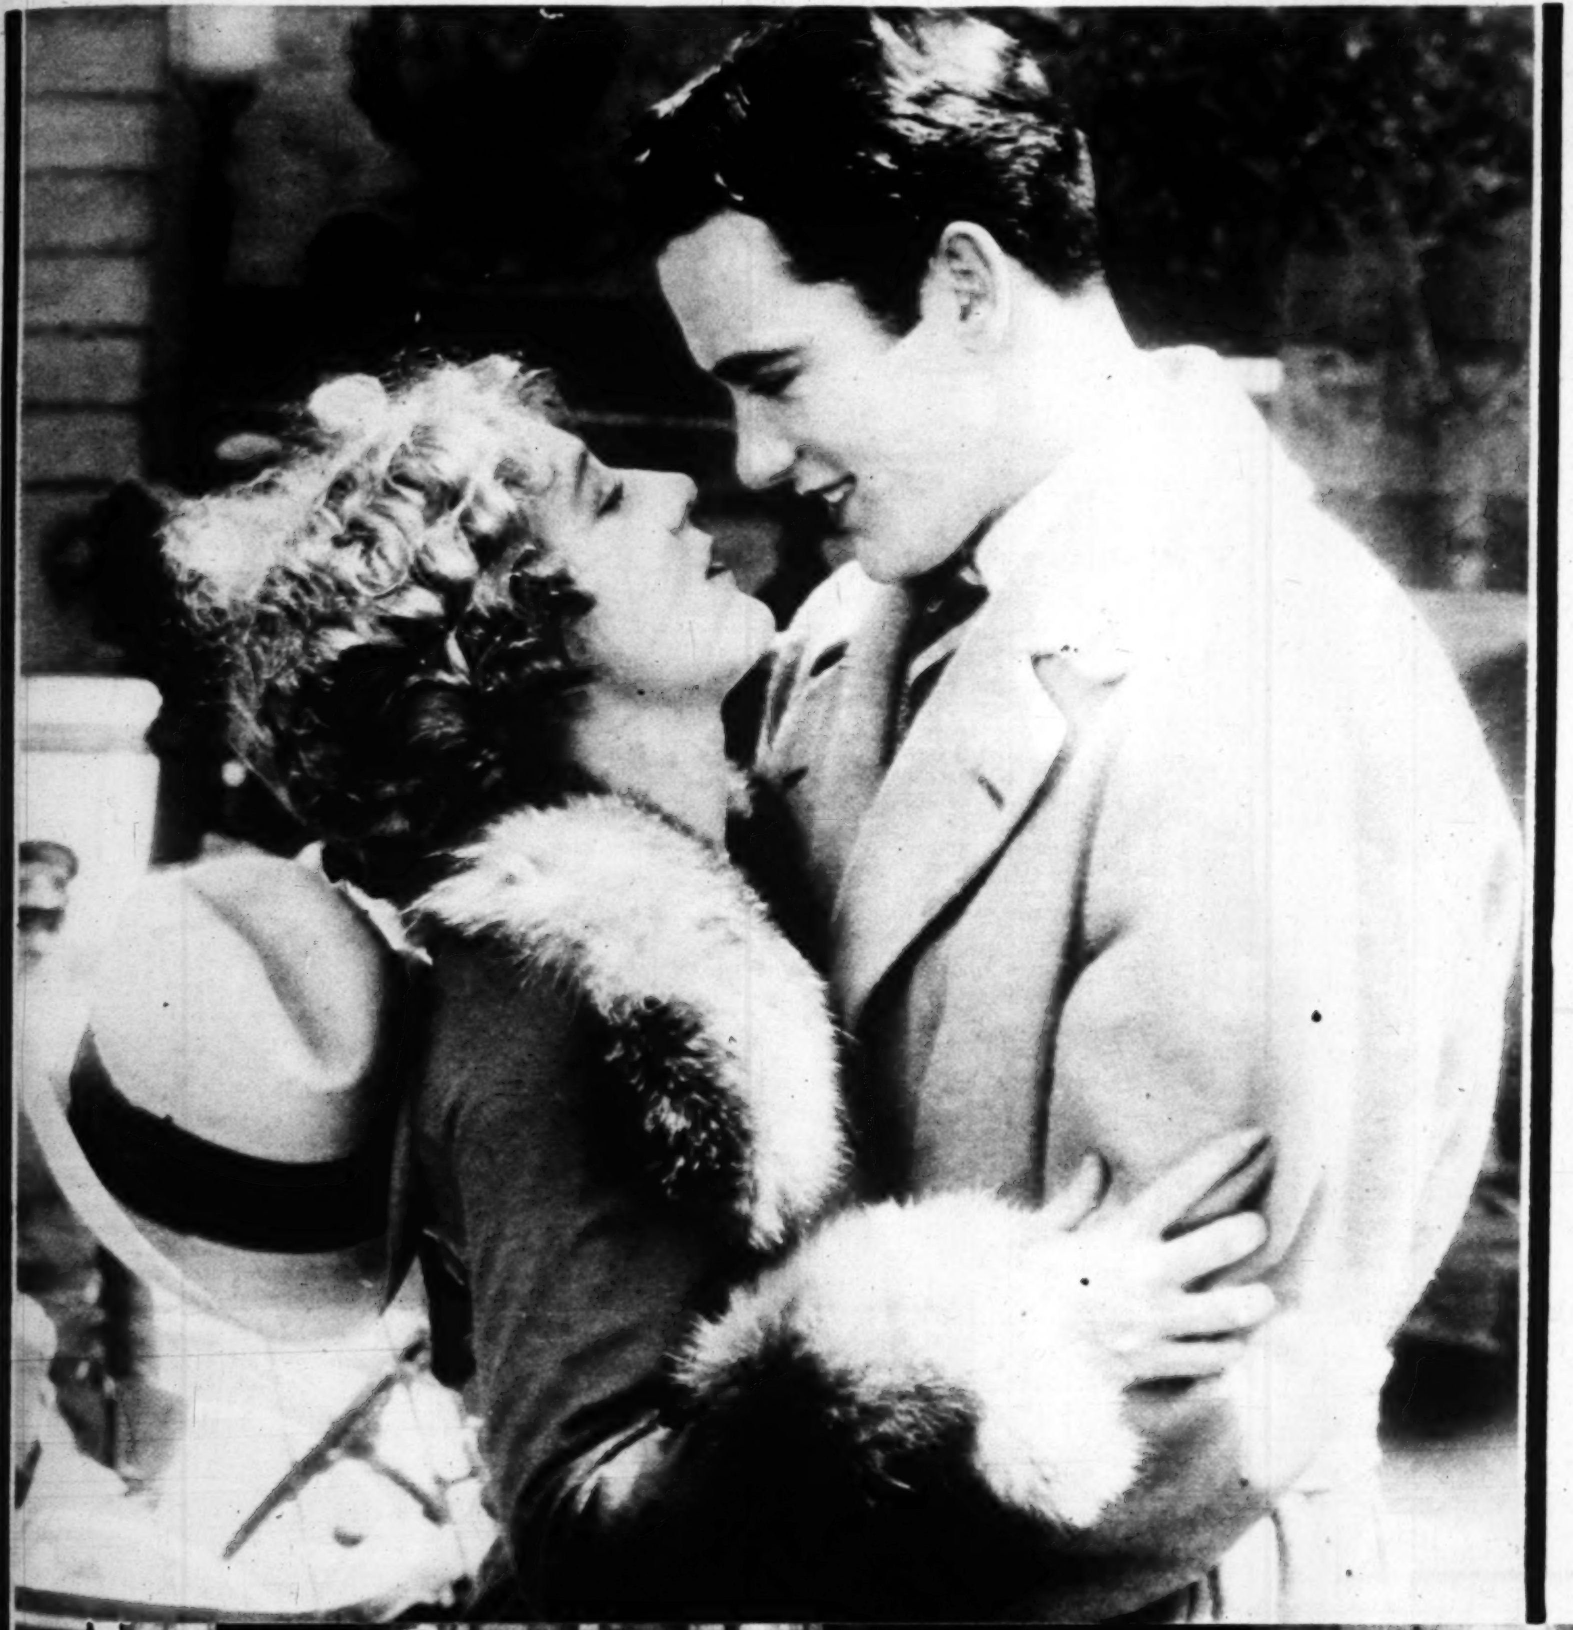
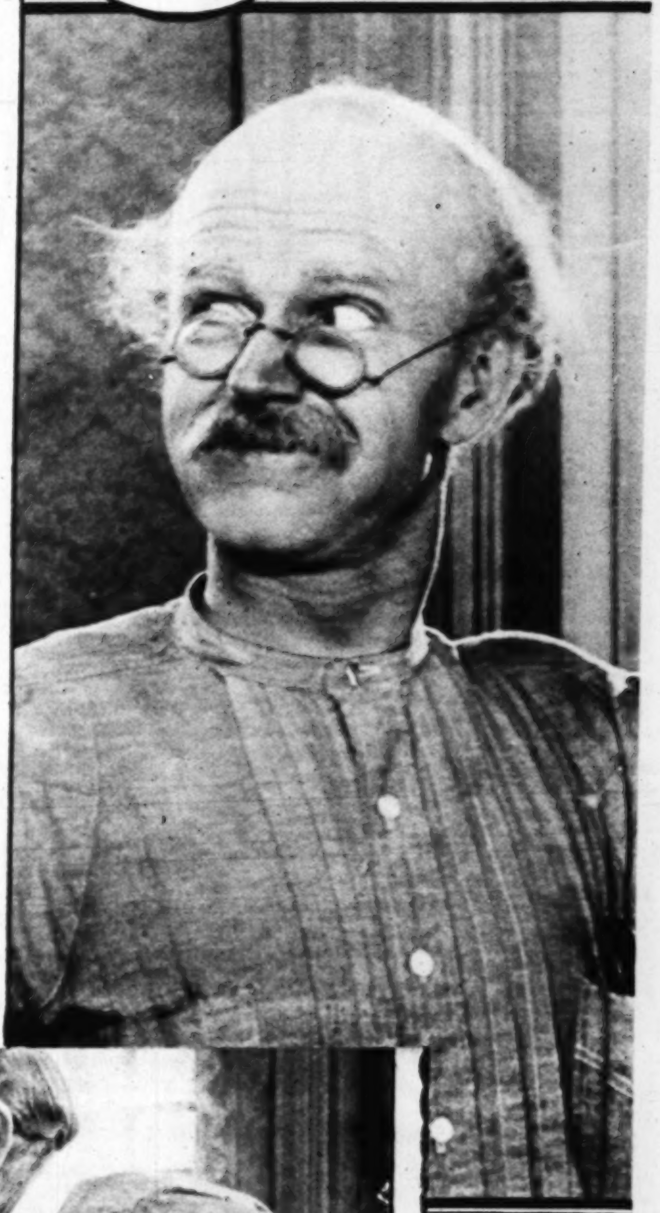
HOSTESS OF PREMIERE

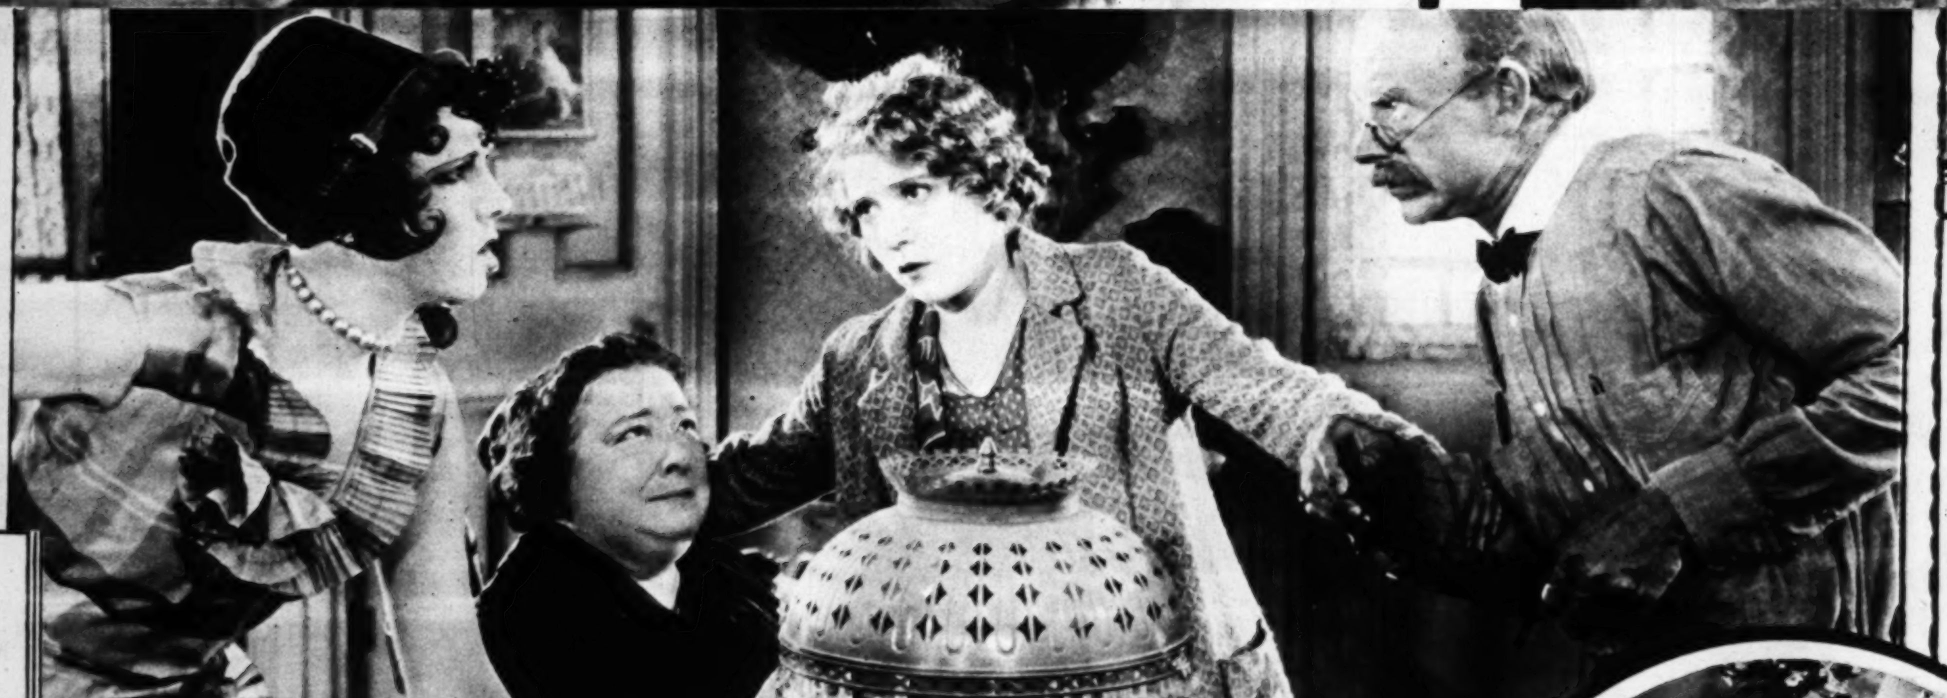
IT IS a Cinderella story of the five-and-ten cent store, but "My Best Girl" gives every promise of being one of the most popular films that Mary Pickford has made in years. The first showing here is to occur simultaneously with the opening of the new United Artists Theater this week. The story of the production was written for Miss Pickford by Kathleen Norris, and presents her in a somewhat romantic role. In any event, the love theme is dominant, but there is much action and comedy in this feature—and what do you suppose?—not a single little youngster. First time in quite a while.



Mary hasn't been seen in a romantic screen episode like this for several seasons. The gentleman taking part in the affectionate demonstration is Charles Rogers.—Photo by Dahms.



Lucien Littlefield's characterization of the mail-carrier very nearly steals "My Best Girl."



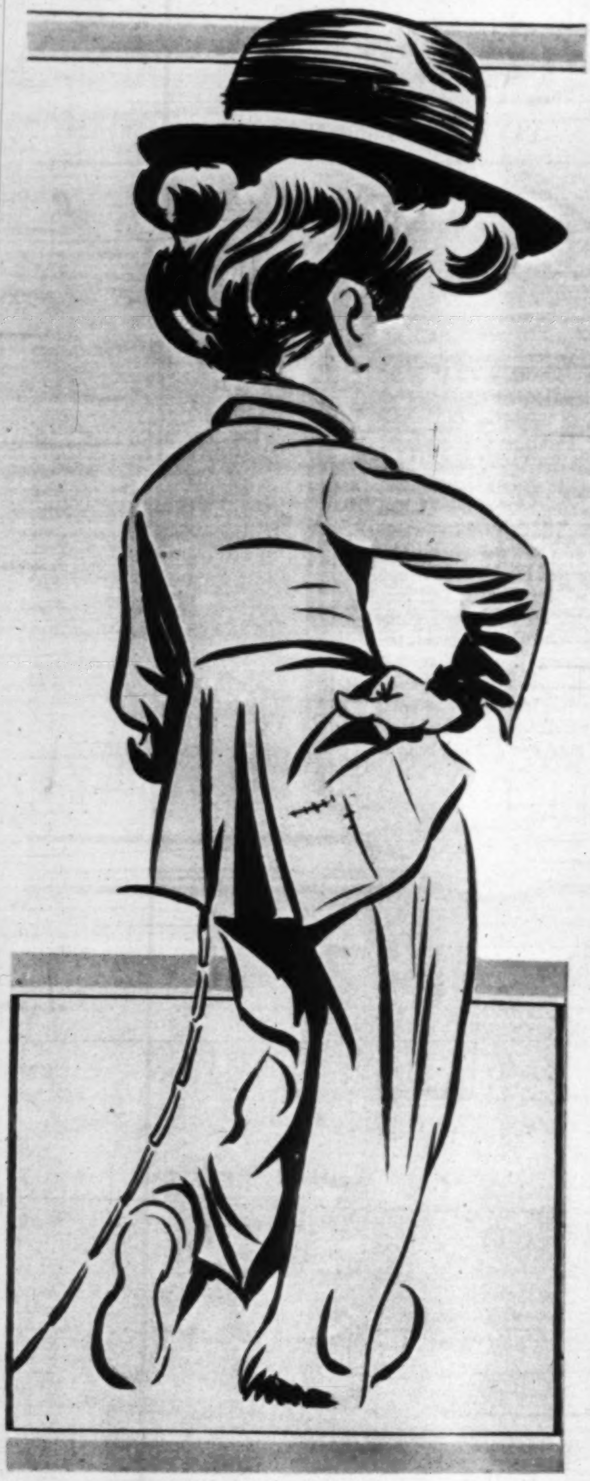
Mary's family is the source of much merriment throughout the picture. Carmelita Geraghty as the sister and Sunshine Hart and Lucien Littlefield in the roles of mother and father are perfectly cast.

Below—Avonne Taylor is the little rich girl, who is the rival of the heroine. Does she lose out? Well, now, that's too easy.

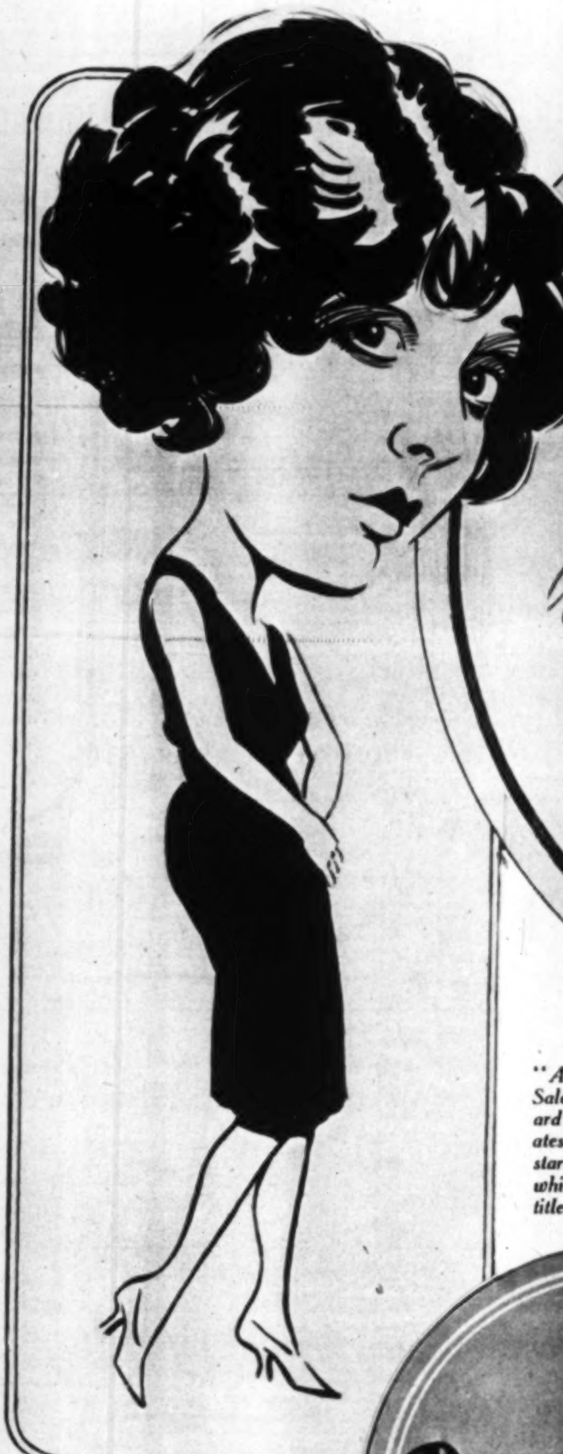
Those scenes in which Miss Pickford and Rogers window shop on a rainy night are pictorially effective.

Personalities

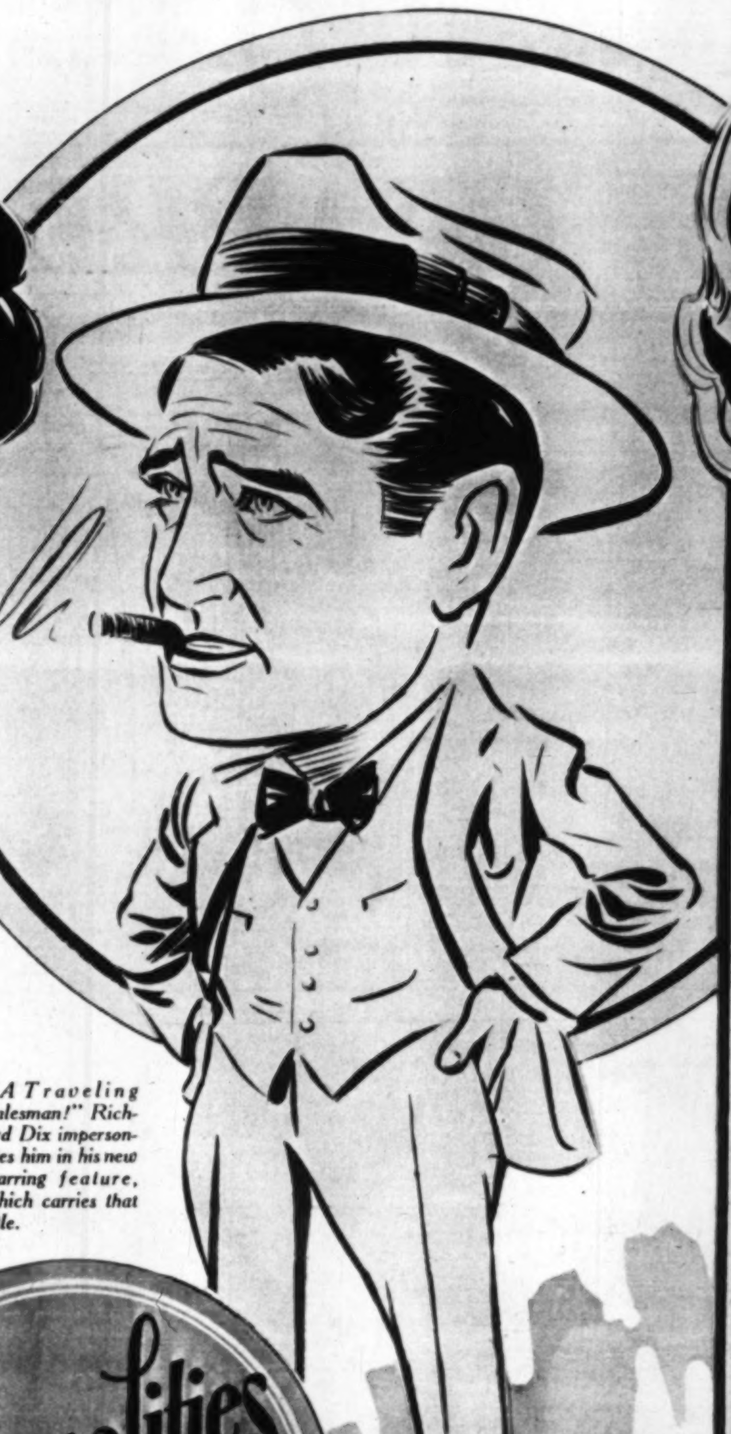
BY BERT LEVY.



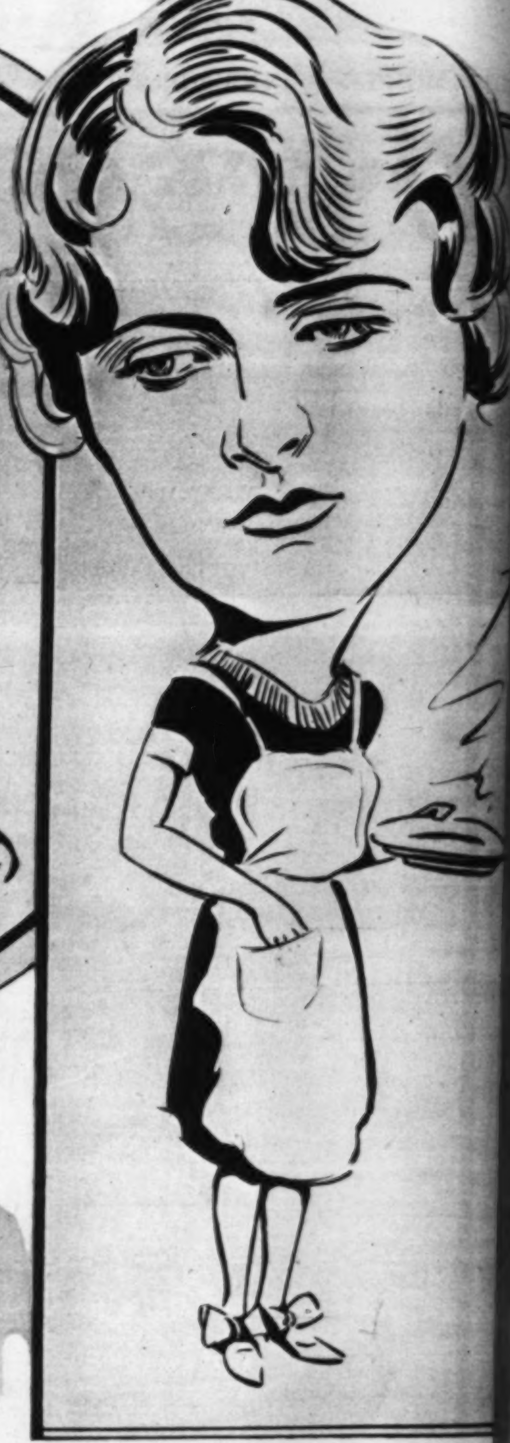
Guess as many times as you please the identity of this figure—but it still remains that artist of comedy, Mr. Charles Spencer Chaplin, as he is seen in "The Circus."



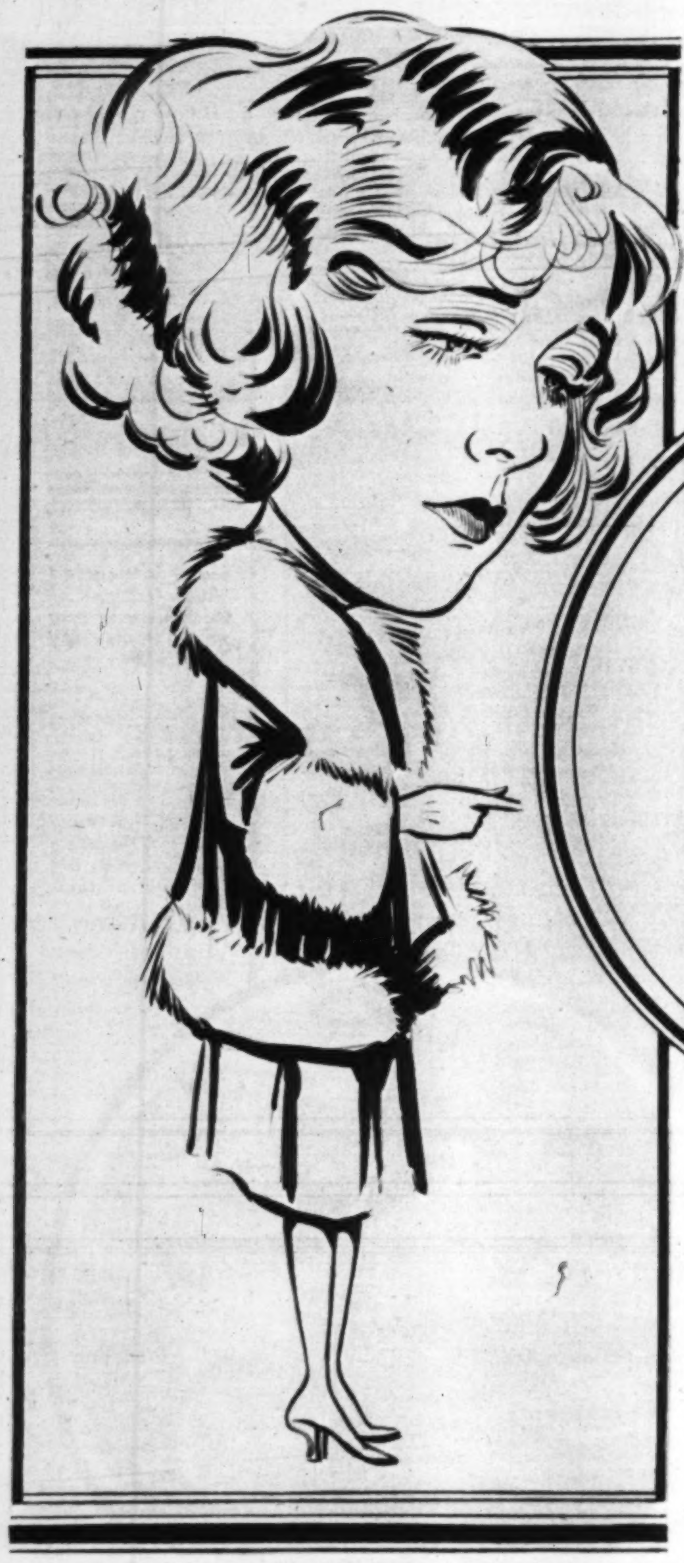
There's no doubt about it, Madge Bellamy is developing into more of a super-flapper each successive production. The latest is called "Soft Living."



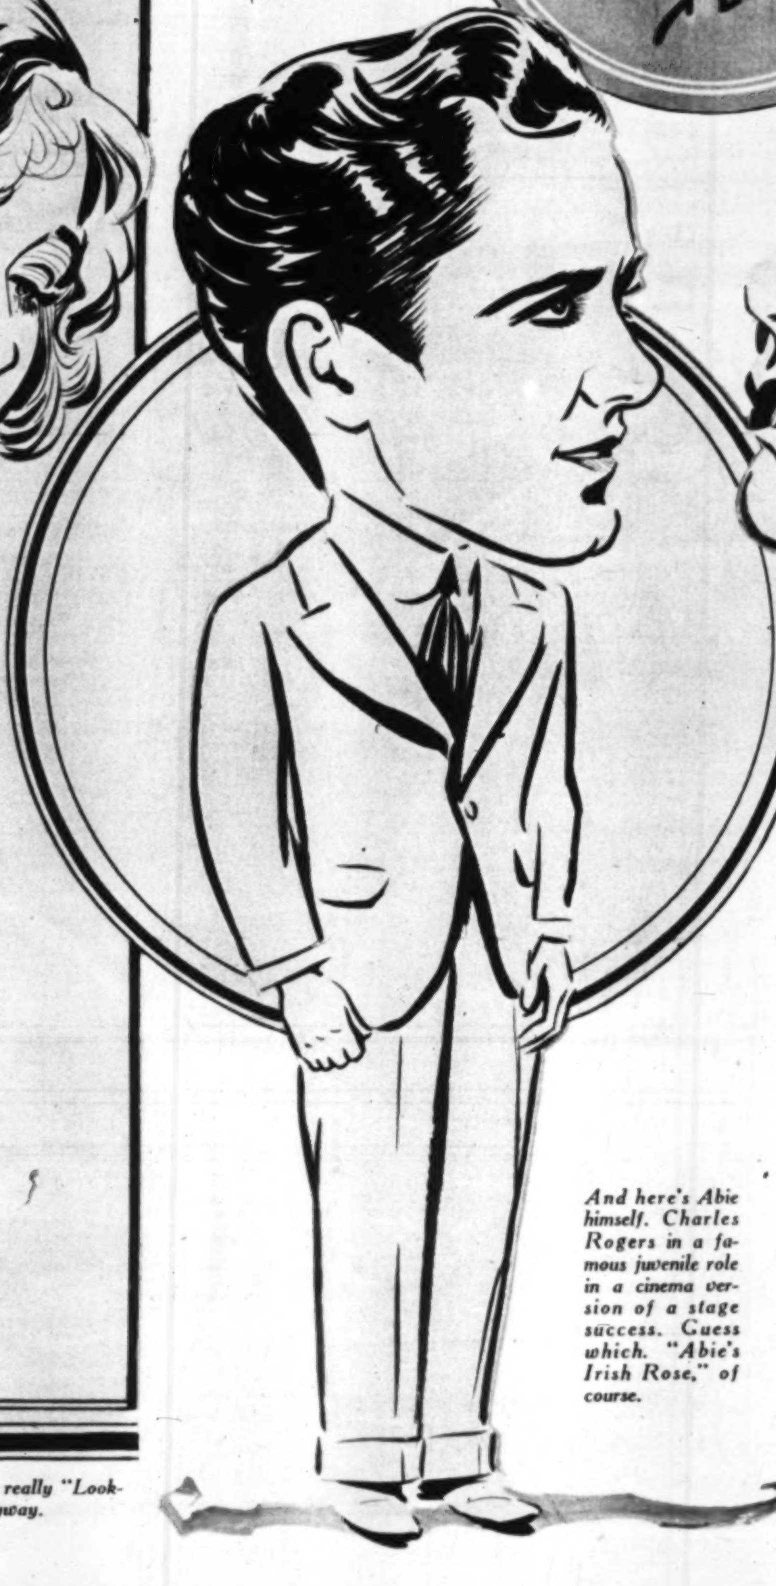
"A Traveling Salesman!" Richard Dix impersonates him in his new starring feature, which carries that title.



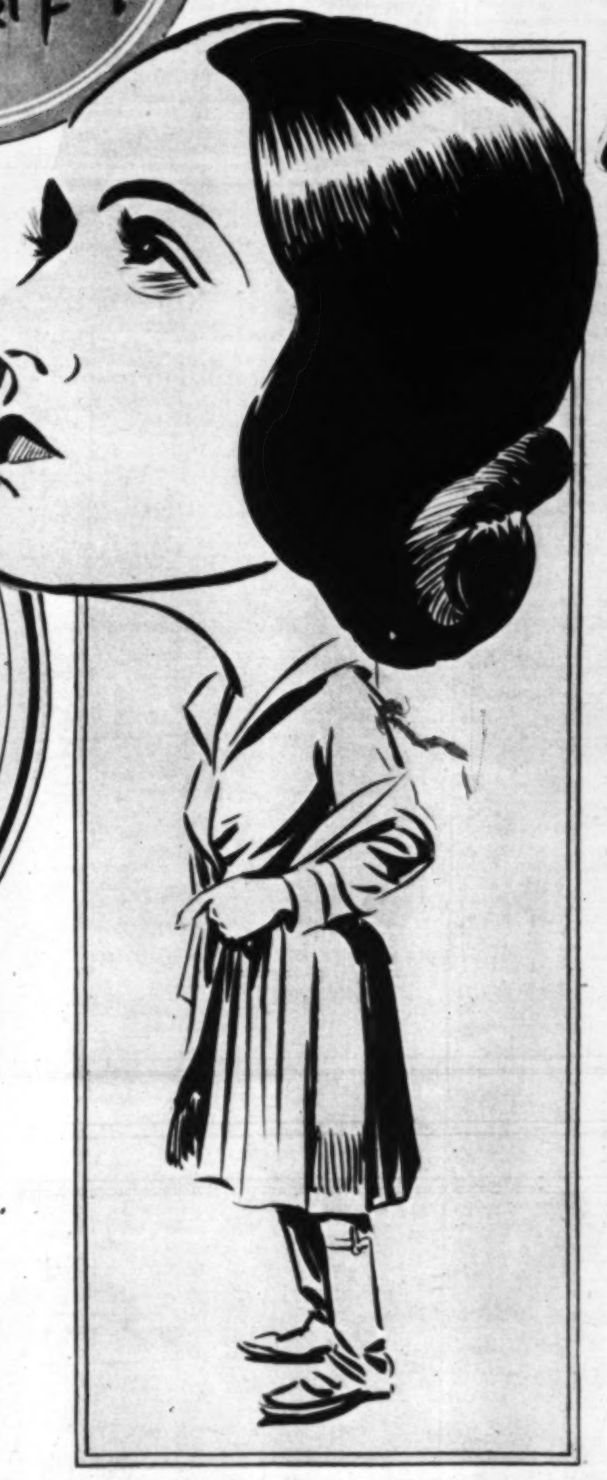
We don't know just what connection there is between the plate of steaming soup and the name of Lois Moran's new film, "Sharp Shooters"—but it looks as if Miss Moran were doing interesting characterization.



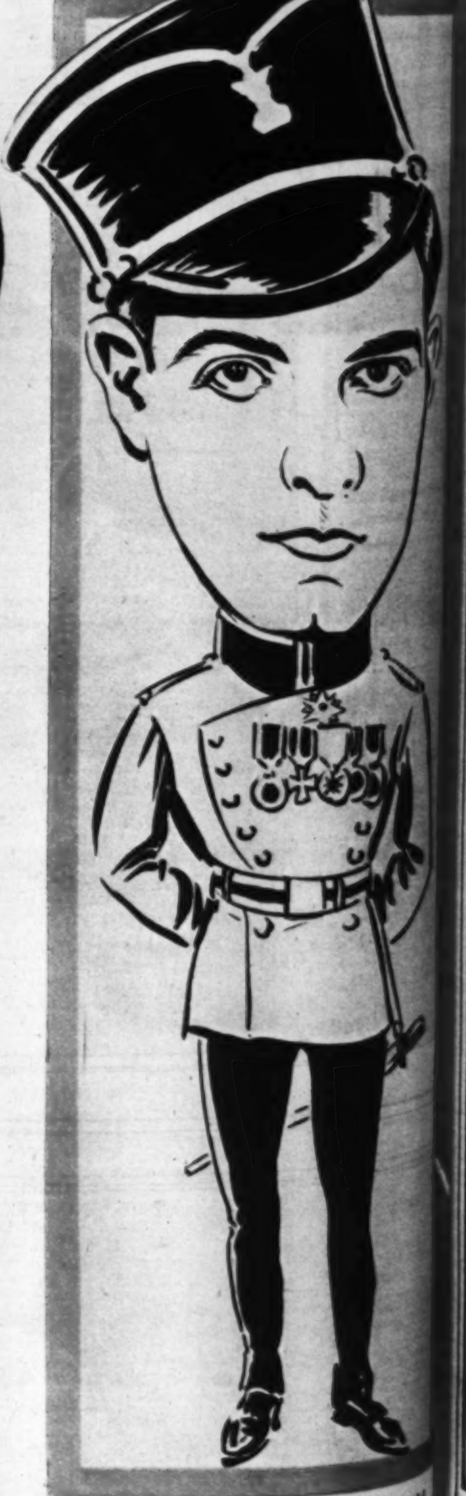
One might believe from this sketch that Esther Ralston is really "Looking for Trouble." That's the title of her new picture, anyway.



And here's Abie himself. Charles Rogers in a famous juvenile role in a cinema version of a stage success. Guess which. "Abie's Irish Rose," of course.



Dolores del Rio scarcely seems the Spanish type here. Her role in "The Trail of '98" is inclined to be more sombre than those she has played in the past.



Having played a prince in "Old Heidelberg," Ramon Novarro is now a king in "His Night," a romantic affair of the mythical Balkans.

GISH STARRING FEATURE

Attains high points of drama

Victor Seastrom's Direction Lends Notable Dignity to Story of Texas Plains

By EDWIN SCHALLERT

Montague Love provides the human menace, and gives an able performance.

Clash and conflict rage through "Wind." A jealousy motif prompts this scene between Miss Gish and Dorothy Cumming.

Lillian Gish gives one of her most dramatic interpretations in the Seastrom impression of the harsh and tempest-swept life of a western region.

Lars Hansen proves again his acting qualifications in the role of the girl's husband.

A BLEAK Texas plain, tempest-ridden, serves as the background for the production of "Wind," which Victor Seastrom directed, and which stars Lillian Gish. It is a story of conflict with the primitive, very unusual in theme and treatment, that merits respect and admiration for its sincerity as an achievement. It is one picture that may be described as both powerful and different, and of distinct appeal to those who loyally believe in the films' ability to attain high artistic seriousness.

This picture, perhaps, belongs in a general class with those that are not considered typical box-office. In essence its story is tragic, although the actual ending is conveniently, though not conventionally happy. Those who like the work of Lillian Gish will find her role one of notable acting opportunities.

It is the direction that preeminently impresses. It has tremendous sweep, dramatic strength and atmosphere.

One cannot tell the story itself with any great degree of adequacy, because so much of it lies in the picture's environment of setting. Somehow I keep thinking of Edith Wharton's novel, "Ethan Frome," which I read some years ago, while reviewing this picture. There is no actual resemblance, but it might be said to belong to the same general category.

Actually, "Wind" is the story of a young Virginia girl, simple and inexperienced, and her adventure into a lonely and isolated section of Western Texas, a land cold, barren and unfriendly. She goes there because left penniless by the death of her parents to join a cousin who lives with his wife and children in the midst of this barren solitude.

There is a monotonous cruelty to the climate. A casual acquaintance on the train traveling westward first informs her of this, and relates to her how oftentimes women go mad under the stress of the ceaseless storms which beat upon the region.

There are many motifs in the plot. The man whom the girl meets on the train plays a big part in the story development. He is, in fact, its human villain, the wind itself naturally being the major menace. The wife of the girl's cousin is jealous of her and forces her to leave. She is thrust upon the necessity of marriage. The heavy, a rich cattleman, has proposed to her, but she discovers that he already has a wife. There is an inference, though it is vague, that his deception actually leads to her betrayal. She then marries one of two rough-cut plainsmen who are her suitors. The fact that she is not in love with him gives the impetus to the main dramatic events of the picture, which culminate in her murder of the cattleman.

This is a bald telling of the plot, since much of what happens, and the quality of what happens arises from the characterizations. Frances Marion's treatment is in large part undoubtedly responsible for the picture's many excellences, and with Seastrom's direction has dignified it at every point, removing it far from the realm of ordinary melodrama. The elemental surge of the wind itself hovers about the plot unfoldment, resistless and fateful. There are a few moments here and there, perhaps, when this influence becomes mechanical and theatrical.

The ending of the picture leaves one a little dissatisfied. The girl's acceptance of a projected future happiness after the killing of the cattleman lacks something of conviction.

Miss Gish's performance at just a few moments is inclined to overdo the theatrical, but it is, all in all, an amazingly fine interpretation, revealing her range as a screen actress, a title which she, one of a few, truly justifies.

Lars Hansen and Montague Love are primary figures among the men, both giving highly acceptable portrayals. Hansen is a rare and adequate actor, though his role is, in this instance, perhaps not quite as notable as usual. Dorothy Cumming gives a sinister note to the wife, while William Orlamond affords some comedy. Edward Earle is the heroine's cousin. The children are played by Carmencita Johnson, Laon Ramon, and Billy Kenty Schaefer. John Colton wrote the titles of "Wind." The picture was adapted from a novel by Dorothy Scarborough.

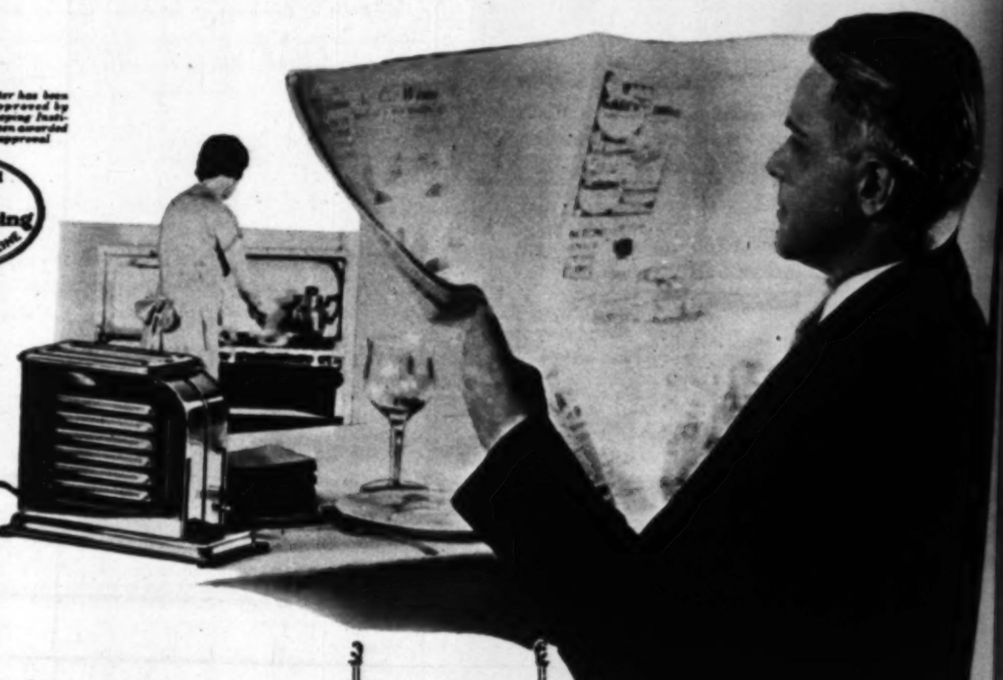
A new Xmas Gift!

brings perfect toast 365 mornings of the yea

The Toastmaster has been tested and approved by Good Housekeeping Institute, and has been awarded this seal of approval

Tested and Approved by Good Housekeeping Institute conducted by Good Housekeeping Magazine



You can leave the room ... read the paper ... forget the Toastmaster entirely ...

it always makes perfect golden-brown slices of toast

This ingenious Toastmaster is utterly different from any toaster you have ever used. For it takes a piece of bread, quickly transforms it into the most delicious slice of toast you've ever eaten—then automatically delivers it, and turns off the current: Does this whether you watch or not. And the toast can't burn.

All you have to do is: 1. Drop a slice of bread into the oven slot. 2. Press down the two levers. This lowers the bread into the oven, automatically turns on the current, and regulates the length of time the bread is to be toasted. 3. Pop! Up comes the toast when it's done to your individual liking, and the current is automatically turned off.

1 Drop a slice of bread into the oven slot

2 Press down the two levers. This lowers bread into oven and automatically turns on current

3 Pop! Up comes the toast when it's done and the current is automatically turned off

Both sides are toasted at the same time in an enclosed oven. Thus all the goodness and flavor of the bread are sealed in—and the toast is always piping hot when served. It takes only half the time to make toast this way as it does when each side is toasted singly.

Give Toastmasters for Christmas

Finished in flashing nickel, the Toastmaster makes an attractive piece for the server or dining table. Give at least one Toastmaster for Christmas. Your Electric Light Company, department store or electric dealer now has it. TOASTMASTER

A DIAMOND BRACELET? BLONDES, HERE'S HOW!

In which Ruth Taylor, Lorelei in "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," illustrates in six poses just how to accomplish the fiendish deed.

Ooooo! I saw the most beeee-utiful bracelets in Whachamacallum's window today. I mean they were really gorgeous—the sort of souvenir any girl likes to get.

It's discouraging about bracelets. I mean they really go out of fashion faster than haircuts. I'm the sort of girl that's never discontent, but really, I mean, when one's bracelets are six months old it's tedious.

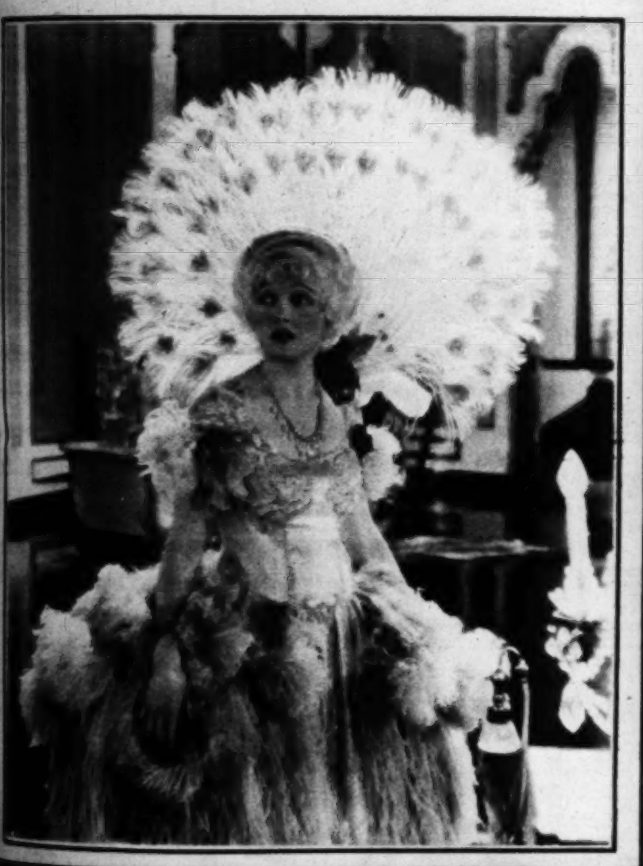
But I can't feel discouraged long. I mean really with a birthday only two weeks off I feel more cheerful. You know, everyone gives a girl souvenirs for birthdays. I mean it's really thrilling to have a birthday.

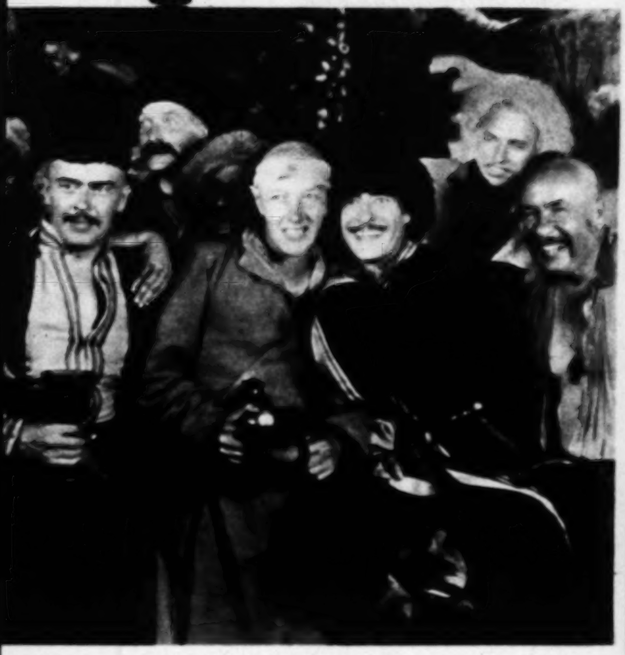
You mean I'm hinting for a new bracelet? I mean really that's horrid of you. All men in the cement business don't seem to have any sort of feelings. I really mean they are hard. I really feel quite indignant.

You've really hurt my feelings dreadfully. I mean I could cry, actually. One might think I were a gold digger, the way you talk. You're positively cruel, I mean really despicable.

You adorable! I really knew you would want to give a girl a souvenir for a birthday present. Yes, it's the bracelet second from the left in Whachamacallum's window. I really think I had better help you find it, I mean there are really dozens of bracelets in that window, you might get confused and select one with smaller diamonds. —Photos by Richee.

SCREEN SPINS



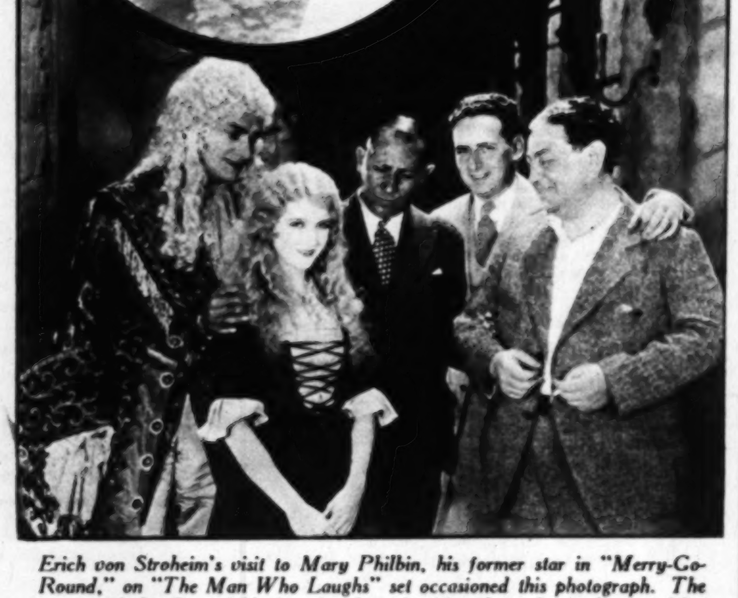


John Gilbert's new picture, "The Cossacks," should be an interesting one—and should reveal him in an essentially romantic role. He is glimpsed here with a few of those who bear him company in the production. A study of these types alone assures its colorfulness. —Photo by Manalt.

It looks as though Corinne Griffith's return to the screen, after an absence of almost a year, will be in a dazzling sort of role, as this picture well reveals. "The Garden of Eden," her first for United Artists, presents her as an actress.

Now what could be more perfect than this, a "story conference" between star and scenarioist on a warm autumn day! John Farrow goes over the script of "The Blue Danube," an original by him, with the story's star, Leatrice Joy.—Photo by Welborn.

When Lenore Coffee, the scenario writer, visited Hawaii recently, she stopped at this historic spot, Robert Louis Stevenson's old place, "Ballantrae," at Waikiki Beach.



Erich von Stroheim's visit to Mary Philbin, his former star in "Merry-Go-Round," on "The Man Who Laughs" set occasioned this photograph. The group includes Conrad Veidt, who plays the title role in the production, Miss Philbin, von Stroheim, Paul Kohner, and Paul Leni, the director.

It took several years for Margaret Mann to make good in pictures—but that eventful day came when she was given the role of Grandma Bernle in "Grandma Bernle Learns Her Letters." The part promises to be one of the outstanding ones of the year. —Photo by Autrey.

HOLLYWOOD'S MAYFAIR, MAYFAIRS!

All the film colony turns out for the brilliant club dance. Stella dines in the Agnes Christine Johnston party

Gloria Swanson made an impressive entry with her husband, the Marquis, and remained one of the most fascinating of the guests.

By GRACE KINGSLEY

"FRANK DAZEY and Agnes Christine Johnson can make a person feel at home even at the Mayfair!" exclaimed Stella. "Greater hospitality hath no one!"

It is so brilliant at the Mayfair dances that you don't stop to worry about whether you feel at home or not. But Frank and Agnes just would have to go a step further than anybody else, and make you completely and entirely happy by providing a private room for you, in which, under the soothing ministrations of a colored maid, you "rest your wraps" and have a drop of fruit punch. So that you don't enter the ballroom "cold," as the vaudeville artists say when they have to open their acts in big towns without previous showing.

"LOOK who's here!" exclaimed Stella in a stage whisper, as Charlie Chaplin made his way to the Dazey table, he being one of their guests. But Charlie didn't dance much, contenting himself with chatting to those on his right and left.

"What would Mohammed or some of those prophets of old do if they were to enter this place tonight?" speculated Charlie.

"Oh, it isn't what they'd do or say; it's what would be done to them," answered King Vidor. "They would probably be told on no account to cut their beards, but to be ready to report for pictures at the studio at eight o'clock Monday morning."

"At any rate," put in Eleanor Boardman, "they certainly wouldn't be shocked by the film people's doings here."

"And," added Estelle Taylor, "they would say that some of the picture stars didn't need any miracles done for them—that they had discovered the secret of eternal youth."

JOHN GILBERT and Greta Garbo were in the party.

"What a little shrinking violet Greta is!" confided Stella. "She doesn't look a bit like a heartwrecker, does she? She is so childlike and bland!"

Jack Gilbert and Greta seem as devoted to each other as ever, but somehow I don't think they will be married.

Katherine Albert was there with that nice Donald Castle, Katherine looking stunning.

Gloria Swanson came late with her husband, the Marquis. By mistake, she was seated in Estelle Taylor's chair, so that when Estelle came back, there were some cold and haughty looks exchanged. And when Gloria didn't rise, Estelle demanded if Gloria would please get off her cloak. Marquise or no Marquise, Gloria gave way. She was given a chair next to Harry D'Arrast, and amused us all by giving a funny little burlesque reading of D'Arrast's hand.

IT BEING Hallowe'en, Harry Crocker was dashing about the table in his bubbling comic way, demanding if we were all full of the Hallowe'en spirit, and saying he wanted to be an elf. He asked Stella if she didn't want to be a gnome.

He teased her so much about being a gnome that finally, when Harry said he would love to go out and get a collection of gates, Stella kiddingly told him she knew of one gate he could get without asking for it!

Kay Hammond was at our table, too, rustling in after her performance at the Morosco, very chic and charming.

Jane Winton had been ill, she said, but looked blooming as she danced with her husband, Charles Kenyon.

Clarence Brown was there with Dorothy Sebastian, and Ona Brown, his divorced wife, was there, so popular and so charming and beautiful to look at that I wonder if Clarence didn't feel just a little tiny bit of a regret at their parting.

WE CAUGHT a glimpse of Louise Dresser, looking very lovely, as she danced with her husband, Jack Gardner; and Betty Compson came with a crowd of friends because her husband, James Cruze, was working and couldn't get away. Jimmie doesn't care much for parties, anyway.

All the younger crowd of married film folk were there, including Laura LaPlante and William Seiter, Gertrude Olmstead and Robert Leonard, John McCormick and Colleen Moore, Norma Shearer and Irving Thalberg, Virginia Foxe and Darryl Zanuck.

We noted a lot of budding romances, too, including that of Syl Stokes and Patty Dupont, who are engaged, and who will be married sometime in the early spring, according to present plans.

AT THE next table to ours Victor Varconi and his wife were giving a party, and you might as well have been in Europe for all the English you heard spoken there. Their guests included Maria Corda and her husband, Alexander Korda, Michael Curtiz and Bess Meredyth, Paul Vincenti, a very handsome young Hungarian actor lately arrived here, and others.

Milton Sills was there with Doris Kenyon, his wife, and Warner Baxter and Winnie Bryson, Bebe Daniels, William Wellman, Eddie Lowe and Lilyan Tashman, Billie Dove and Irvin Willat, Mal St. Clair, Johnny Walker, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Cawthorn, Ruth Chatterton and John Colton, Douglas MacLean and his wife, Jean Hersholt, Winfield Sheehan, Harry Rapf, Sol Wurtzel, Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Warner, Irene Rich, Julanne Johnston, Eddie Sutherland, Eddie Carewe, Christy Cabanne, William K. Howard, and just dozens of others.

We caught a glimpse of Lowell Sherman and Janet Gaynor dancing together, and they were among the most graceful couples on the floor. They were both members of a big party, and I think Janet came with Charlie Farrell.

Sophie Tucker sang song after song, and the crowd just wouldn't let her go. Then she brought her son out to sing a song about why he wouldn't leave mamma; after which Sammy Cohen entertained with his eccentric dances, which, indeed, grew more and more eccentric as the evening wore on.

Nobody left until the sunlight began to peep in at the ballroom window, when we bade good-bye to our delightful host and hostess.

"WHETHER this guest of honor is Mrs. Clarence Brown or just Ona Brown doesn't seem to make a bit of difference," declared Stella, as we hastened upstairs at Doris Arbuckle's to remove our wraps preparatory to attending the party which Doris was giving for Ona on the latter's birthday. "She remains just as popular as ever."

Now that Mrs. Brown is back from Europe, she seems to be just the same Hollywood social magnet that she always was, and it seemed like old times to greet the same lovely crowd of girls one used to see at all her parties.

Mary Carewe was there, looking sweet as ever. She is separated from Eddie Carewe, but hasn't a word to say against him.

"He was just nervous and overworked," said Mary. "It made it hard for us to get on together, so we agreed to part. I don't see any signs of a reconciliation. I am buying a new home for myself and the babies."

Vicky Mix looks perfectly blooming, and so does Kathleen O'Connor. I would advise Paris for any lady who isn't feeling fit. It seems to be a great place for freshening one up. Vicky came wearing her riding trousers, and presumably had arrived on horseback, although I didn't see any horse tethered outside. At any rate, she looked chic.

Doris looked lovely, and is the sweetest hostess in the world. She expects Arbuckle home in February following a long vaudeville tour.

AFTER luncheon, Ona opened her gifts, of which there were something like a hundred.

Dorothy Dwan admired all the perfume bottles, and declared that she was broadcasting to the world that she wanted nothing but perfume for Christmas presents. So her friends may take notice right now.

Mrs. Finis Fox looked sweet in a black velvet gown buttoned down the back with at least a hundred bottons, which she said her husband always patiently buttoned for her.

"Well, I feel sure that that marriage won't go on the rocks, anyway," remarked Stella, "as long as he remains the perfectly kind button-up-the-back."

Somebody gave Ona a lovely bunch of sachet bags, which Mary Ford remarked practically, could, of course, be distributed by Ona among the gifts she presents to other people at Christmas.

Kathleen Key was there, and Jackie Saunders, Mrs. Charles Dorian, Grace Gordon, Christine Francis, Mrs. Tod Browning, and a number of others.

AFTER the presents were opened, the dining room, which had been closed with a sign "Keep Out" pinned on the curtains, was opened and revealed what Doris said was an European club, and maybe it was.

At any rate it was amusing. There were a toy roulette table, a dice table, besides the usual bridge tables, and there were signs on the walls which read:

"Proceeds of this party, if any, to be given to the Community Chest. Lose, girls, till it hurts"; and another, "Don't Call This Joint!"

Nobody left until finally pino servants began to ried for fear, as Kathleen the crowd was going to dinner.

"If I could have three said Stella as we left, all up wishing to be as and Doris are."

Try this pure delightful Cleansing Oil

THE moment this soft, fragrant Quinlan Cleansing Oil touches your skin you realize how different—how much more delightful it is than any cleanser you have ever used before.

Apply Quinlan Cleansing Oil with the finger tips each night, before using your Skin Food or Camellia Cream. It liquefies as soon as it comes in contact with the warmth of your skin. It seeps down to the very depths of the pores and purifies them—removes every trace of powder, dust or rouge. Then your skin feels clean, soft, exquisitely refreshed. The pores are gloriously free to breathe.

Kathleen Mary Quinlan is a beauty specialist who believes in simple, natural methods. Only Nature's own wholesome ingredients are used in making Quinlan Cleansing Oil. It is wonderfully effective — carefully blended from herb oils and fragrant flower extracts. Use Quinlan Cleansing Oil regularly for a week and you will never willingly be without it.

Quinlan Cleansing Oil—particularly beneficial for dry, sensitive skin - - - 1.00, 2.00, 3.50, 6.50 a jar.

I Lost That Fat
So Easily—So Quickly

Many people all about you now rejoice in slender figures. Wherever you look you can see that excess fat has largely disappeared.

Some have lost fat painfully—by starvation or abnormal exercise. But they found these methods slow and hard, and often dangerous. A great many others have gained the results in an easy pleasant way, modern and scientific.

This modern method is embodied in Marmola prescription tablets, now used for 20 years. They combat a cause of excess fat discovered by modern research. That cause is not overeating or too little exercise, but lack of a certain substance in the system.

For two decades Marmola has helped to bring new beauty, new health and vitality to those who were over-fat.

Those people have told the results to others, so the use has spread. Now in every circle you can see the results of this easy, pleasant method.

The use of Marmola requires no abnormal exercise or diet, but moderation helps. Simply take four tablets daily until the weight comes down to normal. Every box contains the formula, also an explanation of results, to banish any fear of harm.

Go try Marmola—you owe that to yourself. Learn what so many know about it. Watch its results for a month, and you will be glad in many ways that you found it out. Order a box now before you forget it.

Marmola prescription tablets are sold by all druggists at $1 per box. Any druggist who is out will get them from his jobber for you.

LOVE -She is so gran'!

Now what more touching love scene could one desire than this serenade tableau, in which Wheezer plunks his mandolin right merrily for the benefit of little Mildred Kornman, sister of Mary Kornman, former leading lady for "Our Gang"?

No wonder the youth of the country decide to become movie actors. Just take a look—a good look—at Glenn Tryon, in one of his many scenes with Marian Nixon for "Meet the Prince." He gets paid, too.

This must be true love, indeed—so early in the morning! Monte Blue's protestations of affection are evidently fully appreciated by Betty Bronson in "Brass Knuckles," for his act seems to be getting over "big."

What Mrs. Cummings and Mrs. Smith found out about the taste of cooking fats

"I TASTED Crisco—as I am particular what shortening I use in baking," says Mrs. Florence Cummings of Santa Monica, "I hesitated, however, before tasting it, as the average shortening on the market is unpleasant to taste. Imagine my surprise to find how sweet and fresh it tasted, like unsalted butter.

"First I baked a delicious cake, whiter and finer grained than any I had baked previously. As the cake was such a success made with the new shortening I tried it in making waffles, none of the family knowing I used Crisco instead of butter. Each one spoke of how unusually crisp and delicious the waffles were that morning."

Mrs. Cummings is one of the many hundreds of housekeepers who have taken us at our word and followed our suggestion to test Crisco by tasting it right out of the can. Mrs. Ruth Smith of Seattle was just as delighted as Mrs. Cummings and wrote—

"I tasted Crisco as you suggested and then I took another taste. I liked it. No wonder, I said to myself, that my cooking is so good when I use this delicious shortening. I have used it since it appeared on the market about fifteen years ago. We are a family of four and I get a 6-pound pail and it keeps perfectly till I am ready for another."

If you want the surprise of your whole cooking experience, I suggest that you put a little Crisco on the tip of a spoon; on the tip of another, a little of any other fat. Taste first Crisco; then the other fat.

Did you ever imagine there could be such a striking difference in the taste of cooking fats? Think what an improvement Crisco's sweetness and freshness will make in your cakes, pies, biscuits and fried foods.

Then use Crisco in one of the tested recipes I give you on this page. In frying, notice that Crisco, at proper temperatures, does not smoke or flood your home with cooking odors. Once you discover how Crisco improves your cooking, I am sure you will realize why Crisco is preferred by more Coast women than any other brand of shortening.

Drop Muffins

by MRS. FRED W. CHAPMAN, Sacramento

Deep fried, for breakfast, luncheon or supper. Instead of heating your oven and waiting a half hour for baked muffins, try frying them some morning. It takes only about five minutes, and they are delicious with your coffee.

¾ cup of graham or whole wheat flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
¾ cup bread flour
2 tablespoons sugar
1 egg beaten
2 tablespoons melted Crisco
½ cup milk

Mix egg and sugar. Sift flour, salt and baking powder together. Add alternately with milk and stir thoroughly. Add melted Crisco and drop by teaspoonfuls into hot Crisco, 350° to 360° F. or when a small piece of bread browns in 60 seconds. Fry until brown and thoroughly cooked. Test with a toothpick.

Fricadellen

by MRS. K. S. HILL, Portland

You can easily put them together while doing up the morning work and fry in hot deep Crisco in two minutes at meal time.

2 cups cold cooked beef, chopped fine
1 tablespoon minced onion
2 beaten eggs
1 teaspoon salt
2 slices bacon, chopped
2 teaspoons lemon juice
2 tablespoons parsley, minced
2 tablespoons tomato ketchup

Mix all together. Shape into balls. Drop in hot Crisco 360° F. or when a small piece of bread browns in 60 seconds. Fry until brown. Serve with tomato, cream or brown sauce. Serves 4 to 5 people.

Hood River Doughnuts

by MRS. IRA D. GRAY, Hood River

Fried in Crisco they will not be greasy or have the slightest taste of fat. In tightly covered Crisco tins they will keep fresh at least a week.

1 cup hot mashed potatoes
2 tablespoons Crisco
3 cups pastry flour
⅓ teaspoon nutmeg
⅓ teaspoon salt
4 teaspoons baking powder

Break two eggs into a cup and fill with sweet milk. Mix Crisco with the hot potatoes, stir in sugar, nutmeg and salt. Next stir in eggs and milk, last the flour and baking powder well sifted together. Use more flour as needed to roll. Cut and fry in deep hot Crisco, 350° to 360° F. or when a small piece of bread browns in 60 seconds. Fry until brown and well done. Test with a toothpick. Makes about 30 doughnuts.

Fried Oysters Supreme

by MRS. J. S. WOOD, Los Angeles

You can use all milk but the ketchup gives a tasty flavor. Don't be afraid to fry doughnuts in the same Crisco you have just used to fry the oysters. They will not taste of the oysters or anything else you may have fried. Nor will oysters lose their delicate flavor if they are fried in Crisco which has been used for frying other foods.

½ cup flour
½ cup ketchup
2 dozen oysters
½ cup milk
½ teaspoon salt
Cracker dust or fine dried bread crumbs

Mix flour and ketchup together, stir in milk slowly. Add salt. Drop each oyster into this batter, then roll in cracker dust or bread crumbs. Drop in deep kettle of hot Crisco 375° to 385° F. or when a small piece of bread browns in 40 seconds. Fry until a rich brown, 2 or 3 minutes. Serve very hot.

EACH night and morning massage the face and the neck thoroughly with Daggett & Ramsdell's Perfect Cold Cream to cleanse it of all dust and impurities. Then saturate a wad of absorbent cotton with Vivatone—the Perfect Skin Tonic—and with a rotary motion apply it to the skin of the face and neck. First a cool tingle, then a feeling of utter freshness as it penetrates the pores and stimulates tired muscles. Let it dry on the face before applying powder.

Vivatone, the bracing new skin tonic, is a clear liquid of topaz hue, possessing both antiseptic and astringent properties. Its consistent use will not only tone and strengthen the skin, but will improve its texture. Vivatone is for sale at all the better drug and department stores in and around the city—wherever Daggett & Ramsdell's Perfect Creams are sold—at seventy-five cents for a six-ounce bottle.

If you require a powder base apply D & R's Perfect Vanishing Cream after the daily cream-and-tonic facial. It holds the powder evenly.

Wonderful new
Nº 7½ ERECTOR $15.00
With Automobile Chassis

Here's the set I know will give you the greatest thrill you ever had. Fun! Oh, Boy! It's the real thing, and there's a thrill packed in every one of its 627 parts. Boys, in this great outfit there are hours of real sport waiting for you building automotive models. From this great assortment of distinctive, important and feature Erector parts you can build 554 models—wonderful automobile chassis, tractors, scooters, service cars, fire engines, hook and ladder, are only a few.

Packed in a cabinet and includes a complete assortment of automotive parts, many in colors; also a 92 page manual, powerful electric motor, big red steel disc wheels with oversize balloon tires, fenders, radiator hood, bumper, springs, steering wheel, truck body, heavy truck axles, cab top, boiler, digger scoop — in fact, everything to make this set a world's standard.

A. C. Gilbert

Boys! Here's the greatest book I ever compiled

Engineering Thrills

In this book you will find the final story of my years of experience since I first invented Erector—the construction set which other engineers have been kind enough to call "the world's greatest toy"—and which they consider one of the most astonishing mechanical phenomena of the age.

In this book I tell you how with Erector's new Construction parts you can build and operate (one after the other) over 1000 actual working models of Aeroplanes, Submarines, Ocean liners, Light houses, Machine guns, Automobiles, Ship cranes, Trains, Steam shovels, Traveling cranes, Wrecking hoist, Trench diggers, Locomotives, Hoisting derricks, Cantilever bridges, Suspension bridges, Well drillers, Power plants and Hoisting engines.

Think what a thrill you'll get making these wonderful working models whiz and hum with the powerful Erector electric motor. The day you get your Erector (Christmas or any other day) will be the biggest of your life. Send for my new book "Engineering Thrills" today and then tell your Dad. Don't miss this chance. Make him realize what you really want by showing him the book and then taking him to the nearest toy store to see for himself. He'll want to build models with Erector too. Aunt Dolly's Question Box

Aunt Dolly, dear:

I am that bewildering thing, called a young girl of 18. Whoever coined the expression certainly must have felt the confusion that reigns during these years. I'm all upside down and looking to you to set me straight.

For instance, Aunt Dolly, in the place where I work, there is so much gossip and ill feeling I almost hate to get up in the morning and do my so-called daily grind. I have tried to be friendly with the girls, but they return it by gossiping, and so I have turned away from them, but I'm so lonely.

Another thing. I do not approve of employees knocking their boss, not when he is doing his best. Last week, he had to let one of the girls go. She was a trouble maker and lazy, and no one could blame him for making a change, and yet, because he has climbed to the position of boss everyone seems to have it in for him. What do you think, dear Aunt Dolly?

Lots of love,

[Signed] ELEANOR VAN.

Your letter set me thinking, Eleanor, not along too happy lines. It made me remember some very drastic cases among bosses I have known, fine men and splendid women, who became the butt of unjust conversation. Those who had never made anything out of themselves, and in all probability never would, wagged idle tongues. These particular friends of mine were "slammed" with cruel venom. My own opinion is, it's mighty hard to be a boss. If too lenient, certain types walk over your neck and fail to do their work. If too strict you earn the name of slave-driver, and so it goes. Another thing, even if a person climbed to the head of his department, the world need not expect him to be perfect.

The boss has his worries, and his home life, the illness of his children, and personal tragedies to face. These may affect him in business, and why blame him? We are all human! So I say, it is fine of you, Eleanor, to stand back of your boss. Loyalty is without price.

Concerning back-biting in big concerns, that is a problem that deals with hundreds of human beings, and so becomes a complex proposition. Let us decide to be kind to all men, but not too chummy. Real friends will come to the front as you go through life. Do not allow mere acquaintances to clutter up your life.

Good books, an open hearth, plenty of music and worth-while plays, will give lots more comfort at 18 than the shallow friendship of those you may meet in business.

All my love,

AUNT DOLLY.

Aunt Dolly's Letter Box

My Dearest Aunt Dolly:

I do so wish to join The Times Junior Club. I have been at three meetings and have certainly enjoyed myself at them. I want to join because I think there is a good meaning in it. I admire the club very much and hope also to have a letter from you soon telling me more about the history of it. I would also like to be a good friend of yours and I hope you will write to me like you wrote to my companions. I also enjoy the little paper you publish and can hardly wait until I can call it my own. I would also like to own a pin with T. J. C. on it, which I hope to receive.

The girls of our club in Morenci are sending a box of odds and ends to you. I was going to bring something, but forgot it, and so it will be sent with another which will be sent later.

At the meeting today we decided to have an artists' division and also a writing division. I hope to belong to the writing division. They gave me the rules and your picture today and you can not guess how happy it made me. I'm asking again for you to write to me soon. I am giving you my grade and age at the bottom of the page.

Your new-found friend,

[Signed]

ELEANOR RAE WACKERBARTH,
Morenci, Ariz. Box No. 762. Grade 8-A; age 12 years.

Dearest Aunt Dolly:

I am writing to you to let you know I want to join the T. J. C. I have heard a lot about you and the club that seems to be very good. I went to my first meeting today and I like it very well. I think you will be getting a few letters from my friends the same time you receive this, because there is a lot that said they were going to write to you, also. I will be waiting for my T. J. C. pin and letter from you. I know you'll write to me, won't you? Love.

Your T. J. C. friend and companion,

[Signed] MAY YOUNGER,
Morenci, Ariz. Box No. 483.

Dearest Aunt Dolly:

Our Morenci T. J. C. is sending a little box for your Christmas drive. We have all donated little things and we hope you will find them useful. We are twenty. Although these are old things, we are sending another box later.

Yours truly,

[Signed]

President Wilda Ann Siebenthal; Secretary Marion Staples; Corresponding Secretary Esther Moore; Treasurer Ann McMillan; Nan Redd, Minnie Redd, Helen Siebenthal, Joyce Upperman.

P. S.: All of our members did not contribute to this box as they were not members when it was packed.

Dearest Aunt Dolly:

I received the club pin and rules and, oh! you cannot guess how happy I was! I grabbed up the big blue envelope and danced a jig. I sure was happy.

My uncle has promised my brother and myself a visit to the clubrooms as soon as anything I send in gets printed in our paper. I hope that will be soon.

I have many ideas for toys and games, and I am going to put them into use, so you see I am not going to be a back-slider.

I am sending a little poem which I hope to see in the club paper some fine Sunday morning.

"To our club,
North or south,
East or west,
Of all the clubs in the world,
Our T. J. C., is the best."

I am sending a letter from a friend of mine who wishes to become a member.

So long now,

[Signed] RAYMOND COX,
Spanish-American Institution, Gardena.

P. S.: May I please have a picture of you?

Dearest Aunt Dolly:

Isn't it fun writing folks you've never seen? I have just added another friend to my list. Her name is Martha Voris. She lives in Rancho Santa Fe and, oh! how I love her.

You must think me a very poor member of "our club" as all I do is to write you a letter once in a while, but my heart is all for the club and I think of it all the time, even though I don't write.

I go with the best crowd of girls here in San Diego. We are all around 14 and 15. We have started a club called the Pollyanna Glad Club. Its motto is "Gladness." We must always find something to be glad about. We have done it in many ways. Don't you think it's a fine club, dear Auntie?

I must close as I have to do some home work for, oh! dear me! school has started.

I hope you will answer this letter auntie and also put it in "our paper."

Your loving niece,

FLAMING YOUTH CONTEST

Just another prize-winning letter in our novel contest:

Dearest Aunt Dolly:

What a novelty! Flaming Youth looking at itself through the eyes of equally young critics. It is great, and may I add my criticism?

Perhaps you will wish to rule this letter out, but I can't help writing it. You see, Aunt Dolly, I'm a stranger here came to college fresh from the range in Wyoming, and, well, Flaming Youth is certainly stepping, that's all I can say.

As for that, it has always stepped, no matter whether it wore hoop skirts or two-by-four dresses, but there is something so infinitely sweet about a woman to me I hate to see girls, well, shall we say coarsen up? Forwardness is not likable, and no matter how fast we progress or what woman accomplishes she must always be sweet, just that, sweet. A mannish, hard-boiled girl is not really respected or attractive to fellows back where I come from. They all ride, of course, like Indians, but they're mighty good housekeepers and real, regular girls.

I don't like to see women smoke on the street corners. It is a common thing to see some polished machine slide past you in the street, with a beautiful woman driving, flicking her ashes as she speeds past. It just doesn't fit, Aunt Dolly.

A man's a man, and a woman's a woman, no matter if she sits on the judge's bench or rocks a cradle, and for me, I hope to find a girl that is just sweet. Back home in Wyoming, it is all so different. Life is simpler and much more sincere. Less froth and wild parties and trashy companionships. It doesn't pay, Aunt Dolly; that is the tinsel of life, not the gold.

Maybe I'm just a big stupid cowpuncher; that's what the flappers will say who read this letter, but perhaps some of them will remember we boys in the open are not such rubes as people think we are. We have a pretty good balance, because life in the open demands it. We have more time to think and reason things out, and I really do consider youth too flippant, too bold, too fresh.

Boys will kid girls along and kiss them, and talk behind their backs. They all do it nowadays, and if I had a sister, you can bet I'd wise her up to a few things.

Must sign off. You shook hands with me once at your wonderful '49 party. Remember?

Admiringly yours,
(Signed) JOHN ROTHER.

FORM LITERARY-ART PARTNERSHIP

This improvised passenger coach, as I later found out, goes by the name of "Dinky."

But in the meantime, while I was taking in all the unusual scenery, two negroes seated themselves beside me, each seeming to get quite a "kick" out of my evident discomfiture.

With this company, the train left Ola, and after a twenty-mile ride over beautiful, but soggy, country, we safely arrived in Dardenelle. The possibilities of spending two hours and a half seemed somewhat better there than in Ola, so stepping off the train and getting my baggage rechecked to Russelville, I started off to the Dardenelle-Russelville station. It was somewhat farther than I had expected, and after walking for several blocks and still no station, the muscles in my arms were creaking with pain, and my legs seemed to refuse to go any farther.

But at last I reached the depot, and opening the door "flopped" down on the nearest seat, allowing by abused muscles a few moments' rest. After buying another ticket, I checked my bags and left the depot in search of a cafe.

After walking for a block or so, I noticed some people in a sedan looking at me rather queerly, and talking among themselves. I looked at the elderly woman in the car closely, and from dim recollections of pictures I had seen, I recognized her as my aunt, and at the same moment she recognized me. With a glad exclamation of surprise we ran toward each other. Getting into the car, they all began questioning me, and amid much chattering they explained that they had come to Dardenelle to meet me, knowing how hard the change would be, but had missed the train and were just on the verge of returning home.

An hour later I was eating the belated dinner at my aunt's home in Russelville. Laughingly I told her of my chagrin and amazement at their mode of traveling in Arkansas, and gave the description of my trip to them as I have now given it to you.

And readers, though Arkansas is a State to be laughed at by most people, I was truly sorry when the three months' visit had elapsed, although glad to return to California, the best State in the Union.

Melon Patch Ghosts

BY FRANK A. SECORD

One season Old Man Brown's melon patch was robbed by some cross-country autoists and he blamed the theft and destruction upon some lads of the near-by village, much to the wrath of the youngsters. "We'll grow our own melons next year!" angrily shouted Spike Kennedy, spokesman for the accused boys, when they were taken before the town justice of the peace where they were discharged.

"If you do I'll see that somebody robs it!" Old Man Brown declared.

Spike and his chums were as good as their word. They scented some fun and adventure in the idea and in a patch of ground a little way out of town they planted their own melons the next spring.

Old Man Brown was a vindictive fellow and the boys knew it. They were very certain that he would make matters as uncomfortable as he could for them, that he would resent competition to his melon sales and that he would likely make good his threat to the effect that the patch of the youngsters would be robbed.

One Saturday afternoon as Billy Woods and Jud Cross went to the postoffice for mail, they found Spike there. The lad was apparently reading some notices on a bulletin-board; but when Billy and Jud edged closer Spike placed a finger over his lips, frowned and the two boys slid out into the street and "beat it," to later meet their chum at the latter's garage.

"Old Man Brown was standing near the window," Spike told his friends. "He was telling a farmer neighbor all about what he intends doing to our melons, the old skin! I got it all, too!"

Therefore the three boys resolved themselves into a committee and held a meeting to decide upon a scheme of defense. They had plenty of time, for it lacked several weeks before melons would be of any consequence. So, from that time on the boys planned.

Daisy Roberts, the village telephone operator, was quite a crony of Spike's and Daisy was let into the secret. She knew everything that was going on in the vicinity and readily promised to "listen in" when Old Man Brown called the neighbor he was seen talking to in the postoffice. In this way the lads hoped to get an inkling of the proposed raid.

In Spike's garage a bundle of stuff was ready for the time which was, the boys felt, to come sooner or later.

One evening, therefore, Daisy called Spike and when she finished tipping him off to a conversation that Old Man Brown had with a neighbor, the three lads skihoodled to their melon patch. Sim Barnes, the local light company's lineman; generously offered aid when asked; and he, with his kit, was taken to the scene at sundown of the fateful day.

Sim had an uncontrollable fit of giggles when he discovered what the scheme was. From a pole-line that followed a road not far distant, Sim strung a covered wire to the melon patch. That was all he had to do, except make the connection when Spike and his chums were ready.

Darkness came that evening, as it comes every evening. Spike and his friends were ready for a certain Old Man Brown and anybody he might bring with him to molest the precious fruit.

It was about 9 p.m. and the moon was just reddening the sky when the three boys and Sim Barnes, hidden in a clump of bushes a short distance away where their car was parked, spied two dark forms skulking along between the road and the wire fence that separated it from the melon patch. Through the fence the forms silently crept and Spike couldn't help whispering to Sim Barnes, that it was a pity they had not thought of "loading" the fence with electricity. "I'd like to see the sneaks do a dance right now!" sneered Spike.

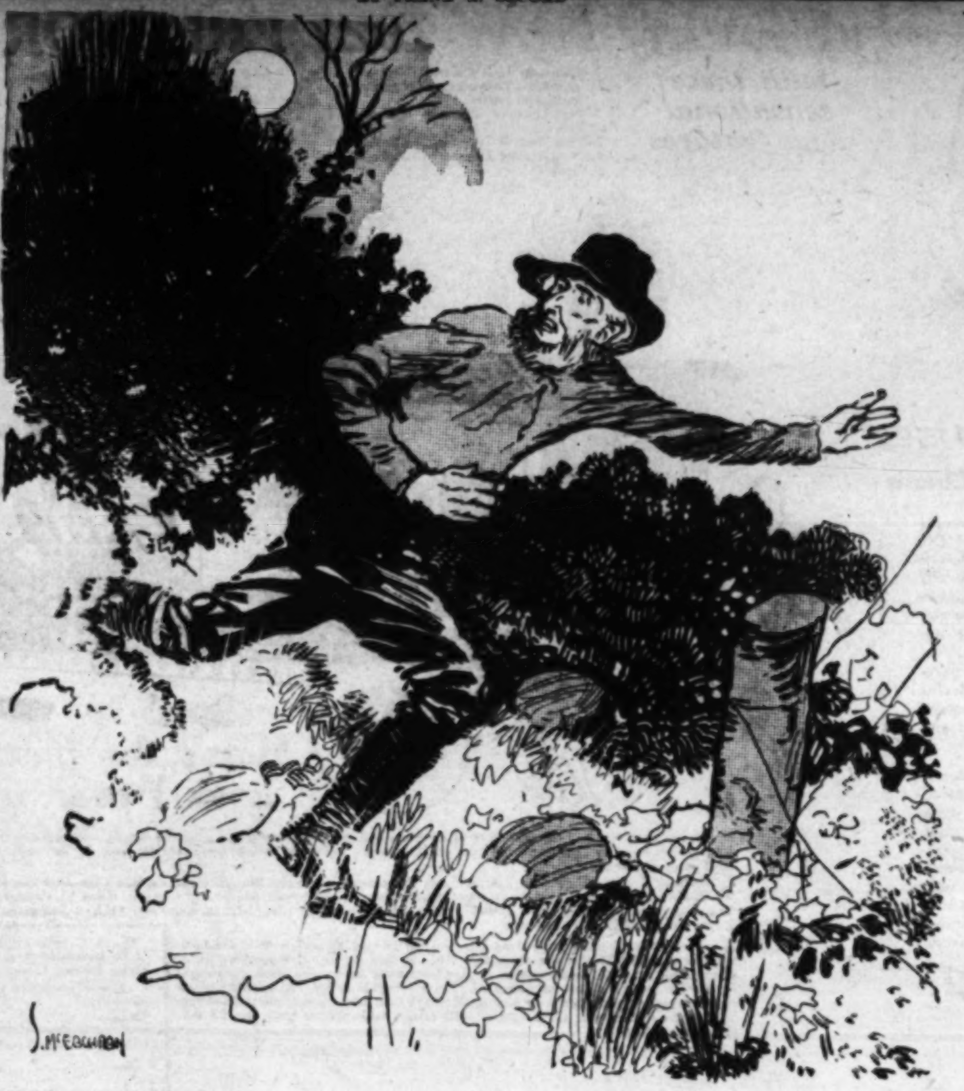
"They'll dance soon enough, I bet!" exclaimed Jud Cross, in an undertone.

The poachers soon reached the patch and in the light of the moon just rising the lads could see that the men carried knives. "They look like a couple of pirates going to rob a ship!" snickered Sim, as he fumbled at a little object held in his right hand.

There was a slight crunching sound made by the slitting of a melon by one of the men and then Spike nudged Sim.

"They've cut one," whispered the boy. "Now give 'em both barrels, Mr. Barnes!"

At the same moment Billy and Jud feverishly but carefully pulled a couple of strings, a ghostly flood of light covered the melon patch and as the light appeared, two big watermelons were seen hanging apparently by their vines and stems, in the air. Each melon showed eyes, nose and mouth, from which blood-red light shone. The whole patch resembled, in the ghostly light cast over it, a snowcovered bit of ground. Next there was a series of crackings that did very well for the sharp, defiant spitting of rifles and as these noises were heard, as many flashes from distant bushes indicated that behind the shrubbery were secreted owners of firearms and that these were taking potshots at the vandals.



There was another volley of shooting from the brush and the reports of this and the flash of the discharged weapons gave Old Man Brown renewed life.

There was soon heard the unmistakable thud of something striking a soft object, such as a human body, and Old Man Brown jumped about three feet straight up in the air, crumpled to the ground and moaned that he was shot. His companion, without waiting to see if this be true, hotfooted it out of that patch and to the wire fence. Without taking the trouble of crawling between the strands or under the fence, the man vaulted over the top of the fifth wire with as much agility as a rabbit might possess and down the road he sped, perhaps a little faster than he ever ran before in his life.

There was another volley of shooting from the brush and the reports of this and the flash of the discharged weapons gave Old Man Brown renewed life. He wasn't so badly wounded as he at first thought, for he uttered one terrible yell, bounded away across country and was soon but a mere bit of fast-moving matter in the faraway.

"Wouldn't believe a fellow—a full-grown man, at that—could be such a fool!" laughed Sim Barnes, as he prepared, a while later, to roll up his wire and quit the job.

"Not yet, I believe, Mr. Brown!" Spike remarked. "If those sneaks get home without breaking their necks in their haste, they'll probably tell somebody else and we may possibly have another visit. You know that—"

"Listen!" Jud Cross exclaimed, placing a hand behind an ear. "There's a car coming down the road now!"

There was a breathless moment until, sure enough, Old Man Brown, accompanied by somebody else, unloaded from an automobile; but the former did not essay to crawl through the wire fence. "If you know so much about it go on, yourself!" Brown was heard telling his companion. "If you don't get the liver scared out of you I'm a three-legged liar!"

"You are a two-legged fool!" growled the other, striding away toward the melon patch. As he neared it there was nothing more than the light of the moon shining thereabouts. He waved his hands back at Brown and shouted:

"Where's the melons hanging in the air, you simp? Where's the bloody light. Where's anything, you galloot!"

The words were no more than out of his mouth before two big melons rose in ghostly light that suddenly enveloped the spot. The melons had eyes, noses and mouths from which blood-red light flared. The melons actually swayed as they jumped upward and supported themselves on their slender stems. Next, from the brush appeared several flashes and reports as of discharging rifles savagely spitting out over the night, were heard.

"Gee, gosh!" muttered the fellow who had been so brave a moment befre. "Thud!" something struck him in the back as he fled the patch and another yell louder than before and more agonizing, echoed about the eerie side-hill.

Holding both hands over the small of his back the man managed to reach the car, where he crumpled after gaining the seat, and commanded Brown to give the kerosene buggy the gas.

"Hurry, now!" Spike Kennedy exclaimed, addressing Sim Barnes. "Let's get out of here. They'll alarm the town and while we have nothing to fear, there's no sense in spoiling our job by discovery."

"A cab, porter!" giggled Jud Cross, after Billy and Spike hastily loaded some traps into the car.

About a mile from the melon patch the boys, returning to town, were met by another car containing the village constable and a companion, both armed to the teeth. Hailing the returning party the constable inquired:

"See anything funny over yon, fellows?"

"Naw—why?"

"Oh, nothing; except somebody phoned me that ghosts are holding a picnic in a melon patch, all of which I believe is nothing more than some kids out stealing melons."

"Who called you?" Spike asked.

"Search me; but somebody that seemed to be half crazy, told me they were shot by spooks."

"Huh!" ejaculated Spike.

"Haven't you boys a melon patch somewhere hereabouts?" inquired the constable.

"We sure have, but there's no ghost in it, I bet!" Jud declared, assuming an indignant attitude.

The officer of the law laughed softly. "Well, I'll take a look at the patch," he decided, "unless you kids are afraid I'll expose your trick."

"Afraid—expose—go to it, old sport, and see if we care!" Spike cried nudging Billy, who was at the wheel, to move on.

Arriving at town Daisy Roberts was consulted and she told, between hearty laughs, how Old Man Brown had called the constable to report that ghosts were having a hot time in the melon patch. "He even insisted they shot real guns at him," Daisy finished. "Did you boys shoot at the old fellows?"

"Nary a shot!" Spike answered "I'll tell you about it tomorrow."

The whole affair was a cleverly planned and successfully carried out trick. The flashlight was nothing less than that a—reflector in which was placed a blue-white bulb which cast the ghostly light over the place as soon as Sim Barnes turned on the "juice" at the switch he held in a hand. He had made a connection from the light-line to the patch. The two melons were able to raise up and hang in the air by means of strings fastened to them and pulled by the boys hidden in the thicket. Two sticks driven in the ground were the supports, but these sticks were hard to see, for they were crooked and resembled portions of the vines. The shooting consisted of some leftover firecrackers from the Fourth of July, exploded in the brush.

It was not strange that Old Man Brown and the other man thought they were shot when something stung their bodies, striking with thuds. Jud, Billy and Spike, with the aid of the ghostly light, used sling-shots containing pebbles, to do this part of the job—and it was fun, too!

Of course, the constable found nothing suspicious, for the lads had removed the two melons with "faces" cut in them, also the sticks. Sim Barnes rolled up the wire, carried away the flashlight strand and there was nothing to betray what happened or how anything happened.

Old Man Brown forgot about bothering that melon patch again.

CHRISTMAS SURPRISE

an elf, and not a human, he did not run or cry, but explored eagerly. What he found made him so very joyous that he, then and there, composed a song that made him chief poet to the queen forever after.

The Christmas ball was at its height when, rollicking up the steps of the throne, came Twig—all afire!

"Speaking of gifts," the queen said afterward, "there was never a gift like Twig's." And in the way of presentation speeches there was never a one like Twig's, either.

"Your majesty, most beloved queen," he said, "this is a jolly, dancing time, this Christmas Day. And evergreens and mistletoe have always stood for Christmas the world over. But because fire is like joy, and these strange, new berries glow like fire, I bring to you and all the world the true symbol of Christmas, the holly!"

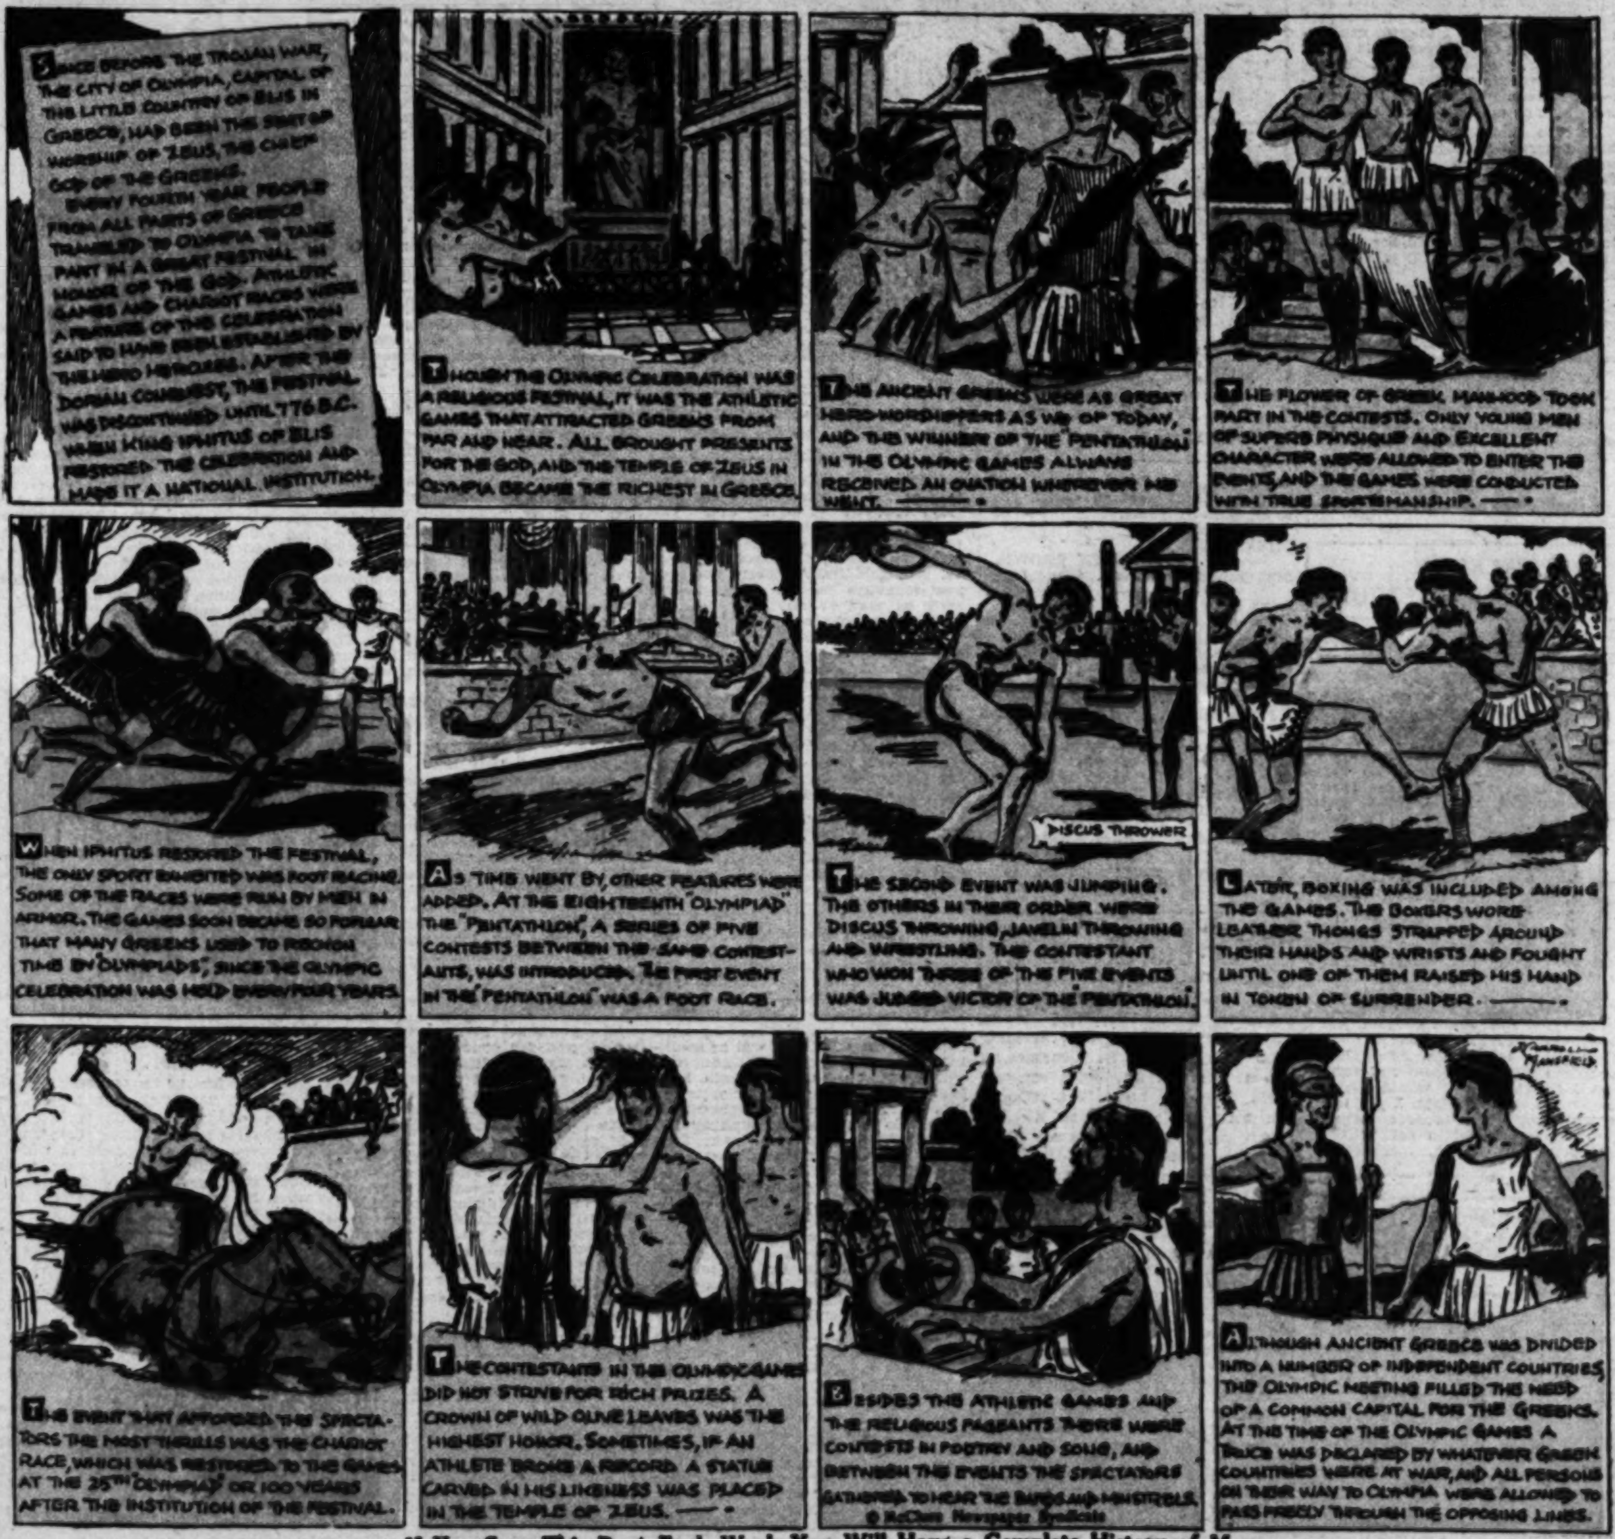
A GENERAL VIEW OF OLYMPIA, GREECE, SHOWING THE TEMPLE OF ZEUS, THE STADIUM, AMPHITHEATRE, THE HIPPODROME AND OTHER BUILDINGS.
FROM A RESTORATION.
FROM THEIR BEGINNING IN 776 B.C. THE OLYMPIC GAMES WERE HELD EVERY FOUR YEARS UNTIL ABOUT THREE CENTURIES AFTER CHRIST. IN 1896 THE KING OF GREECE REVIVED THE CELEBRATION, AND IN THAT YEAR THE GAMES WERE HELD AT ATHENS.

HIGH LIGHTS OF HISTORY

Chapter 41—The Olympic Games.

By J. CARROLL MANSFIELD



SINCE BEFORE THE TROJAN WAR, THE CITY OF OLYMPIA, CAPITAL OF THE LITTLE COUNTRY OF ELIS IN GREECE, HAD BEEN THE SEAT OF WORSHIP OF ZEUS, THE CHIEF GOD OF THE GREEKS.
EVERY FOURTH YEAR PEOPLE FROM ALL PARTS OF GREECE TRAVELED TO OLYMPIA TO TAKE PART IN A GREAT FESTIVAL IN HONOR OF THE GOD. ATHLETIC GAMES AND CHARIOT RACES WERE A FEATURE OF THE CELEBRATION SAID TO HAVE BEEN ESTABLISHED BY THE HERO HERCULES. AFTER THE DORIAN CONQUEST, THE FESTIVAL WAS DISCONTINUED UNTIL 776 B.C. WHEN KING IPHITUS OF ELIS RESTORED THE CELEBRATION AND MADE IT A NATIONAL INSTITUTION.
THOUGH THE OLYMPIC CELEBRATION WAS A RELIGIOUS FESTIVAL, IT WAS THE ATHLETIC GAMES THAT ATTRACTED GREEKS FROM FAR AND NEAR. ALL BROUGHT PRESENTS FOR THE GOD, AND THE TEMPLE OF ZEUS IN OLYMPIA BECAME THE RICHEST IN GREECE.
THE ANCIENT GREEKS WERE AS GREAT HERO-WORSHIPPERS AS WE OF TODAY, AND THE WINNER OF THE "PENTATHLON" IN THE OLYMPIC GAMES ALWAYS RECEIVED AN OVATION WHEREVER HE WENT.
THE FLOWER OF GREEK MANHOOD TOOK PART IN THE CONTESTS. ONLY YOUNG MEN OF SUPERB PHYSIQUE AND EXCELLENT CHARACTER WERE ALLOWED TO ENTER THE EVENTS, AND THE GAMES WERE CONDUCTED WITH TRUE SPORTSMANSHIP.
WHEN IPHITUS RESTORED THE FESTIVAL, THE ONLY SPORT EXHIBITED WAS FOOT RACING. SOME OF THE RACES WERE RUN BY MEN IN ARMOR. THE GAMES SOON BECAME SO POPULAR THAT MANY GREEKS USED TO RECKON TIME BY "OLYMPIADS", SINCE THE OLYMPIC CELEBRATION WAS HELD EVERY FOUR YEARS.
AS TIME WENT BY, OTHER FEATURES WERE ADDED. AT THE EIGHTEENTH "OLYMPIAD" THE "PENTATHLON", A SERIES OF FIVE CONTESTS BETWEEN THE SAME CONTESTANTS, WAS INTRODUCED. THE FIRST EVENT IN THE "PENTATHLON" WAS A FOOT RACE.
DISCUS THROWER
THE SECOND EVENT WAS JUMPING. THE OTHERS IN THEIR ORDER WERE DISCUS THROWING, JAVELIN THROWING AND WRESTLING. THE CONTESTANT WHO WON THREE OF THE FIVE EVENTS WAS JUDGED VICTOR OF THE "PENTATHLON".
LATER, BOXING WAS INCLUDED AMONG THE GAMES. THE BOXERS WORE LEATHER THONGS STRAPPED AROUND THEIR HANDS AND WRISTS AND FOUGHT UNTIL ONE OF THEM RAISED HIS HAND IN TOKEN OF SURRENDER.
THE EVENT THAT AFFORDED THE SPECTATORS THE MOST THRILLS WAS THE CHARIOT RACE, WHICH WAS RESTORED TO THE GAMES AT THE 25TH "OLYMPIAD" OR 100 YEARS AFTER THE INSTITUTION OF THE FESTIVAL.
THE CONTESTANTS IN THE OLYMPIC GAMES DID NOT STRIVE FOR RICH PRIZES. A CROWN OF WILD OLIVE LEAVES WAS THE HIGHEST HONOR. SOMETIMES, IF AN ATHLETE BROKE A RECORD A STATUE CARVED IN HIS LIKENESS WAS PLACED IN THE TEMPLE OF ZEUS.
BESIDES THE ATHLETIC GAMES AND THE RELIGIOUS PAGEANTS THERE WERE CONTESTS IN POETRY AND SONG, AND BETWEEN THE EVENTS THE SPECTATORS GATHERED TO HEAR THE BARDS AND MINSTRELS.

ALTHOUGH ANCIENT GREECE WAS DIVIDED INTO A NUMBER OF INDEPENDENT COUNTRIES, THE OLYMPIC MEETING FILLED THE NEED OF A COMMON CAPITAL FOR THE GREEKS. AT THE TIME OF THE OLYMPIC GAMES A TRUCE WAS DECLARED BY WHATEVER GREEK COUNTRIES WERE AT WAR, AND ALL PERSONS ON THEIR WAY TO OLYMPIA WERE ALLOWED TO PASS FREELY THROUGH THE OPPOSING LINES.

ANOTHER PARTY IS COMING ANON

BUT DON'T FORGET THOSE GIFTS FOR CHRISTMAS! ALL ABOUT CLUB MEETINGS

Thrill upon thrill! Another party anon! After the holidays just for once we are going to invite juniors and seniors. It won't be a dance, but something equally fascinating, a new kind of celebration. So watch, look, listen. In this humble little column will be printed the glad and glorious news.

Another hint: We need flocks of gifts, not one or two or half a dozen. Presents are coming in slowly, creeping in in snail-like fashion. The happier you are, the lighter your heart, the fatter your bank account, the more freely you should give.

Attention please! Every Monday, Wednesday and Saturday, between the hours of 2 and 5 o'clock, yours truly, i.e., Aunt Dolly, will be on hand in the clubrooms. Should you need hints concerning gifts or any other bit of advice, drop in, phone in, keep in touch with our big doings.

Every Saturday, at 2 sharp, there's to be a club meeting. Gifts will be made, and plans laid for the keenest Christmas The Times Junior Club has ever sponsored. But, please keep this in mind: Do not come if you are a time-waster. What we want is action. 'Nuff sed, seniors. Hop to it, the ball is rolling gayly on!

As we have reminded our juniors, send that gift, drop in, write in! A day wasted is never recalled.

WHY WORRY?

By Janet S. Reid, Aged 15 Years, Fillmore

Why worry about the small, petty things of life when somewhere, in luscious green fields, 1,000,000 bright-eyed daisies are watching little puffy clouds drift slowly across azure skies, and near by, a gay brook is rippling, cascading and dancing.

Why worry even about the greater troubles when somewhere, in a glory of gold and flame, the sun in setting o'er lofty mountain peaks, casting a pearly afterglow on the valley, while in the ethereal light, the dark waters of the lake are transformed, and a million jewels shimmer in the ripples.

Why worry at all when somewhere, in a star-sprinkled heaven a just and loving God is keeping tender watch o'er all the earth and governing it in the very best way.

SOLILOQUY OF A SCRUB

By Eloysa Eisenhauser, 154 North Normandie avenue, Los Angeles

Oh, gee whiz, I'm scared to death!,
All I say is, "No, sir, yes.,"
"My program is fixed all right."
"No, my classroom is packed tight."
Huh? Oh, no, ma'am, got kicked out.
Gosh, I can't stop wan'dring 'bout;
Every classroom is chuck full.
Jim'ney Christmas, what a school!
All I see is faces, eyes,
Stare holes through me—still, they're wise
They know where to go and how To get there. Oh, what's this now!
It's the principal. "Here!"
Gonna beat it while it's clear . . .
Oy yoi yoi! "Get off the hall?"
"Sir, have no room at all."
"What grade? Oh, I'm just a new.
Thanks, Sir, for the permit." Whew!
Just half the day gone, darn it!
How'm I gonna live through it.
There's the bell! Where's 103?
Which way? Up or down? Oh, gee!
Here's the wing—now where's the room?
Other end? Gosh, here's my doom!
"Pardon me," Ooh, what a look!
I just bumped that senior's book!
"103, the other way?"
"I just came from there. What say?
Oh, to east and then right down,
Thanks." Oy, my head's going 'round!
"Which way's east?" What? On the right?
Oh, yes, I see." It's packed tight!
No, there's a seat—good one, too.
Look like the sun's smilin' through.
"Yes, ma'am, came from Period I.
Teacher's name? A Missus Dunn.
Yes, I'm sure 'twas Missus. Well,
Might been miss; never can tell."
What? She's goin' to change seats
'Cordin' to the alphabet?
Put me right in front her desk;
Gotta work now, coulda guessed
Gosh, you need a lota pluck
To put up with my bum luck.
There's the bell! Gee, but I'm glad!
Missed the bus, but that ain't bad.
Just so long as the day's done,
Now it's me for home and fun.

TWO JUNIOR CLUB MEMBERS SET EXAMPLE FOR OTHERS BY COLLABORATION

An example for other members of The Times Junior Club is this bit of collaboration by Louise Hogan and Robert Depew, one telling the story and the other illustrating it. Both have been awarded special club prizes. —Aunt Dolly.

FIRST IMPRESSIONS NOT ALWAYS BEST

BY LOUISE HOGAN

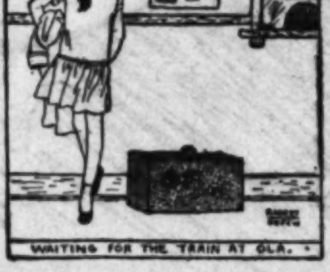
1321 Durant street, Santa Ana.

With an illustration by Robert Depew, 359 Ogden Drive, Hollywood.

Ever since I can first remember, Arkansas has held first place in my mind as a State to be readily ridiculed at every opportune moment, so when an invitation for a three months' visit came from my aunt, I accepted, although doubtful as to how I should act and speak to my "Razorback" relatives. After much preperation I finally, with many warnings and admonishings on my mother's part as to how I should act, bade friends and parents good-by, and was carried away on the huge railway limited.

My entire trip, which consisted of two days and three nights, was spent in wondering what Russelville, my destination, would be like, and how my relatives would receive me.

Just before retiring on my last night in the train, the conductor stopped by my seat, and laughingly said, "When you wake up in the morning you'll be far away from Oklahoma and in the heart of Arkansas. Be prepared for anything!"



WAITING FOR THE TRAIN AT OLA.

"Oh, goodness!" I managed to gasp out, horrified, "It's not as bad as all that!"

"Well, time will tell," was the conductor's reply, as he strode down the aisle, heartily chuckling to himself.

My night's slumber was somewhat disturbed, as all the dim impressions that I possessed of the murderers and bandits that were housed by the rolling hills and valleys of Arkansas, kept flocking to my mind.

"Suppose Russelville is one of those little country towns that have two or three murderers in every house," I thought.

Another thought struck me, which caused the shivers to run up and down my spine—there might even be outlaws on this same train, all headed toward Arkansas' foothills in hopes of finding a safe hiding place until the excitement about their crime had blown over, then journeying out into civilization again, hunting for some other unlawful act to commit before returning to Arkansas.

An imaginary view of the caves where bandits made their abodes passed through my mind, and, although knowing I was still in Oklahoma, I pressed my face flatly against the window pane in hopes of seeing one of these "robber's caves."

All that greeted my eyes, however, was an occasional freight train on some siding. Satisfied that I was still in the "safety zone," I lay down in my berth once more and was peacefully dozing off when I suddenly sat up in bed and half-screamed, "My pocketbook!"

Picking it up, I carefully counted my money, somewhat disappointed to find it all there. Pulling the curtains, which surrounded my bed, tightly together, I hid the money and lying down again, fell into a troubled sleep filled with distorted dreams of the bold and brave outlaws whom I should be likely to meet on the morrow.

The next morning when I awoke, I glanced at my watch and discovered it to be thirty-five minutes past five. I was due to change trains at 6:30 in a small town named Ola, so gathering my clothing together I hurriedly journeyed to the dressing-room.

Pausing for a moment, I glanced out the window, a heart-breaking sigh escaping my lips. During the night a heavy thunder shower had fallen, leaving the marshes and timberland drenched and soaking. Crude huts adorned the hills and here and there a pickaninny family stood in a group just outside the door waving to the occupants of the train, which, with many puffs and whistles, wound its way through the numerous ridges of Arkansas.

Wonderingly, I saw the dense blue fog, which had incased the entire atmosphere, slowly ascend and finally disappear into the clouds like a thin veil of air.

Struggling with tears, I hurried into the dressing-room and dressed amid the chattering of two old ladies, one hailing from Oklahoma and the other one from Texas, each trying to outdo the other in some heroic tale in which her State played an important part.

By 6 o'clock I was back in my seat, which had miraculously turned from a berth back to its natural shape while I was gone. Words cannot describe the emotion I felt as I peered out into the muddy streams, which had been heightened by the flood that had so recently assailed that section of the country. "Why, oh, why, did I leave my beloved California?" I bemoaned over and over to myself. "Three months of this!"

I did not stop to consider that it was a possibility that Arkansas did not have to look the same all over, and as the tears persisted in rolling down my cheeks, the landscape became more blurred every minute.

However, the time passed quickly, and presently the conductor's heavy voice boomed out, "Ola, next stop!"

Hastily putting on my hat, and gathering up my bags, with the air of a martyr going to his doom, I awaited the final jerk of the train before stepping off onto the mud-bestrewed platform of Ola.

A friend had once made the remark that Ola's population consisted of "a mule and a postoffice," and I was prepared for anything. Yet, no preparation whatever could do away with the forlorn feeling of which I was possessed at the sight that greeted my eyes.

Mud and wet sand was packed down to serve as a path from the train platform to the station. The constant clicking of the telegraph in the Western Union, and an occasional moo of a cow were the only sounds that broke in upon the stillness of the early morning.

With a nervous sigh I walked to the door of the waiting-room, the hinges giving forth a sullen creak as I pushed it open. Glancing around I discovered myself to be the only occupant of the room, and hastily closing the door behind me, I seated myself on a hard wooden bench.

Presently I heard the shuffle of heavy brogans, and glancing up I saw, what in my mind's eye I described as being a "typical Arkansaser." A pair of old, faded-out, mended overalls, and a gray shirt adorned his heavy-set figure, and his ambered whiskers lay on his sunken chest.

With an ear-to-ear grin he made an awkward attempt at tipping his hat, and heartily questioned, as he seated himself slightly too close, for the strong tobacco odor of which he was possessed, "Well, miss, be ye a-goin' to Little Rock?"

"No, sir, to Russelville," I explained, stiffly, yet magnetically drawn to his hearty mode of speaking.

"Well, what be yo'er name?" he

Hey! Juniors, More and Better Puzzles, Stories, Etc., Are Being Prepared

SECTION FOR TINY TOTS WINS PRAISE

ENTHUSIASTIC RETURNS MEAN ADDED FEATURES. DON'T FORGET CHRISTMAS DRIVE

Juniors, your page has brought such enthusiastic returns that more and better cut-outs, puzzles, nature stories, poems, tongue-twisters, riddles and goodness knows what, are being prepared, just for you.

But, juniors, remember our Christmas drive. Responsibility does not rest with seniors alone. Young, nimble fingers can make welcome gifts, therefore, get busy today; let us have that nice bulky package without delay. Or perhaps if you don't wish to make or buy anything, you may have a toy you are tired of, a couple of books, or some trifle we can repaint and fix up. Whatever it is, let us have your donation today. Wrapping and carding gifts is a monumental task; delay means disaster from all angles.

Just to show you that one good turn deserves another, there's a big surprise up Aunt Dolly's sleeve. Christmas will soon be over and our juniors haven't had a party for ages. There's a real treat ahead of you, the kind you'll simply adore, so keep your eye on this column for further announcements or you'll miss pecks of fun.

But the most important thing is: Do you like your junior section? Write in, phone in, come in. Our clubrooms are open to you each day between 2 and 5 p.m.

Aunt Dolly is positively "in" to club members on Mondays, Wednesdays and Saturdays. Each Saturday there is a club meeting from 2 to 5 o'clock. It is your duty to come; all loyal T.J.C. members should be on hand.

Write that letter, send that gift, drop in and see Aunt Dolly, three imperative things you should do next week!

LETTERS FROM OUR JUNIORS

Dearest Aunt Dolly:

At last you have remembered your juniors. Mother and daddy say it's the best reading matter they've ever seen, and Aunt Dolly, I never have a dull Sunday any more.

I made the silver fish and worked your puzzles, and what do you think, I got a whole dollar for guessing one of your riddles. Please make our junior section larger. I'm buying The Times just to get our sheet.

But I wish we juniors could have just one tiny space for ourselves. Now it's all mixed in with seniors, and it takes me so long to find our own stories and things. Why don't you give us a sheet by ourselves, and have a big line across the top, telling us this is for juniors alone? Then it would seem much nicer than all mixed up with senior poems and art work. Please don't be mad, Aunt Dolly dear, because I suggest this. Also please ask Louis Bardwell to make more Mother-Goose cut-outs, I just love them, and would like to have a whole set. When I get them colored I am going to send them to the hospitals, so little sick children can play with them. I'm coming down next Saturday, dear Aunt Dolly, to your club meeting. Until then a big kiss is yours,

Lovingly,

[Signed]

GWENDOLYN BROWN,

3468 Brand Boulevard, Glendale.

Aunt Dolly dear:

I'm one of your new juniors, attracted to the T.J.C., by your junior section, and I want to tell you how much I like it. We are taking The Times now so that we won't miss a single cut-out or anything.

I just love the puzzles and nature stories, and oh! yes, I do wish we could have heaps more riddles. They're no end of fun. Sundays are dull days for most boys, Aunt Dolly, and your new junior section has helped many stupid hours roll away.

Please write lots of stories just for us. Every time I hear there's an adventure story of yours coming, we boys can't wait. Seems to me you wrote some keen ones about a year ago. Remember there was "Rod Santee's Reward" and "The Mystery of Blue Light Cave." They were surely thrillers. Don't forget to speed up this new one you promised us, "On the Trail." There are four new members in this locality, and we'll be mad as anything if you stall us on that story.

Aunt Dolly, we've heard you have really lived in the big outdoors, among Indians and wild animals. Won't you please tell us all about it some Saturday, soon? Why not give us juniors just half an hour, and tell us what it really is like.

Well, I must hurry and do my school work, but remember I'm coming down next Saturuay, and please tell us about where you used to live.

Afffectionately, your nephew,

[Signed]

NATURE STORIES

BY AUNT DOLLY

In the great Northland, where stinging winds rage and freezing snow falls over the St. Lawrence, I, one of the last wolverines in the world, have my habitation. Should you meet me prowling on a trial, you would doubtless take me for a wolf or a bear.

This is due to the fact that I am a huge specimen, just as my grandparents used to be. I measure fifty inches from my blunt nose to my stunted tail. Strange to say, due to the vigorous climate I live in, my fur coat is rather oily. Where the hair hangs low on my haunches and across my back, there is a patch of darker-colored fur known as the "saddle." This dab of sable is to be found in one other animal, the musk-ox. Outside of that I am the only creature roaming in the North possessing such markings.

I have heard men say, as they prowled through the woods hunting for meat, "these wolverines are gluttons; they will travel miles to obtain a meal" and yet they do not know that I am really lazy at heart, I despise snow and hate to get my paws wet; so it is, you will find me often tiptoeing along a trail, with a sort of rambling bear-like roll anything to save my fur from getting moist.

Perhaps it is true I love food. I am a good hunter and leave devastation in my wake. This was taught me by my grandmother, who took me out of my litter one cold night, told me the following tale:

"Wee one," she said, cuddling me close, "you have lived close to your mother's side. Now the cold wind comes, the river freezes, the stars sparkle with snow. Creatures we call men, strange white-faced things, carry long rods of steel. These are guns and should one explode it means death. You would not see the tall pine swinging in the breeze, onr would there be salmon leaping in the waters. You would lie still and cold by your mother's side.

"You were born to hunt. Wolverines are great hunters, but you must beware of traps. There will be smoking meat placed on them, and they will tempt you, but underneath, steel jaws are hidden to splinter your little degs. Then, wee one, we should all weep. So you must be cunning and smart. Wolverines are clever; they learn the ways of man, and then they fool him. You must learn to do this, or the woods will mean disaster.

"Tomorrow you shall hunt; you will find the she-wolf and otter and mink and the beaver, the bear and the deer. Caribou lurking on the trail, with you above it, means meat. It is wise to attack animals smaller than yourself, and slower of foot.

"You have great claws, wee one, and giant strength. Use it, and beware of the man, for he is the cruelest of all."

With such information I crawled back to my litter, and dreamed many strange things; yet odd as they were my first journey along the storm-lashed beach proved most distasteful.

Winter had just set in, and being young, I did not know the danger of thin ice. It had barely started to form, and I being hungry and brave of heart, yearned to show my grandmother that I, too, could be a great hunter, so I stepped boldly on the edge of the St. Lawrence. It gave with a miniature roar, sending me into icy water up to my neck. Not only was I nearly frightened to death and shaking with cold, but my feelings were sadly hurt.

The beaver, chopping down a pine, laughed until he wept; the mink made a naughty face, and two shy rabbits hurried into the woods, carrying the news, fast as their legs could carry them.

This made me furious, so I started to hunt with a vengeance, and sure enough made a rich haul. I dragged it home, and showed my grandmother, then crawled, stiff legged, into my litter. You have no idea how wonderful it seemed to cuddle beside my mother, and each time she licked my fur and stroked my neck with pride, I would open one eye to see the effect on my brothers and sister.

"What a son," my grandmothr said, coming close, "wee one, you shall be the hunter of the North.

"He is no longer a baby," my mother wept, putting her paw about me. "I can't bear to have him leave, yet tomorrow we must have food."

"I shall bring it to you," I murmured and fell sound asleep. So it became my lot in life to care for four little brothers and sisters and my mother. My father had been caught in a trap, and we could not free him. Thus necessity made me sharp of wit and cautious.

Prowling through the woodlands, I ran across many steel contrivances, but learned that I could put my paw beneath the spring and set off steel jaws without harm to myself. Thus the warm smoking meat became mine. I almost forgot to tell you I am also fond of insects and berries, and perhaps this is why, so many people think I am bruin, instead of wolverine.

BLACKIE AND WHITEY

BY MILDRED HILTON, Fontana

(A prize-winning story by a new club writer follows:)

Blackie and Whitey were two little kittens. They were about a month old and lived in a garage with their mother. They were very playful and mischievous. Many times their mother had said to them:

"Blackie and Whitey, you must never run away from home. Some dog might chase you or you might eat poisoned meat."

One day the kittens were feeling more mischievous than usual and Blackie said:

"Whitey, let's run away and go adventuring!"

Whitey replied: "But mother said never to run away from home."

"Aw, come on, we won't get hurt." So off they went.

They went past a grocery store, through an empty lot, down a street with a fence along it. A dog chased them and they climbed over the fence and continued on their way. They went down Third street, up H street, then out into the country. They were going along when Blackie said:

"Whitey, I think we're lost. What shall we do?"

Whitey replied:

"Let's go on. We might find a house."

They wandered along and night was approaching. It was dark when they discovered a light. They went up to it, and it came from a house. The kittens went up to the door and meowed. Footsteps were heard and the door opened. A girl appeared and when she saw the kittens she said:

"Oh, mother, here are two little kittens. Shall I bring them in? I wonder who owns them. I'll bet they're hungry."

"Yes, bring them in," the mother told her. "Poor things. Mary, go get some milk."

The kittens were brought in and the milk given them. Afterward they purred their thanks and the children played with them. At first they were treated nicely, but as the week wore on they were treated unkindly. Their tails were pulled, their ears pulled and their fur rubbed the wrong way. So one night they sneaked out from the house and wandered away.

Finally, they arrived at a place that looked familiar. It was their home! They meowed and their mother came out and welcomed the runaways back. The kittens said together:

"Oh, mother, never again will we disobey you and run away."

CHRISTMAS SURPRISE

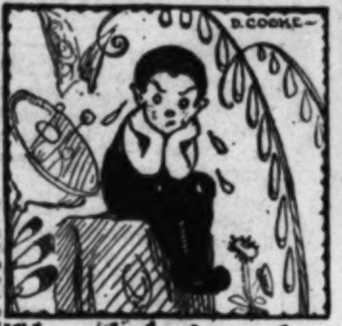
(From a Fairy History)

BY JOSEPHINE L. MILES

1140 Keniston avenue, Los Angeles.

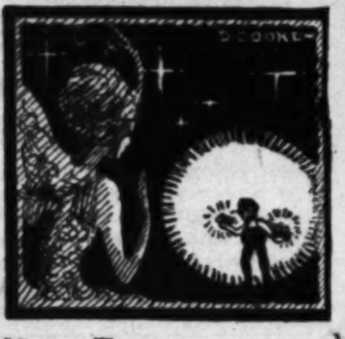
(With two illustrations by Dorothea Cooke)

The queen was going to give a Christmas ball! One little messenger whispered it to one little elf and the news was all over Fairyland in five minutes! Eager fairies spun hither and thither and they were so happy that their wings seemed like bright flowers in the dark forest. All their best dresses were hung out to air, and their loveliest leaf slippers were dipped in the brook to freshen. Grand royal balls came only once a year, and no fairy ever dreamed of not going with her brightest dress and her gayest laugh and her very best gift for the queen!



"Gloomily kicking his heels together"

Yet in a clump of ferns by a great oak tree there were no airy clothes swaying in the breeze, and no singing in merry preparation. There was only Twig, sitting on a stump and gloomily kicking his heels together. An elf with not even a feather for his cap was Twig, and as for his dreaming of going to a grand ball, rather think of being an Indian chief or something, according to Twig! If he could only get away from the merry shouts of the dancers, and the singing when the moon rose! He slid from his stump and plunged deeper into the forest, the poorest elf in Fairyland, with not even a gift for the queen!



"Came Twig— all afire"

Thinking such terrible thoughts is very hard work for an elf, and Twig was still trudging wearily, quite far from the fairy part of the forest, when he decided to turn back. And then he could not turn! For all about him, flaring, flaming, the most awful of fears for a tiny elf, was a forest fire! But it was cool and motionless. And because Twig was questioned again, jovially enough.

Giving him an ironic glance, I answered him, and disdainfully picked up my bag and walked to the window of the ticket office, it being necessary to cough several times to awaken the agent from the reverie into which he had fallen.

"I want a ticket to Russelville," I demanded as a small man came to the window.

With a nod of his head he gave me the desired slip of paper, and putting down 30 cents, I walked to the door of the station and peered out. All I could see was a long freight train loaded with numerous fruits and vegetables, an engine laboriously and noisily attaching itself to the train.

"How long will it be until my train comes in?" I asked of the agent

"That's it, miss," he answered politely, pointing to the above-mentioned freight train.

With a surprised gasp, I looked out the door once more, this time seeing an old, weather-beaten passenger coach attached to the end.

With a rather mumbled, "Thank you," I slowly walked out to the coach. It proved to have a partition through the center, the trunks and other excess baggage occupying the front end, and the passengers the rear end. By the aid of the conductor I stepped into the car, and seated myself on a back seat. There still being a few remaining minutes before the train pulled out from the station, I busied myself looking about me. A large desk was pushed up to the front window, where the conductor was sorting out papers, etc. A narrow aisle ran down the center of the car, the seats being wider than those in the modern trains.

Must ONE Car DO It All?

There are times when nothing less than a five passenger car will do—other times when a light roadster can best perform the service you want. Why not have BOTH?

The low prices for which you can buy a good used car, and the saving effected in making your present car do only the work it is best fitted for, makes a second car well worth the investment.

A BATHROOM FARCE

An Episode in the Married Life of Helen and Warren

By Mabel Herbert Urner

Creator of the "Helen and Warren" Characters

"WHAT the Sam Hill—you startin' now?" glowered Warren.

"Lacquering this chair for the maid's room," Helen settled down on the newspaper-protected floor.

"Why not let her do it?"

"She'd get it over everything. I ought to go in the kitchen—but I hate to work out there alone. Look, isn't that a good blue?" trying the paint on a paper. "I'll touch up the rounds with orange."

With a disapproving grunt, he retired behind his magazine.

Deftly Helen applied the lacquer. Most effective! And why not make a chintz cushion? That piece left from the curtains.

A fix-up-the-maid's-room urge. Get her a new rug, too.

The paint too thick. What to thin it with?

"Dear, we haven't any turpentine. What'll thin this? Gasoline?"

Warren not troubling to answer.

Out in the kitchen. Back with some gasoline in a handleless cup. Mixing the paint with a pencil.

A shrill ring.

Warren straddling her painting paraphernalia en route to the telephone.

"Oh!" rescuing the gasoline. "You almost knocked that over."

"Hello? . . . Yes . . . Fine! Where're you now? . . . Come right along . . . Ten minutes? . . . Good!"

"Who? Who is it?" jumping up, heedless of the dripping brush.

"Baldwin," slumping back in his chair. "They've been out in the car."

"The Baldwins! In ten minutes! Warren, just look at me!" pulling at her paint-splotched smock. "And the place! Oh, you might've made some excuse!"

"What for? Home, aren't we?" propping his feet on the couch. "Expect me to say we're out?"

"You could've said we were going out," snatching up the rags and cans.

"Could, eh? Well, I leave the lying to you," taking up his magazine. "Better at it than I am."

"Quick—help me! Take that chair out to the kitchen. No, put it in the bath tub—I'll finish it tonight. Anybody but the Baldwins! Hold it by that back leg. Their gorgeous home—Don't get it against you. And this awful smell!"

"Why pick Sunday afternoon for these fool jobs?" stalking out, the chair held gingerly by the one unpainted leg.

A moment later an irate explosion sent her flying to the bathroom.

"Oh, I told you to be careful!" at the blue smudge on his trousers.

"Get the turpentine!" he fumed. "This's what comes of your messin' about."

"There isn't any. Try gasoline. I just had some in the library. No, do it yourself," thrusting the paint cans under the basin. "I've less than ten minutes to get this place straight!"

Back to the library. Hastily gathering up the newspapers.

"Don't see any gasoline," his usual helplessness.

"Right there in that cup! Oh, here!" giving it to him.

"What'll I sponge it with? Where'll I get a rag?"

"Can't you do anything? Look in the rag bag—the hall closet."

Only five minutes now! And she had to dress. Dashing about with frenzied speed.

"Whereabouts? I don't see any rag bag!" his maddening call from the closet.

"Left-hand side—that cretonne bag. You never can find anything!"

She had rushed into her room to dress when again he shouted from the bathroom.

"This blame stuff's no good. Don't faze it. That's like you—ruin an eighty-dollar suit paintin' a kitchen chair! Come see what you can do!"

The bathroom in hectic disorder. The half-painted chair in the tub, paint and brushes under the basin, the rag bag tumbled out on the floor.

"What HAVE you done? Emptied that whole bag?"

"Had to get a rag, didn't I?"

"You needn't have dumped everything out! Oh, I was saving that undershirt for a duster. Here, put your foot up!"

His foot on the edge of the tub, hastily she sponged the paint smear. Gasoline not so good as turpentine—but it was coming off.

"You have to rub hard. Here, take a clean cloth," snatching one from the floor. "Keep rubbing it. I MUST get dressed."

"Well, here's where I change my suit," with a sniffing grimace. "Smell like a garage."

"No, no—you'll have to answer the door. I won't be ready."

"What's the matter with Katie? Out? Well, they'll just have to ring. Get me out another suit."

"Oh, your cigar!" snatching it from him. "Smoking—with all this gasoline!"

With a disgusted grunt, Warren stalked into the bedroom. Shedding his odoriferous suit.

"Dear, hurry—hurry!" getting her printed chiffon from the closet. "What if they should come now?"

But they both had time to dress.

"I'm so glad they're late," Helen again in the library, busy with more subtle stage setting.

Raising the windows. Spraying the air with toilet water to conceal the paint and gasoline odors. Evening the shades. Plumping the pillows. Arranging the magazines—highbrow ones on top.

"Why all the fuss?" Warren strode in, freshly groomed. "We're not tryin' to sell 'em the place."

"Oh, they've never been here! And they've such a wonderful house—everything just perfect. Now, dear, when they come, don't drag out the chairs and upset the whole room. Leave the chairs alone—they're placed right now."

"Huh, want people to sit a mile apart—to suit your scheme of decoration."

"He'll sit there—she'll probably go for the couch—Oh, Pussy Purr-Mew, you must have a fresh ribbon!" Tying the red bow on her collar always a detail of company preparations. "There! Now lie here on the rug—you're part of the decorations!"

"What'd you do with the paper?" rummaging the neat pile.

"Oh, don't upset them all again! I just fixed them. Now look what you've done!"

Dragging out the paper, he had knocked off the ash tray.

"Get the carpet sweeper—quick!" scooping up the ashes on a card from the waste basket.

"Where d'you keep the blame thing?" grumblingly.

"In the pantry—where it's always kept."

But the next moment the inevitable shout.

"Whereabouts? I don't see any sweeper!"

"Behind the door!"

"Not here!"

Wanting to scream. Running out to find him, hands in his pockets, staring helplessly about.

The sweeper behind the door—but partly concealed by the ironing board.

"Here," dragging it out. "Now see if you can take up those ashes. No, never mind—I'd better do it. You'll knock off something else."

"Huh, can't get me sore that way—I'm not qualifyin' for a housemaid."

Just time to run over the ash-grayed rug before the bell rang.

"Now everything's fixed—I could hug them for being late! Dear, let them do the talking. Ask about their country place—they're crazy about that. Oh, I wish Katie were here!"

But when she opened the door with her most cordial smile, she confronted only Mr. Baldwin!

A dishevelled, distraught Mr. Baldwin. No hat. Smudges on his forehead. Grease-streaked hands.

"Had a smash-up down here," his hurried explanation. "Nobody hurt, but a close shave. Car's out of commission. Just ran up so you wouldn't be worried."

"Oh—how dreadful—" faltered Helen.

"What's wrong?" Warren in the hall now.

"Fool taxi ran into us. Took a short turn. Tried to get the old boat going again, but couldn't. While I'm here I'd like to wash up," holding out his grimy hands.

Wash up! That bathroom!

Helen gulped. How to stop him? Say it was out of order—Say—

But no time for her ingenuity to function.

"Come right in," Warren led the way. "Where'd all this happen?"

Crimson, helpless, she heard the bathroom door close after them.

Everything thrown in there. Those rags—that awful mess!

Anguished visions of the disgraceful disorder until they came out.

"———— three witnesses right on the spot," still talking of the accident.

"Oh! Oh, Mr. Baldwin—you must excuse that bathroom. I—I was lacquering that chair—and I just threw everything in—"

But Warren, always intolerant of apologies, silenced her with a scowl.

"I must hurry right down. Left Mrs. Baldwin in the car—waiting for the garage man. He ought to be there by now. Sorry we were done out of our call, Mrs. Curtis. We'll drive in some other time."

"Yes, do," faltered Helen. I'm so sorry—"

Warren seeing him out to the elevator.

Was it as bad as she thought? Rushing in to verify her fears.

Worse! The chair and paint-stained papers in the tub. Rags from the emptied bag all over the floor. Old underwear rags! The edge of the tub smudged with Warren's shoe. His cigar on the wet basin—spreading a loathsome brown stain—

"Oh, that awful bathroom!" running out. "You told him—you explained—"

"Explained what? Had his own troubles—what in blazes did he care? Worryin' about his car. Pretty bad smash-up. Came near—"

"You didn't say a word—and you wouldn't let me—All those old rags! Warren, what must he think?"

"Huh, they nearly got killed—and all you think about is your old bathroom! If they'd come up on stretchers—been the same thing. You never think of anything but looks—dollin' up yourself and the place. All this stage settin' every time anybody comes." Then, with a callous chuckle, "But this time they shifted the scene on you! Too bad you weren't set for a bathroom act!"

CARE OF THE BODY

Three or four, or at the most, five ingredients to a meal ought to be fairly satisfactory.

Second, be more concerned with the purity, with the naturalness, with the wholesomeness and with the freedom from adulteration of your foods than you are with the subject of what mixes with what. If your food is unprocessed, unrefined and comparatively unchanged by man's hands, the subject of mixtures is insignificant.

For those who are really concerned on the subject of mixtures and combinations, three or four simple statements would not be amiss. They are as follows:

Take fruit alone.

Milk should be taken generally an hour away from other food although it does make a fairly good mixture with most of the cereals.

Nuts and oils will mix with any food.

Breadstuffs should not be mixed with fruits although they will go well with most of the vegetables. Don't mix bread with potatoes unless you use a very small quantity of both.

There are a few other simple generalizations which might help but to avoid confusion, guide yourself by those I have given.

Orange Juice and Intestinal Growths

Q.: Would an orange juice diet cure or help an intestinal growth? How much must one take in a day and how long should one stay on such a diet?

A.: The orange juice diet as a means of elimination has sprung into popularity within the past five to ten years. People are using it for all sorts of physical conditions whenever elimination is required.

In the case of an intestinal growth there is no question but that elimination of the sturdiest nature is necessary, at least to stop the growth from growing further, if not to get rid of it entirely.

Therefore, what is the relationship between orange juice and the development of an intestinal tumor or cancer?

When the doctor prescribes an orange juice diet people seem to believe that orange juice acts as a specific against the development of such a growth. The facts are contrary to this belief. There is nothing, or very little of curative value in the orange juice, itself.

The value of the orange juice fast or diet, whichever you call it, lies in the abstinence from all other foods. The amount of nutrition that is embodied in orange juice is relatively small.

Orange juice, perhaps better than most other liquids, permits the digestive tract, the blood stream and the various tissues to disengorge and to discharge waste material.

The value of the orange juice again comes in, in so far as the patient does not lose strength as rapidly as he does when he consumes no food at all. The orange juice is valuable in maintaining a fast longer than one would maintain it if one were on water alone. It does not relieve elimination. It assists it.

There is no direct relationship between orange juice and the growth. There is, however, a very decided relationship between intestinal elimination and the development of a growth.

Concerning the next part of the question, "How much must one take in a day and how long should one stay on such a diet?"

The answer must depend entirely upon the circumstances, upon the individual health and upon the developments which ensue. An orange juice diet should be considered in the same category as an absolute fast, the purpose of which of course, is the clearing of the entire condition of disease.

The duration of the fast will depend entirely upon the judgment used. When the patient becomes too weak or, if there are heart or kidney complications, the physician ought to know when to stop the fast. If everything proceeds without complications or without undue distress or discomfort, I would say the fast should be continued until the tongue clears up.

As a general rule, I have found that one tumblerful of diluted orange juice, half and half, is satisfactory for a two-hour interval. With some patients, however, I recommend a three-hour interval. That will depend upon the individual experience.

L. A. Stomach Sufferers Acclaim Doctor Who Discovers Flaxolyn

Health Seekers Here Simply "Wild" Over Herbal Discovery Brought From the East—All Dealers Rushed to Supply Huge Demand for Flaxolyn.

Drs. George Starr White and F. James Cook of Los Angeles, Dr. Arthur Pike of Long Beach and other Coast authorities openly praise Dr. Luntz's Herbal Flaxolyn.

Dr. George Starr White, Pacific Coast authority on diseases of the prostate, bladder, etc., and author of "Youth," "Health" and other well known health books, has given to Dr. Luntz's Flaxolyn the highest possible approval by recommending and indorsing it throughout his practice and writings.

Dr. F. James Cook, Medical Director The Academy for Physical Reconstruction, Hibernian Building, this city says, "In several cases under my care, the use of Flaxolyn has been the means of so cleansing the colon that natural sleep is now the usual thing and life has taken on a different aspect for them."

Dr. Arthur Pike of Long Beach: I always find that Flaxolyn brings splendid results in cases of chronic constipation. I consider it one of the leading aids in my drugless methods."

In addition to the approval of Drs. White, Cook and Pike, many other statements by doctors have appeared, showing what Flaxolyn, which is only nature's roots and herbs, compounded with sunbaked flaxseed, has done in all sorts of cases.

Dr. B. Lust, President American Naturopathic Association, says: "Flaxolyn is a natural Food Laxative, and priceless in all digestive ills."

Since taking Flaxolyn hundreds of California folks no longer suffer from weakened run-down condition—constant headaches—stomach, liver, kidney disorders—high blood pressure and, above all, poor appetite, muddy blood and sluggish bowels because Flaxolyn is

Seen from the Green Verdugo Hills

Conductor of the Synagogue, said a woman of the Congregation of the Faithful one day not long ago—Conductor, she said, has anybody ever told you of a society called The League for the Hard of Hearing?

The Good Work of a Certain League

Well, sir, we were ashamed to say it is a society of which we had never in our life heard before.

But, as far as that goes, there are thousands of societies devoted to works of mercy, charity and kindness that we have never heard of. And that you have never heard of.

Which goes to show how good the world is. No one can ever know how good the world is—a world in which so many who are fortunate in it strive with loving hearts and hands to make light the burdens of those who are heavy laden, the afflicted, those who sorrow, the blind who cannot see and the deaf who cannot hear.

This League of the Hard of Hearing is a particularly active and efficient organization. In Los Angeles it has headquarters at No. 276 South Rampart Boulevard, a branch of the National League. Wonderful, great-souled women belong to it and they have worked wonders that are next to miracles.

It is surely an affliction to be devoid of hearing. Music and all the "concourse of sweet sounds" lost to one's soul. But, it is an affliction that can be greatly alleviated. And it is to this work of mercy that the members of the League devote themselves.

We are very sure that their reward will be great.

What we were all talking about was the foolish way that quarrels get started.

Foolish Way That Quarrels Get Started

It was among the neighbors in the green Verdugo Hills that the talk came up. It was in the evening when we were all gathered together on the stone fence from which you can see the Calabasas Road.

It was one of those wondrous evenings like which God makes so many. Isles of amethyst in a sea of golden skies as the sun was setting beyond the rim of the Ventura Mountains. And a slim crescent moon waiting for the sun to fade that it might ride like a queen in serene glory among the stars.

So, when the sunset faded and the soft, sweet night came on, and the crickets were in full tune, and the peace of God enfolded our dear, dim hills, what did somebody do but speak of what ex-Kaiser Wilhelm and Lloyd George are saying about the next great war and how soon it is likely to come.

It was a strange note to be sounded in that peaceful hour—a strange note and difficult to account for.

But, the human mind works strangely. How often you must have noticed it when some one will be saying something about barber shops, for instance, and another one will say that he has been reminded of the Guy Fawkes plot to blow up the English House of Parliament.

Well, anyway, somebody said something about the silly way in which all the horrible wars of time started, and that one awful war was brought on by a quarrel that two boys had over a game of marbles.

Yes, and all quarrels, even between individuals, have often a more foolish reason to start on than a game of marbles, remarked our neighbor, the man who has the phonograph.

Let me tell you, said the man who has the phonograph, how a man and wife were parted by a quarrel, and what was the basis of it.

After the honeymoon was over and the couple had settled down comfortably and somewhat prosaically to housekeeping, they somehow got into an argument as to what would be the name of the baby that they naturally supposed would come along in due time.

For awhile the argument went along amicably and pleasantly enough. Indeed, they got a lot of fun out of it. But, at last, it took on an acerbious tone. Their tongues got sharpened on it. And their tempers snapped.

The woman said the baby would be a girl and her name Susan after a grandmother who was rich and greatly revered. The man said no, the baby would be a boy and his name George in honor of George Washington.

Day after day and night after night went on, and the controversy growing more bitter all the time. Till at last the dispute rose up between them like a great barrier. Then, one day, they parted, got divorces and struck out on different paths, one going one way and the other going another way.

By John Steven McGroarty

Now, said the man who has the phonograph, the strange thing about it all is that there was no baby. One never came. And so the quarrel was over nothing. But it parted forever two people who might have gone through life together if they had displayed a little mutual common sense.

Isn't it the truth? And as it is with people so it is with nations. And, anyway, there is no excuse for war. It is merely authorized murder—murder authorized by man and not by God.

And Among Them the Bougainvillea

We were talking to the ghosts of old conquistadores and grown-robed padres on a haunted highway, and we were asking them if it contented their souls to behold how beautiful now is the California of today, and if they think that we have kept still lovely the flower-flamed trails their brave footsteps blazed for us in the long ago.

And the ghosts of the padres answered and said yes, they are content. The conquistadores did not say yes or no. It seems they were not particularly observant of flowers in their day. They were more concerned about presidios and beacon lights on jutting headlands.

California was always beautiful with flowers that had been planted here by the hand of God, said the ghosts of the padres. They remembered the wild roses that were like the roses of Castile. The Mariposa lily, the Shasta daisy, the wild azalia, and a thousand and one others that Henry O'Melveney knows the names of better than any one else. But, said the brown ghosts, you have come after us, have brought many another beautiful blossom to California.

And then the dear and gentle ghosts asked us, personally, which of all the flower and bloom and blossom of the land we loved the best.

We answered and said we loved most the Bougainvillea vine that flings its purple flame upon the garish day. The purple flame that sets its loving light against the light of noon. It speaks to us as we pass like something that holds memories of the dusty roads of Galilee and a love too deep for words to tell.

There is an old song somewhere about the Bougainvillea vine. And a lover who dared not speak his love. Yet, he said, as he passed,

"From out the Bougainvillea vine
A slim brown hand stole into mine."

And how, "in the dim pool of his heart" dark eyes shone and soft lips whispered to keep him company on a lonely way.

There is something so brave and splendid about the Bougainvillea. They hail us with a bright welcome. They speak of wide flung seas and brown isles. And, somehow, strangely, of something that we have known before—perhaps in another life than this

Our good friends the star-gazers, held a big powwow in California there awhile back, and just the other day they did us the kindness to send us a complete account of the proceedings.

The Star Gazers Had a Fine Time

All these star-gazers sit under the rafters of our far-flung Synagogue every blessed Sabbath morning. And nearly all of them are members of the Congregation of the Faithful because they say their prayers every night and every morning.

Naturally a man who is much with the stars reverences God. The wonder of the stars overwhelms his very soul. The unbeliever, the atheist, the agnostic and the foolish man who does not think at all never looks at the stars. God made them and hung them in his wondrous skies for no purpose or reason at all, as far as they are concerned. The only night lights they see are the lamps strung along city streets. They never go out into the open spaces to behold the miracle of the night.

These star-gazers that we are talking about are people deeply interested in astrology. And astrology is nothing new. We are informed that it is not exactly recognized as a science, but it certainly is a sister to the recognized science of astronomy. Indeed we might better say that astrology is the mother of astronomy. For it was from astrology that astronomy was born.

As far back as the records of time can be searched astrology was in vogue. The Chinese devoted themselves to it, and so did the Babylonians, the Assyrians, the Phoenicians and all the other races of ancient times that were clustered in the green and fertile crescent of the Mediterranean where it seems the human race had its cradle.

Nor did Christianity ban astrology from the pale of its authority. The Christian religion does not seem to have driven out the astrologers from its tents when it drove out the sorcerers and the witches. In the early Christian church even the Popes had their astrologers.

It is not a superstition to be under the astrological influences. Whether there be any truth in astrology or not, it may have more or less of an influence on a man's mind. But if one is possessed with a belief that the stars influence events on earth certainly the man who holds such belief can not be accused of superstition.

To sum it all up, who is so wise as to say that God does not work His wondrous ways through the stars? Also we may leave everything else concerning astrology out of the discussion and agree on the fact that if a study of it does nothing else for us it teaches us to know the beauty of God's heavens.

Go to a dim and quiet hill upon a starry night and behold the miracle of the universe. Countless stars gleam above you. And beyond those that you see are still countless stars more and beyond them countless stars again. No end to it at all. No limit to space. No confines to a universe so vast that the human mind is as futile to comprehend it as the mind of a new born babe to comprehend the mystery of life.

It was very kind of the star-gazers to send us their book. And we want them to know that they are people of whom we have always been very fond.

IN GALILEE

Last night I dreamt I was in Galilee
Far journeying, two thousand years ago
To see a man who, young, yet spake of things
That e'en the bearded fathers did not know.
A Kingship He professed, yet wore no crown,
And those who followed Him were called "the low."

Hard by a village, 'neath an olive tree
I found Him with rough men whose faces shone
With strange intelligence that came not from
The scrolls they could not read. But late they'd gone
From net, and humble task, and common thing
To walk with Him who'd plead with them, alone.

I paused aside and listened as He taught:
"Our Father," What! a King? He shares with them
A brotherhood no bondman ever had
With ones of Royal blood. Behold! The hem
Of His white garment one has kissed! 'Tis Christ!
A King who shares with all, love's diadem.

CARE OF THE BODY

causes as you will readily perceive.

Now what's to be done?

Study posture. Pull that stomach in. Straighten out the shoulders. Throw the foot forward instead of "Charlie-Chaplining" it. Develop a spring to your step instead of coming down as if you had nine toes in the grave and the other slipping on the edge.

If you must wear high-heeled shoes in society, at least take them off when you are at home. Then wear sensible moccasins or soft felt slippers. Visit your orthopedist osteopath or chiropractor. Find out how you shall manipulate the tarsal bones so as to free them from all adhesions.

Increase the circulation and improve the general muscular and nerve tone. Take the allotted exercises which every trained physician ought to understand. Do them courageously and systematically for a period of at least six months or more.

Nightly stand on a rolling-pin, balancing the entire body so that the convex portion rests underneath the curvature of the arch.

Tone up the skin tissues by alternate hot and cold baths. Take a cold shower each morning. Whenever the opportunity arises to walk barefoot in the grass, sand or soil, do so. It is a tonic and strengthening.

For temporary relief, wear arch supports but don't include them in your permanent regime. Arch supports are satisfactory for the transition period.

There is no other way that you can secure relief for fallen arches than by the long, persistent routine I have just described.

Dark Circles Under the Eyes

Q.: What is the cause of dark rings or circles under the eyes?

A: Many a mother has looked askance at this very common phenomenon and at once has suspected kidney disease. If she were more worldly, she would perhaps attribute it to bad habits.

Dark circles under the eyes are not a disease. They are rather a phenomenon showing body conditions. Here are a few of the predisposing factors which may be responsible for dark eye circles: Sleeplessness, high nervous tension, chronic constipation, insufficient fresh air, under-exercise, worry, fear, anxiety, extreme emotional stress of any kind, sexual excesses, Bright's disease, masturbation, sexual inhibition, sexual repression, food poisoning, industrial poisoning, alcoholism, opiate drugs, sleep-producing drugs, anemia, high blood pressure, tuberculosis, menstrual disturbance, pregnancy.

Now ask me again—"What are the causes of dark circles under the eyes?"

Food Combinations and Mixtures

Q.: Dr. Brook always said, "All acid fruits in the morning and never with meals." Some others say, "Anytime if not in your mouth with starch." What do you say?

A.: The entire subject of food mixtures and combinations is filled with so many "but's, maybe's and if's" that I would advise the average amateur dietitian to let the subject largely alone.

What is a starch? What is an acid? When is an acid not an acid? What are acid-producing foods? Wht are acid foods? What are protein foods?

As a general rule these titles are given to foods because they dominate in certain food qualities. But most foods, in their natural state, are fairly well balanced and contain a mixture of other ingredients as well as the ones for which they are given the title.

The rule of such mixtures also takes no consideration of the more vital principles of food, of the amount of vital life or of the energy that is stored in the food. It takes no cognizance of food adulteration and of the host of chemical changes which occur in the manufacturing processes.

Our modern diet is too complex. There are too many foods on the market, too many variations, gradations and inferior qualities. The diet, today, is ten or twenty times more profuse than it ought to be—this, speaking of quantity in general. The result is considerable overeating and its disastrous reaction on the digestive system.

In general, I would advise my readers to ignore the subject of mixtures and to abide by a few simple rules that are easy to remember.

First, avoid the many-ingredient meal.

CASH VALUE OF WILD LIFE

Wild Life, to the Modern Tourist, Camper and Week-Ender, is a Thousand Times More Attractive Than Wild Life Killing

By Raymond S. Spears

NO FEATURE of the outdoor habits of thought by campers and trailers is more significant to the old timers than the increasing absence of the desire to kill.

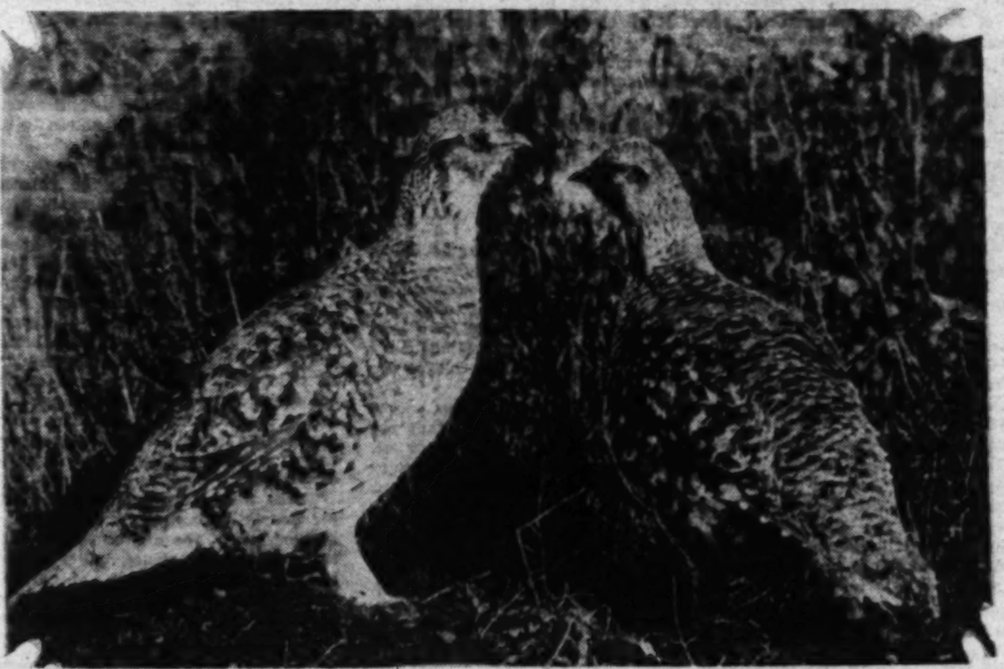
Our finest resorts of the California mountains are the refuges not only of people seeking vacations, but of wild living things.

The delight of the campers is to see deer and mountain jays, tracks of coyotes and the passing of a cougar in the moonlight. The silence of the timber belt is not broken by the rifle shots of the visitors.

The killers during closed season are not so much the week-enders and the vacationers as it is the handful of local residents—the "natives"—who make the specious plea that they need the meat. Meat was always the excuse of the backwoodsman, the homesteader, the settler who destroys public property for private appetite.

But the fact is those who destroy wild life contrary to the law injure the value of property in the back country. A deer wandering around a woods camping resort is worth several dollars a week on the rent of each cottage or shack. People will pay $20 a week where they can see an occasional deer, when they would not pay more than $12 or $15 a week if there was no deer there.

If wild deer were running around in these game refuges, as they should be if the public sentiment demanded law enforcement, the fact that one could photograph such game would be worth $25,000 as an advertising proposition to the leased camp promoters every month. They could better afford to give the handful of illicit game killers meat for every meal than to permit the deer killing that goes on over the ranges in the so-called "game refuges."



Dad will remember them. If he doesn't, they are prairie chickens, and they are now growing scarce.

The truth of the matter is game in any given territory is killed off by a mere handful of all-the-year-around killers. I have investigated the question of game destruction in about fifty regions from New England to California. The destruction is invariably caused by from one to five local hunters, who make a business of constant raiding of the game cover. In the Saratoga Springs territory of New York State, for example, three or four poacher trout fishermen, supplying the race-track dinner crowds with brook trout, kept the streams in that territory caught clean. Grouse and woodcock were killed off by from one to five professional hunters in such villages as Corinth, Northville, in the Speculator territory, and so on.

In other words, less than six hunters and fishermen in any territory will destroy, if they are constantly hunting and fishing, the commercial wild life of communities of a thousand to ten thousand population. They hog the sport—and make poor livings at it.

These violators are nearly all good fellows. They have the cheery viewpoint on life of the ne'er-do-well. They plead poverty. They plead hard luck. They really are ignorant of the destruction they bring down upon the cover they raid. Yet it is curious how long they are allowed to ply their business of destroying tens of thousands of dollars value for a few hundred dollars price annually.

Game wardens are unable to enforce game laws where hotel companies and camp managers are in league with the poachers. Few owners of camp-leasing propositions are aware of the damage done to their business by the fellows who hog the game and fish. A hundred inexpert fishermen catching four or five pounds of trout in a week in a region will advertise that territory to ten thousand fishermen. But one man catching ten, fifteen or twenty pounds over the limit of trout two or three days a week—selling the fish "so they won't be wasted"—will ruin the fishing in moderation of from one hundred to two hundred ordinarily expert and reasonable fishermen.

But aside from the pound-weight estimates of fish values, taken by one or distributed among a hundred, the fact that a lake is protected against the individual's insolent and habitual theft of the sport of all means more people coming to that place. People do not go to regions where game and fish laws are violated, where game wardens are not assisted by popular sentiment, as they do to territories where the public's living creatures are protected from the blood-lusters.

The popularity of the Yellowstone and Yosemite parks is due to the protection of wild life as much as to any other cause. There are enormous areas of mountain regions, where the scenery is as beautiful, where conditions of geology, forest, canyon, mountain and vista are as charming as the average in the great wild life reserves with certain details of extraordinary beauty. But these vastnesses are without any such attraction as the tame deer, the tame bears, the elk, the wild game and the wild singers, players, unhunted furred and feathered creatures, where State and Federal Rangers really protect wild life.

There is no excuse now, not even permission by game law, for the killing of deer in most parts of California. Tens of thousands of deer were killed during the hoof-and-mouth disease scare. Until this perhaps necessary slaughter is made up there should be no open season for deer killing in the regions involved.

A flock of the magnificent bluejays, with their crests, their rich colorings, their intelligence—the jays, magpies, crows and ravens are most intelligent of bird life—make an asset for a resort camp. A flock of jays at a group of camps will, because of their talking points, add many dollars to a summer's receipts merely by wholly unsuspected tales by enthusiastic if often inaccurate nature observers. Few camp managers have any idea of the cash value of even a tame chipmunk, let alone a big game squirrel, in a group of cabins for lease.

California quail, charming little birds of the utmost beauty, are generally regarded as a shooting asset. Resorts advertise good quail killing. But people who do not shoot quail suffer agonies as they realize these lovely creatures are subject to the No. 10 shot loads of the gunners, in and out of season. A flock of quail or doves at a camp is worth thousands of dollars in advertising. And where quail are scarce the camp managers should see to it that no killing is done there.

Bears, especially, ought not to be killed. An ordinary black bear seen by tourists in a park but running at large is worth probably $50,000 to $100,000 in advertising annually. A grizzly, as witness those of the Yellowstone Park—some of them savage and willful brutes, at that—is worth hundreds of thousands of dollars.

A cougar is of doubtful value as an advertisement. People, however, rather delight in shuddering at the thought of having seen one of these awful beasts. As a matter of fact, the cougar is generally harmless. Only rarely is one dangerous. Their feline habits are clandestine, and they are destructive to deer. At the same time, among he-men folks and among Amazons, the cougar is a reputable and delightful beast. How many nature students wouldn't give a year of wild wanderings for the chance to photograph a cougar that comes in a day of loneliness to walk with a human?

When we read of a cougar walking with a man or woman, it means a cougar which wished merely for the company of a human, and does not mean any felonious desires on the favored character thus honored by a savage beast's proffer of friendship and protection. For when the cougar—puma of the Argentine—walks with a man or woman, it is to protect the stroller from the jaguar. Pumas have more than once fought jaguars to save a human being from the man-eater's attack. And we California populace reward the cougar friendliness by killing them off—despite their tremendous value alive as assets of advertising value, and more especially education. One cougar in the wilderness is worth a hundred thousand cats around the cities, but the public, which so seldom thinks intelligently on its varied problems, is ignorant of the actual assets and liabilities which are had in such things as a clear sky, a clean, open beach, a singing bird on the radio pole, a robin nest in the camp pines, a little herd of deer on a ridgeback, a trout leaping for flies in a lake, a flock of snipe on the shore of lake or ocean or slough, a wildcat screaming in the brush, or a lonely cougar or bear walking in the moonlight along a mountain trail.

The intangible values are greatest. The shadow of a pine tree is worth more than the timber in the trunk. The song of a bird is beyond all estimate worth more than the meat in its breast. The skin, horns and venison of an antelope are so little in comparison to the soul of the noble beast in its natural habitation that the wonder is we ever allowed the dollar mark to be put on such a priceless thing.

We have recognized the fact that a yucca growing on a hillside is worth more to ten thousand passersby than the same flower tucked away in somebody's house. We protect the flowers of the land. Our scorn goes out to those who sneak away the public's privilege of seeing the rare loveliness of blossoms where they belong. And we also protect wild game, but public sentiment should learn that this is not to insure hunters a perpetual shooting season every autumn; our game laws are to protect the right of the passersby to see living deer, and bear, and antelope, and quail.

And a wild life is more precious living a thousandfold than the carcass from which the soul and mind of the creature has been blasted by bullets or charges of shot. And perhaps if one cannot quite reach the normal human mind by a comparison in aesthetic beauties, we can bring the proposition within every comprehension by making it plain that $50 worth of horns, meat and hide to some individual is mighty poor business compared to $1000 a week in rents, trade and automobile wear to the business men of a community.

fice to relieve the acute nature of the inflammation.

Then every vestige of constipation must be removed. A diet consisting of raw fruits and raw vegetables, whole-grained breadstuffs and cereals will do more than laxatives or purgatives.

When the pain becomes excruciating, heat will furnish relief even better than the opiates. A hot sitz bath taken for twenty minutes, as hot as one can stand it, will be effective where other measures fail.

There are numerous devices on the market, one of which was advertised in this department several months ago, intended to furnish heat directly to the prostate.

In the doctor's office he can furnish immediate relief by certain forms of electrical and manipulative treatments.

Where the irritation is not so acute but nevertheless painful, considerable relief may also be secured by means of prostatic massage, a manipulative technique which consists of massaging the prostate through the rectum. Such a procedure, however, should not be carried out for any length of time. It is an alleviative, not a curative treatment. If continued indefinitely, as it is very frequently done by some physicians, it will have a tendency to irritate and to inflame the prostate more than it was before.

Prostatic inflammations yield better to natural therapeutics an dto dietetic advice than they do to medicine or to surgery.

Shoulder Pains

Q.: Will you kindly tell me what causes severe pain in the shoulder blades?

A.: Pain is the cry of an injured nerve. What, in turn, injures the nerve? That depends entirely upon the circumstances. Sometimes it is a blood stream filled with undischarged, uneliminated waste. Sometimes it is spinal pressure at the vertebra. Sometimes it is due to pressure or,to irritation at a distant point, coming by reflex action to the local tissues. However, in most cases, pain in the shoulder blades is simple neuritis, an inflammation of a nerve.

This may be easily overcome by abstemious dieting, sometimes by fasting and by strenuous elminination of the toxins of the body.

For local treatment, the application of heat is most effective, the hot water bottle, the electric blanket, alternate hot and cold packs and the corrective effects of both osteopathic and chiropractic manipulation. If the neuritis is deep-seated, an electrical apparatus known as the diathermy will apply the heat to the deeper structures and thus furnish relief.

However, in all cases of neuritis one must get at the cause and the cause will usually be found in the condition of either the digestive or the eliminative system.

Fallen Arches

Q.: What do you advise for fallen tarsal bones in the foot?

A.: The entire foot is made of the tarsal phalanges, the metatarsal and tarsal bones. Both the metatarsal and the tarsal bones are involved in the bony arch.

This questioner, by fallen tarsal bones, has reference to what is popularly known as fallen arches.

"What should be done for them?"

To ascertain the treatment, one should first get at the cause. What are some of the causes of fallen arches?

In the past it was the common belief that high heeled shoes were the principal element responsible for such trouble. We know better now. Not that high-heeled shoes are desirable, but much of the fault attributed to them comes from other causes.

Observe the average individual walk. How few have correct posture. How few use the correct technique in placing one foot ahead of the other. The angle of the toes is usually turned too far outward. Either one walks too stiff-leggedly or not stiff-leggedly enough. The spring is lost. One comes down upon the heels with a thud. The whole body weight is dropped with each forward motion. Adiposity is the rule rather than the exception. The burden on the arch is too great. There is insufficient walking and poor muscular development and muscle tone, as a whole.

Sometimes pregnancy or an internal tumor interferes with the normal nutrition to the foot. Sometimes the shoes are unpardonably atrocious. In other cases we fail to wear rubber heels when we should.

Fallen arches come from a multitude of

Lew Trowbridge Was Low in Mind and Money. Home-town Folks Seemed a Refuge and a Comfort

"RAOUL," said Trowbridge, reflectively, "this is a cruel world." Raoul, who was sitting on Trowbridge's shoulder, said: "Pr-r-ow!" and gently nibbled his ear.

"Hey, cat!" said Trowbridge. "What do you think this is—a free lunch?" He collared the morsel of gray fur. Raoul purred cheerfully jingled the tiny silver bell attached to his red-ribbon, and gnawed Trowbridge's thumb.

"Cat," said Trowbridge, "I envy you. No memories, no worries, no regrets. And you've got the best name for a cat that ever was invented. It sounds like a cat, Monsieur Raoul de Ronronne!"

"Pr-r-ow?" inquired Raoul, and bit one of his master's studs.

A clock struck ten. Trowbridge sighed, reached for the bell, arrested the movement in mid-air, and laughed. "Thus demonstrating, cat," he said, "the well-known force of habit. For our correct English valet hath flitted hence. And, what's more, he got his wages; yea, even unto the last shekel therof—the mercenary blighter! So now we're on the rocks, cat, and we've got to rough [illegible] bit."

He dropped the kitten and went out to the vestibule, Raoul tinkling behind him. "Here we are!" said Trowbridge. "Old English topper—Old English overcoatings—exclusive evening scarf—natty walking-stick. Au revoir, catlet—lucky beast!"

As the door closed, Raoul said: "P-r-ow!" indignantly, and then said it conciliatingly, and then tried it pathetically, but all was futile. So then he trotted back to the salon and slept.

In the meantime, Trowbridge was strolling toward the Municipal Casino of Cannes, in the department of Alpes-Maritimes, France.

He was waylaid by a beggar who whined for a sou. Trowbridge gave him ten francs. A few steps later, however, he wondered why he had done it. Had it been merely to delude himself that he could still dispense charity? For, in his pigskin bill-fold, there remained just eight hundred more of those francs, and they constituted his entire remaining capital. At current exchange, thirty dollars.

Outwardly, he was a fashionable gentleman loitering to a rendezvous, and the taxi-drivers who hailed him didn't know that his soul was crawling. They didn't know any more about it than the gray kitten did.

Arrived at the sea-promenade, he lingered to take the mellow air. A score of yachts were rocking in the little harbor, and he smiled at them reminiscently. He stared at the Casino, gay with lights, and his smile, although still reminiscent, took on a nuance of bitterness. Then he shrugged his shoulders, and crossed the street to the Casino, and made his way to the Salle des Ambassadeurs, where there is dancing.

He was standing just within the entrance and casting about for his hostess and her party, when the maitre d'hotel came up and saluted him with deference. "Ah, good evening, Monsieur Trowbridge. I have a message for you. Lady McDonald has telephoned that she will be delayed until eleven, or a trifle later, and hopes that you will wait for her. Would you like a table, Monsieur Trowbridge? But, perhaps, you go to the baccarat, instead."

"No," said Trowbridge, "I don't think I'll play baccarat, Pierre. I'll wait here."

He took a table and ordered a drink. As for the relentless rhythm of the orchestra, he never heard it. His thoughts made an impenetrable buffer between himself and any such triviality as jazz.

He could hardly believe that he was remembering his own career. It was too unreal, too fantastic. It was more as though he had been watching some madcap actor who had tried to impersonate him, and had done it very badly, not to say stupidly. By rights, Trowbridge should have been a Cinderella man and lived happily ever after. But the actor had ruined the part.

It had all begun in a small town in America. There Trowbridge had early acquired—Heaven knows how or whence!—an extraordinary knowledge of worldly form and fashion, a persistent itch for rarer atmospheres, and a steady superciliousness for his neighbor. His father was upset about him.

"Now, listen to me, Jimmy," his father had said, "I know you want to be a regular feller, but you got the wrong angle on things. All you talk about is money and the toney folks you meet. Well, that don't amount to Hannah Cook. And now you're teasin' me to go to Yale. Why, Jimmy, that'd just egg you on. No, sir; you'll go to Cowan College, and then you'll come back home, and it'll be L. T. Trowbridge and Son. Because, don't you ever lose track of this thing, Jimmy—our business is coal, and you can't sell coal in a dress suit!"

He had fought valiantly for Yale, but his father was inexorable, so that the boy had fretted through four years at a small college, where he was named "Beau" Trowbridge, and was the ultimate ideal of a large number of girls whom he scorned. During his vacations, however, he was bidden to Wild Rapids and Junction City, and, by the time he took his degree, he had even cut something of a dash in Capitol City.

Naturally, his successes increased his appetite. For consider how easily he had won them, without a single asset beyond his personality. He had no car, but he knew how to buy his clothes and how to wear them. He had only a meager allowance, but his manner was patrician. With his smile and his swagger, he could get way with murder. And if he could do it at home, why not in New York?

As a matter of fact, there were certain Yale and Harvard and Princeton undergraduates, home for the holidays, who assured him that he was the Wall Street type and urged him to come East and join forces with them. They promised to mentor him both in Wall street and in Park Avenue, and they told him that he couldn't possibly go wrong. But, although he craved money and society as some men crave drugs, there was this much to his credit: his father was old and lonely, and Jimmy wasn't going to maroon him. It was going to be L. T. Trowbridge and Son—that is, as long as Jimmy could bear it.

And then, just as the menacing future reached out its claws, his father died and left him something, and, a fortnight afterwards, his great-uncle died and left him everything. That was six years ago. Six years? Sometimes it felt like sixty years, and then again it felt like sixty minutes. It was all so blurred and unsubstantial.

He had hurried to New York, of course, but with no idea of taking employment in Wall Street. He was now a gentleman of means, and he had come to increase the list of genuine social eligibles from Four Hundred to Four Hundred and One. As a starter, one of his friends put him up at a club, and, long before his guest-card ran out, he had been adopted by a very gay and affluent crowd. It wasn't perhaps the most blue-blooded group he could have chosen, but it certainly had the most money and the best time.

The crowd had liked him, instinctively, just as his acquaintances had prophesied. And so had begun those brave days when he made new friends at every turn, and met glorious women and aristocratic young brokers who gave him tips on the market.

At last, Beau Trowbridge was among his own kind; and he went where they went and did what they did—in New York, Long Island, Palm Beach, Paris, Deauville, Biarritz.

It had come as a tremendous shock to him—this was a year ago last March, when he was figuring out his income tax—to realize that his money affairs were sliding down-hill with dangerous momentum. To be sure, when you were in the right crowd, there was always poker or roulette or racing, and besides, everybody took a flutter in the market, once in a while; still, he couldn't imagine what had eaten so heavily into his capital. His fortune had seemed to him so enormous that he had planned to live like a prince forever, and there it appeared that he had already managed to make away with half of his inheritance.

Well, there was no sense in brooding over it. The thing to do was to take action. Consequently he had done this, and the market had given him considerably more action than he wanted. No matter what position he took, he lost. Whether he acted on expert advice or on his own hunches, whether he was long or short, whether he followed the rails or the industrials or cotton or wheat, the result was invariably the same—picayune profits or huge losses. And this went on until, one day in autumn, he finished a round of golf at Sleepy Hollow.

He had played very well and was pleased with himself. The other members of the foursome fell into comfortable chairs, and one man sent for something from his locker, and another man began to balance the bets, while Trowbridge went to telephone to his brokers. When he returned, he was pasty white.

"Well, Jimmy," the book-keeper had said, "you're the big winner. You win a hundred and twenty."

Trowbridge had smiled. Noblesse oblige. In two hours and a half he had won a hundred and twenty dollars playing golf, but, in the same length of time, he had dropped quantities of toxic waste or with a minimum quantity of thermal properties, the symptoms at the extremities vary. In some cases we have a constant tingling sensation. In older people especially, we have the numbness or the complete loss of sensitivity.

The predisposing causes vary in each individual case. In some it is due to chronic constipation, to resultant autointoxication and to surcharging of the blood circulation with toxic wastes. In others it is due to fatty degeneration of the heart, thus preventing normal circulatory pressure. In still other cases it is due to an arteriosclerosis or hardening of the arteries, while in still others, it is caused by a markedly decreased blood pressure.

Again, decreased blood pressure is usually due to various states of toxemia, of kidney, of skin, of bowels, of lungs, or of some other tissue of the body.

Always one must seek the causeg for circulatory diseases usually have some tissue cause.

The remedies, again, depend entirely upon the cause. However, a few measures for immediate relief suggest themselves.

If one were to take a vigorous nightly rub-down, one could avoid a great deal of the numbness or the tingling sensation. Nude sun baths taken consistently, especially associated with cold showers and strong friction rubs, will bring life and increased sensitivity to the skin and to the nerve endings imbedded in the skin. Alternate hot and cold applications, or if the sensation be in the fingertips or in the toes, alternate dipping in hot and cold water will bring considerable quantities of blood to the area and therefore prevent such sensations.

Profuse perspiration, either by the hot water bottle, by the electric blanket or by the addition of several thicknesses of blankets will also help.

The intestines must be cleaned, if necessary, by enemas.

One should practice deep breathing to oxygenate the blood thoroughly.

Finally, fifteen or twenty minutes of vigorous exercise taken before retiring will usually preclude such a condition.

Low Blood Pressure

Q.: Will you please speak of low blood pressure, its cause, and contrast it with high blood pressure?

A.: Low blood pressure, of itself, is not a disease. It is rather a phenomenon associated with other disease. Unlike high blood pressure, there is no degeneration of the arteries, of the veins, or of the heart itself.

Low blood pressure usually is associated with anemia, with tuberculosis, with high nervous tension or strain, with a sedentary existence, sometimes with extreme auto-intoxication and with many of the kidney diseases. In fact, low blood pressure will be found in all the cachectic diseases, the wasting or the devitalizing diseases.

In most cases it is due to an insufficiency of heart action, to a lack of power, to a lack of nerve tone or vital strength in the heart stroke as the heart sends the blood pumping through the arteries and veins.

Under such conditions, of course, physical culture work, regulated and systematically taken, will be of the utmost benefit.

In most cases of high blood pressure we have either a lesion, that is, disease of the heart muscles, or a degeneration, a brittlenes and a hardness through the arterial walls.

Regular outdoor sports, outdoor sleeping and deep breathing will do more toward raising the blood pressure than any concentrated diet of intoxicating proteins.

Prostatic Troubles

Q.: Can prostatic troubles be cured without an operation? If so, how?

A.: To reverse the question, "Can prostatic troubles be cured with an operation?"

A fine cure we accomplish by cutting away the structure!

Inflammation of the prostate usually comes at the age of 50 onward. It is not a minor operation but an operation fraught with great danger, especially in the weakened state in which so many prostatic victims find themselves.

The danger of incurring cancer following such drastic surgery is increased manifold.

Sufferers from prostatitis believe that the condition must last continuously. The facts are that prostatic inflammations occur in attacks. Very often when once the attacks subside, if the patient regulates his diet, there is not a recurrence.

In some cases of prostatitis there is a serious impairment of the urinary functions. Urination becomes difficult and even impossible. Then one must resort to catheterization.

It is under such extreme conditions that the sufferer believes there is no relief but surgery. Again and again he resorts to the removal of the prostate only to find that the painful, difficult, retarded urination is unchanged.

Where the prostatic inflammation is severe, the most advisable thing to do is to go on a complete water fast. Three or four days of nothing but water will usually suf-

ARE YOU SUFFERING from painful affliction of the feet, broken down arches, callouses, bunions, etc.?
Ready-made Arch Supports are an unsatisfactory makeshift because everyone's foot is different and the displaced bones, enlarged joints and deranged ligaments complicate matters still further. We make supports from carefully prepared plaster of Paris casts and alter them to accommodate changes brought about by the wearing of the supports. In order to give relief and lasting satisfaction it is imperative that the foot be restored to as normal a shape as possible. We have an extensive experience in the correction of flatfoot, broken down arches and other deformities of the feet, and are able to promise our clients comfort and relief in every case.
It is not necessary to wear clumsy shoes with our supports; on the contrary, we often restore daintiness of appearance to feet badly deformed and unsightly.

a hundred and forty thousand dollars in the Street.

He succeeded in saving, out of the wreck, some eighty thousand dollars. But where could a gentleman live on the income of eighty thousand dollars and preserve his social status? Well, when you reckon the exchange, he could do it in France. Six months in Cannes, two in Paris, two in Biarritz, and two on the Normandy Coast; what could be more chic? One might be expatriated, but one would still be fashionable. Better be fashionable in France than attempt to live on five thousand a year in New York. And in France there would also be the constant possibility of a killing at baccarat.

This last idea had completed his undoing. He had begun by playing very cautiously: nevertheless, he had steadily lost. He had continued to play cautiously, and to lose, until he perceived that his only chance of re-establishing his fortune was to plunge. Then he had plunged. And that was how he found himself at Cannes tonight, with eight hundred francs between himself and zero.

He had sold his car a month ago. The rent of his apartment was paid for the season. But it was common gossip that he was broke, and there were many people who had begun to treat him accordingly. For, on the Riviera, the first duty of an Anglo-Saxon is to have plenty of money.

In fact, there was only one person who hadn't changed in the slightest her attitude toward him, and that was his hostess tonight. She was an American, but she was also a Lady, with a capital L, because her late husband had been a British baronet. She had never really been in love with her husband, but she was blindly in love with Trowbridge. He knew this as well as though she had told him so in plain English. She adored him, she was radiantly beautiful, she was only thirty, and she was rich. Trowbridge had eight hundred francs and he didn't know whether he cared for her. And presently he would dance with her, and Claire—Lady McDonald—would look up at him and say: "Jimmy—don't you like me just a little, please?"

Then what would Trowbridge say? She was stunning, but he didn't know whether he loved her. And, if he didn't give the correct answer, then what would he be doing a week from now—and a month from now—and a year from now? He had never done a day's work, and his sole references were the smiles of night-club managers in five countries. There were scores of men who might loan him money, but was there one who would hire him as a living wage? He couldn't conceive it. But had he sunk so low that he would marry without love? He wasn't sure. That was why he had refused her dinner invitation tonight. Call it delicacy, or honor, or whatever you choose. He simply couldn't go there and eat her food, while he felt as he did. Dancing was different.

And so he was sitting there, and a waltz had just begun to play, when some one touched his shoulder. Turning, he saw that it was a man who looked singularly out of place.

The man was somewhat beyond middle-age, with iron-gray hair. He said: "Excuse me, please, but do you speak English?"

Trowbridge blinked. "Why—yes."

"That's fine. And do you belong to the house?"

Trowbridge blinked again. "Why—what do you mean?"

The man tugged at his collar. "Because, if you ain't, why I apologize. Only seeing where you sat all alone by yourself my daughter kind of thought you did. So, if you're one of the professional dancers here, why, she wants a whirl."

Ordinarily, Trowbridge was quick enough, but, for the moment, he was dazed. He followed a wave of the man's hand, and saw something that was as unreal as his own recent reveries.

She was sitting at the next table and regarding him with a certain repressed hopefulness. She was, perhaps, seventeen or eighteen. Her frock extremely pretty.

"Well?" said the man. "How about it? I got to admit I'm kind of out of my depth, brother. But, if you are, why, she's got to dance one dance, or the whole thing's a washout. We're on this here Mediterranean Tour, d'you see? Come over from Nice to see a particular dentist I was recommended to. We only got this one night here, and then we got to catch the boat and go to Rome, Italy. She says she don't want but one dance. So how about it? And, if you ain't why, I apologize."

Trowbridge glanced at the dancing-floor; the bona-fide professionals were all engaged—and he knew, from the type of their partners, that they were likely to be engaged indefinitely. He looked at the girl and was overtaken by an emotion of pure sympathy. The child was in the Municipal Casino of Cannes, in France, and she was excited by the gaiety and glitter, even as once he himself had been, and she wanted to dance. Tomorrow she would be on the way to Rome. Rome, Italy. If he could give her a moment of pleasure, why not?

He stood up. "Why, of course. Certainly."

The man sighed with relief. "That's fine. But the damage?"

"Oh, don't worry about that," said Trowbridge, "there isn't any."

"Mean you get paid by the management? All right. Come along over here." Then, with the air of one who fulfills an intricate social rite, he said to his daughter: "Well, Posy, here he is. Go on and dance." He resumed his seat and set his lips in a straight line. "And I'll stay here and watch you."

The implication was so pointed that Trowbridge almost laughed outright. Controlling himself, he said to her: "Would you care to finish this waltz?"

She made no answer, but she rose instantly. He put his arm around her, and they drifted out on the floor.

And that was precisely what it was . . . drifting. Drifting to music. When the orchestra rested, he looked down at her and said sincerely: "I don't know what your official name is, but I know what your nickname ought to be. It ought to be 'Feather.'"

She blushed faintly. "You see," she said, "I never danced with a professional before, so I'm a little nervous."

"But that's nonsense. You dance beautifully . . . Ah, we get an encore."

Presently she said: "Maybe it was partly on account of my father. You see, he couldn't understand why it wasn't enough for me just to look on. And, when I told him there are always professionals in these places, he wouldn't scarcely believe it. He didn't think it was proper, anyway. Why, I almost had to cry before he'd go over and speak to you."

"I'm glad he came," said Trowbridge, and meant it.

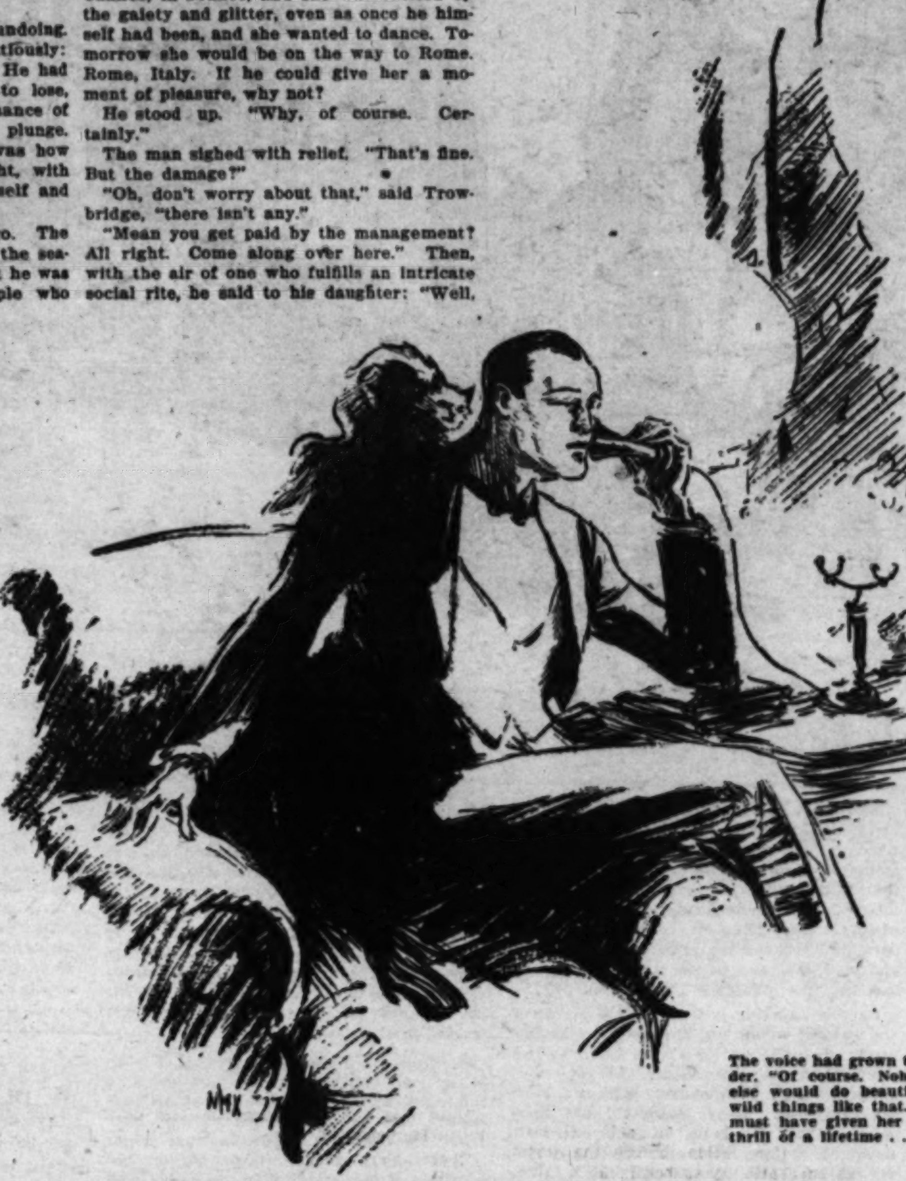
He took her to her father, who got awkwardly to his feet. "Well," he said, "that looked all right, mister." He glanced at Trowbridge's table. "Take a snifter with me, or something, before we start home?"

"Home?" repeated his daughter, with some animation. "Why, I'm not going home for ages, Daddy. That is—" and she turned to Trowbridge—"unless you're booked up."

"Posy," said her father, "you told me—"

"Oh, of course, I did. But I've changed my mind. I want to stay."

"Oh," groaned the man, resignedly. "Well, well have a snifter, anyhow, and mull it over. Posy, you can have an orangeade."



MAX '27

The voice had grown tender. "Of course. Nobody else would do beautiful, wild things like that. It must have given her the thrill of a lifetime . . ."

Trowbridge wavered. He realized that, if they intended to stay another hour, he might have put himself into a rather equivocal situation. For, as soon as his hostess appeared, he would be obliged to join her party, and his reception would betray the fact—even to Posy's father—that he was no professional hoofer. But, if he tried to explain himself immediately, would this pair of provincials appreciate his explanation? He doubted it. They would misinterpret his motive—or, worse yet, they would grasp it. And they would be shamed and insulted. Of course, they would. Didn't he know their kind? Hadn't he been born among people just like that?

Whatever else happened, he surely didn't want to hurt their feelings. That meant he must stay in character. They must never know, or even suspect, the truth. The simplest thing to do was to pretend some other engagement and go and lurk in the foyer. In that case, the girl would probably consent to leave in a few minutes. Hadn't she clearly implied that her decision rested on his "booking?"

"Sit down, mister," said the man. "I got another idea."

Trowbridge sat down.

"Well, it's kind of like this: we're liable to miss Monte Carlo tomorrow, because I got to see this dentist again, and this boat sails tomorrow before supper-time. So what if you gave Posy—my daughter—a couple more turns, and then you showed us in where they gamble? I'd like she should see it, just so's to say she saw it. But I don't know the ropes, so maybe you could guide us. And we'd still get to bed by somewheres about ha' past eleven. I'd make it all right with you. What say?"

Trowbridge looked at the girl and then at his watch. He made another survey of the room and still saw no one whose opinion he courted. "Why, yes," he said, slowly, "that could be arranged."

"Say!" said the man. "You talk like an American."

"I am an American," said Trowbridge, amused.

"No! Honest? Well? Well, that's a horse on me. You're so dark-complected you could be most anything. But how'd a bright young feller like you in this kind of a game, anyway? Been in it long?"

"No, not very long," said Trowbridge, "And it was really by accident."

"Hm! Shouldn't wonder if it was. I mean, I size up men pretty quick. This don't look like your caliber. What's the matter: couldn't you find you a he-job?"

"Oh, Daddy!" breathed the girl reproachfully.

"Keep still, Posy. I'm kind of interested in this young feller. I don't quite make him out."

The orchestra, however, had resumed, and Trowbridge stood up. If mademoiselle would care to fox-trot?

Mademoiselle did care to. Having shed a part of her first diffidence, she talked. She asked a question or two, and replied to others. Their name was Moulton. And his name? Beg pardon, she hadn't quite caught it . . . Why, they came from the Middle West. They came from a place called Cowan. Why, what made him so surprised? Had he ever heard of it? Really? Most people hadn't. But her father was in business there, and there was also a college. And it was funny, his name being Trowbridge, because, only about six or seven years ago, her father had bought out the L. T. Trowbridge Company, and, at about the same time, that same L. T. Trowbridge's son had been a wonderful half-back at Cowan. Could it be any relation?

"Well, everything's possible," said Trowbridge, and held her closer, for she was adorable. But he would have given a great deal, if he had only had sufficient presence of mind to have said that his name was Smith or Schoenfuss or Simpkins, or anything else in the whole directory.

"Why, you're shivering," she said, startled.

"No, I'm not. I'm not, really."

Suddenly she smiled into his eyes. "There's no use trying to fool me," she said, "because I remember you perfectly. I didn't at the beginning, but I do now. As soon as I connected the name. I saw you play on Alumni Field too often." They came to a halt directly in front of her father. "Daddy," she said, "don't you recognize 'Beau' Trowbridge, from Cowan?"

Her father stared. "Are you Lew Trowbridge's boy? Is that a fact?"

"Why—" Even in his social torture, he was too proud to deny it. "Why—yes."

"Why, of course, you are! Good grief, man, it sticks out all over you! How'd I ever come to skip it? You're his image! Well, if this don't beat the Dutch! But—but then what are you doing here?"

"Why—I live here," said Trowbridge.

"Shake hands! Sit down! Well, this beats me! I didn't know your pa so awful well—met him off and on—but I knew of him for thirty years. He was a prince. Yes, sir, he was a prince. We bought it out when he died. It's one of my branches; we got eleven. Sit down!"

Trowbridge sat down. "You—you say you bought it?"

"Didn't you know? Sure we did! Paid forty thousand. And you're his boy? My goodness, what are you in this joint for, then? We heard you had big money. Heired it off some relative or other—they said it was a lot. Blew it, did you? Tell

You are not up-to-date according to "the mob" unles you join the wild scramble after the offal of cattle, sheep and hogs—the very part that even a dog will leave to the last. The intimate organs of animals are the "choice cuts" now. Livers and kidneys don't go begging any more!

Why have men and women fallen for this ridiculous fad?—Because they have swallowed the hokum that eating livers, kidneys, "lamb fries" and the like gives "pep"—makes one feel young again. But sooner or later the poor mistaken mob will learn the only food for "pep" is non-clogging vegetables and fruits.

If you want to test this out, just eat for a while the non-clogging foods served at the Health Cafeterias, 217 West 6th St., (between Spring and Broadway) and 1000 West 7th Street, and at the Whole Wheat Bakery-Cafe, 820 West 6th Street (open Sundays from 7 a.m. to 8:30 p.m.). These delicious menus are rich in vitamines and in iron and other minerals that give "pep". Be sure to take home some of our tasty whole wheat bakery products, sold at all three places.

I see where Berlin "fraus" are adopting the prune as a companion dish to sauerkraut in place of the notorious frankfurter. A wise choice, I call it!—By the way, at the three addresses I mentioned above you can get the best prunes you ever tasted in your life—great big unsulphured sundried prunes that are rich in natural sugars and mineral salts. These and other genuine sun-dried, unsulphured fruits as well as all recognized health foods are sold there. Supply your home table. Mail orders are given prompt and efficient attention.

"There is no reason why a man at 40 should weigh more than he did at 25." This is what Dr. Elsom of the University of Wisconsin said in an address before the American College of Physical Therapy. And it is what we have been maintaining all along at the clinic of the Health Center, 1000 West 7th Street. Over weight is a sign of unnatural accumulations of uneliminated waste matter, just as underweight is a sign of katabolic poisoning from uneliminated waste. We have proved that both conditions can be rectified by the Hydralite Bloodwash Baths, color light therapy, actinic rays, scientific massage, colonic lavage, diet instruction, corrective exercise and other natural healing methods we employ. If you are too fat or too thin, get our free illustrated booklet, "Disease Washed Away." A Health Center Clinician will give you a free consultation any weekday between 8:30 a.m. and 6:30 p.m.

Arthritis and Rheumatism

Q.: What is the difference between arthritis and rheumatism?

A.: The correct full name for the common case of arthritis is rheumatic arthritis deformans. In reality there is no such thing as the commonplace rheumatism. We have a disease listed in the category of medicine known as rheumatic fever. Its classification as such is but recent within the past forty to fifty years.

Arthritis, however, means inflammation of the joints. Rheumatism, in the popular sense, is usually attributed to pain in practically any area of the body but especially of the limbs.

If we were to consider both rheumatism and arthritis, in a general sense, alike, we would not be far off.

Fibroid Tumors

Question: Can fibroid tumor of the uterus be cured?

Answer: On this subject there is a great deal of misunderstanding. The specter of cancer is so great that when a woman is told there is a growth, no matter what the type, the ogre of fear grips her heart and 50 per cent of her morale is destroyed.

In the dissemination of mass fear psychology for medical brethren have done well, indeed. Their success is attested by the scores of thousands of needless operations on growth which, if left unmolested, would not have been responsible for maiming and death. But so thoroughly organized is medical science today that the mere presence of any abnormal growth at once implies the surgeon's knife.

"If there is a growth, cut it out" is almost axiomatic in the medical profession. It is practically rank heresy to dispute or question the logic or wisdom of such a procedure.

"If you don't cut it out, it will develop into a cancer," is enough to send any woman into hysteria and to the surgeon's table.

But what are the actual facts?

A fibroid tumor is not a cancer. Again, a fibroid tumor does not turn into a cancer Still again, the surest way to convert such a growth into a cancer is to remove it. With the tremendous irritation of the surgery and the devastating shock to the nervous system—presto, a cancer appears in another part of the body.

A growth which is fairly benign has been changed in to one of the most deadly malignancy.

Women in the menopause period should know more about this very common and prevalent condition. They should understand the laws of the body and their seasonal changes.

It is the rare exception to find a woman approaching the change of life period physiologically prepared with normal, undiseased, uninflamed tissues. The irritation to these structures comes as a very close second to the irritation of the digestive tissues.

It is for these reasons that we find fibroid tumors so prevalent.

With the complications set up by needless surgery, with more useless medication and with the destructive experimenting of X-ray and radium, we have a sorry picture in the menopause death-rate of womankind.

Now to get back to the question, "Can fibroid tumor be cured?"

My answer is emphatically "No"

Then what can be done for it?

First and foremost, and perhaps most important, its pathogenicity—that is, its disease-producing properties, can be prevented. Living intelligently, hygienically, as "Care of the Body" recommends, a fibroid tumor can be devoid of every potentiality of malignancy.

What of it if a woman does go through life carrying a pound or two of extra tissue in the pelvic area? Adaptation is speedy and quick. Accommodation takes place quite readily. It is far better that we have the weight of a pound or two extra tissue than to have the devastating, life-sapping effects of the hysterectomy operation involved in its surgical removal.

Bear in mind, when the surgeon says that he is removing the tumor, that he does not remove the tumor. He removes the uterus containing the tumor and very often the tubes and the ovaries which go with it. This is an entirely different story from the physical removal of the fibroid.

"But suppose it is let alone—then what?" you may ask.

The only potential danger of a uterine fibroid is during the actual menstrual menopause period. Then there is danger of "flooding," sometimes of a hemorrhagic nature.

If the patient were to go on a complete fruit juice fast and keep the eliminative organs functioning to full capacity, in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred you would find the flooding hemorrhage stopped.

Then what takes place afterward?

In the menopause period there is an atrophy, a shrinking process of all the sexological structures. Compare the breasts of a woman past the change of life with those of a woman in the height of her productive period. The contrast is evident.

A similar process occurs with all the sexological structures— the thyroid, the uterus, the ovaries, the tubes and the contents of the uterus. In this case the contents happen to be a fibroid tumor.

Actual experience and measurements prove these contentions. Where a fibroid tumor may be four or five inches in diameter during the actual menopause menstrual period, two or three years later, if only let alone and a correct diet followed, it will have decreased to two or three inches, a part of the general degenerative process.

Then the woman could go through life unmolested with its presence. The only symptom which might be there would be a slight depression, a general sense as if something were pressing upon the sensitized structure.

This is usually the rule where it is left untouched by surgical, X-ray or radium interference.

All in all, whether a fibroid tumor can be cured or not, it is a great deal more advisable to let it alone than to drastically interfere with nature's economy.

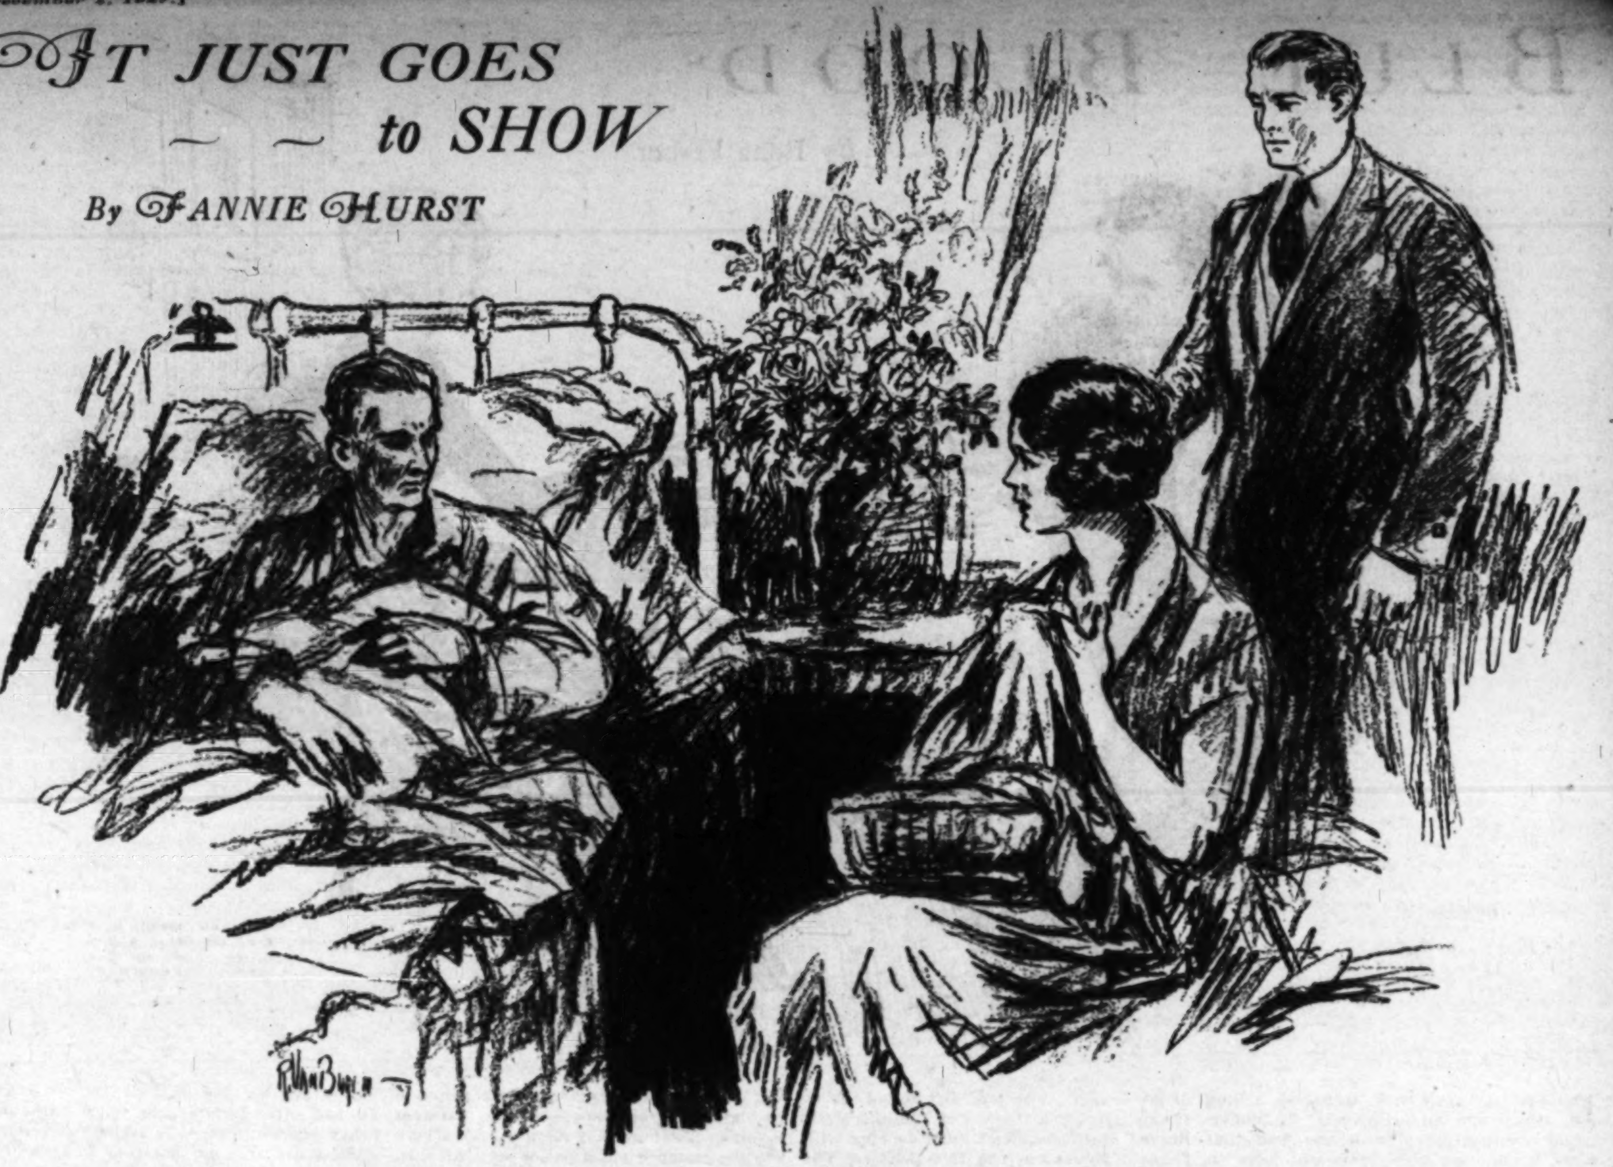
IT JUST GOES — — to SHOW

By FANNIE HURST



It was a strange promise that John Blair exacted from his beloved Hilda—his Hilda, the very sight of whom made a new universe blaze about John.

FOR seven out of the eight years of their married life, John might be said to have been dying.

That is, from the year he contracted double pneumonia on his first big engineering job across an upstate reservoir, he had been flat-on-his-back two-thirds of the time, even after he and Hilda had moved out to Colorado Springs.

It was a stubbornly tragic situation.

John, who had everything to live for, succumbing this way the very first year he was putting his brilliant abilities into practice. He had been an honor student straight through two universities. Great things were expected of John Blair. His graduation thesis from a School of Technology had attracted countrywide attention among waterway experts.

His first two commissions had been the sort usually doled out to men of many years of experience and achievement.

It was upon his prospects, brilliant ones if ever a fellow was entitled to gamble on them, that he had married Hilda Vaughn, who had taught preparatory school in the college town where he had taken advanced degrees in engineering.

She was the gayest girl he had ever known. It was an ingrained kind of gaiety. It made her the most sought-after girl in the large college community. It was an infectious capacity for life. You didn't quite know whether Hilda was pretty or not. It somehow did not matter.

The first time that John clapped eyes on her his universe blazed with a new radiance. There were rivals. It was neck-and-neck for a time. Hilda later admitted to John, after he had won, that for days it had seemed possible to her for a human being to be in love with two people at the same time.

A promising young architect, named Aubrey Slade, a good friend of John's, had been the close runner-up.

Aubrey took his defeat in the spirit of may-the-best-man-win.

John and Hilda were married.

How latent are the possibilities of human endurance! If any one had outlined to Hilda before marriage what the next seven or eight years were to mean, she would have owned herself unequal to the test. Hilda, who loved to be gay. Who loved to laugh. To whom the days were lanes to be danced through. Almost from the first beset with financial worry and the cares and burdens of a sick husband.

John was not an easy invalid. He took his misfortune in the spirit of unbearable humiliation. He hated himself. He was ashamed, before Hilda, before the world, for his susceptibility to bodily ills.

Two years after his marriage he was embittered and ten years older. He insisted upon putting his health to severest tests without realizing that in the subsequent inevitable collapse it was Hilda who must carry the additional burden of his stubbornness.

He went out on engineering surveys when his doctors forbade it and returned to succumb to his bed for a month or two at a time. Finally this sort of fight in John died down a bit. He realized that it was a losing fight. After the third year he was frankly the invalid, spending long days on the sleeping porch provided for him in the little cottage they occupied in Colorado Springs, while Hilda kept house and the "home fires burning" from the room-and-board rent from two railroad clerks who occupied the two spare bedrooms.

It was not easy to obtain lodgers when there was a "lunger" in the house. After a while one became accustomed to the nauseous word "lunger." John even referred to himself as one.

The climate helped, though, and after months John was able to leave his cot and putter around the garden, but anything beyond an hour or two of that sort of thing tired him unbearably.

John felt that he was done for. Bitterness washed over him in waves. His great pity for Hilda took the form of a resentment. The pain of contemplating what he had done to her life had him constantly in its grip.

She was still gay, dear thing, but in a subdued way that almost broke his heart. She was afraid of his irascibilities. She was afraid of getting on his nerves, as she sometimes could because of his pity for her.

She never tired. She never lost her good spirits. And of course she never complained.

John was her chief concern. Her chief duty. Her cheerful duty.

There were respites. An old school friend of Hilda's, Gertrude Dawn, had married a successful throat specialist and now lived in Denver. Gertrude was fond of Hilda and a frequent visitor. Aubrey Slade lived in Denver, too, one of the city's most outstanding architects. At first the bitterness of that had almost killed John. It was as if fate were bent upon dangling before Hilda's eyes what might have been, if destiny had not used her badly. Aubrey Slade, a rich, successful bachelor and living so close that every fresh triumph took place almost under her eyes.

Queer how successfully Aubrey was able to beat all that down in John. He was a frequent visitor to the little cottage. He showered them with attention, yet in the most unobtrusive way. At first John had refused to drink the fresh milk which arrived daily from the Slade Dairy Farms. Later if it failed to arrive he inquired querulously for it.

The most impersonal, most devoted friend in the world was Aubrey Slade. Toward the end, weak, grateful tears would sometimes roll down John's face as he talked of him.

Cursed as some of his luck had been, blessed indeed had it been in some ways.

Not many men were fortunate enough to have a friend like Aubrey.

John knew it, but secretly. Back of it lay the bitter suspicion that it might all be for Hilda's sake.

Gradually, however, that ugly serpent of a thought laid its head, too. There was simply no resisting the kindness of Aubrey.

The last year of his life John could not bear to have a week go by without a visit from him.

John was facing death. He knew it. All of his love for Hilda surged in his heart and hurt there. Dear, lovely, faithful darling to him that she had been.

"Hilda," he begged frequently now—"promise me that when—it is all over—you will marry Aubrey."

"John—how can you—how can you talk so—John—I can't bear it. I want you to live. I'll make you live, darling—"

"I've been a curse and now I want you to have the blessings God meant you to have."

"You've been my life, my light, my joy."

"I've been your drag."

"You've been my blessing."

"Hilda—if you want me to go—happy—satisfied—you must promise—"

"I can't," she sobbed.

One day, to her horror—her unspeakable pain, John broached the subject to Aubrey in her presence.

"Old fellow—I could shuffle along happy—pretty satisfied—about my—girl—if I thought you—and she—I'd like you to promise, old fellow—she's so gay by nature—I want her to have it gay—always—with you—good friend—whom I can trust—"

"Why, John," said Aubrey—"why—of course I promise—anything you want—but—I say, old man—please—you're talking nonsense. You're going to get better."

"I'm a goner—Aubrey—trouble is, though, I've been so damn long going—"

Peace had come to John, all right. His mind was clear and there was a clarity across his face that had not been there in years.

Over and over again he made them promise, standing there by his bedside, that they would walk together. Aubrey and Hilda, the gay paths that had been denied him and Hilda. Over and over again he made them promise that they would marry immediately, and died finally in a sleep of peace because their promises were the last earthly words he heard.

People criticized Hilda severely for her quick second marriage.

"So soon after," they said—"who would have thought it of her! Just goes to show you can't tell anything about people."

CARE OF THE BODY

By Philip M. Lovell, N.D.

The Mind Over the Body

Fifty per cent of all our diseases exist in our imaginations only. When our medical brethren sarcastically and sneeringly refer to certain cures that are made as being "imagination cures," I agree with them fully without the sneering or the sarcasm.

Why shouldn't the modern, up-to-date doctor understand the diseases of the mind as much as he does the kidneys, the stomach, the intestines or the bowels? Why shouldn't he understand the pathology of thought as well as the chemistry of the blood?

It is the mind and the nervous system which dominate the life activities of every cell in the body. It is the electricity which makes the wheels go 'round. Yet somehow or other, the tremendous nervous, mental and emotional phase is treated with sneering and sarcastic allusions.

A thorough inoculation of the dynamic, powerful enthusiasm of the reformer—these are elements well needed by the medical profession. Then they, too, could be healers of sick imaginations—cures just as important as sick stomachs.

Lectures

This issue of "Care of the Body" contains some of the questions asked at the last few lectures given by Dr. Lovell.

Remember, Dr. Lovell speaks every Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the Southern California Manufacturers' Exhibit, 130 South Broadway. All health problems are discussed and questions are answered.

There is no admission charge—no collection. All Times readers and their friends are invited to attend these lectures.

Come and bring some one with you!

And incidentally provision has been made to accommodate any sized crowd so that the "turn-aways" of the past lectures will be avoided.

Colds and Pneumonia

The fall and winter months inevitably bring their train of respiratory ailments.

The cough and the cold are more true in the rule than in the exception. Scarcely an individual is immune. Running noses are to be seen on all sides.

People give little or no thought to the cold or cough of itself. Besides having merely uncomfortable symptoms, little or no significance is given to the common cold.

It is not until the deeper respiratory symptoms develop where that slight inflammation of the lungs changes to an acute form that alarm is felt. It is then said the patient has pneumonia.

That is to say, from the layman's standpoint, pneumonia is little more than the acute, intensified symptoms and disease development of the ordinary cold.

The common type of cold seldom results fatally; pneumonia frequently does.

Why and what is the difference between these two diseases? A great deal must be understood before we can make comparisons.

In the cold we have bronchial and lung congestion. In pneumonia we have the same thing, except in a much more aggravated form. In a cold we have the symptoms of cough, congestion, pain in the chest. In pneumonia we have similar symptoms.

There is something in the popular understanding of pneumonia which puts awe and terror into its victim. This is perhaps to some extent justified when we consider that pneumonia claims a toll greater than that taken by tuberculosis. The mortality is high, ranging about 30 per cent.

What is pneumonia?

From the standpoint of the physician who observes the body processes as they function during an attack, technically three stages are recognized.

First, the stage of engorgement or inflammation in which the lung tissues become swollen, red and angry, as the irritant bacteria and refuse rapidly congest the lung.

Second, the stage technically known as "red hepatization" which simply means that the ung tissue, when exposed in post-mortem autopsy, looks somewhat like liver substance that has turned reddish brown.

The next stage is known as "gray hepatization" in which the lung substance changes to a dull gray color. This is the period of the climax or crisis when the disease either terminates fatally or recovery results.

So far we have presented the technical phases. Let us now see what the common sense aspects present.

Pneumonia is suppoed to be caued, according to orthodox medical science, by a germ which we call the "pneumococcus," "pneumo" meaning relating to the lungs and "coccus" meaning a round germ. As in all other germ diseases, orthodox medicine places the cart before the horse and states that the germs caused the disease, whereas in reality the germs are an effect. That is, they come after the congestion and favorable environment are present.

Germs are like all other living things. They must have the environment capable of sustaining life.

When the lung tissue has that degree of congestion, that accumulation of morbid waste material in sufficient quantities to foster germ development, infection takes place.

We then have pneumonia. Or if, perchance, the environment is favorable for the development of tuberculosis, we then have tuberculosis.

Therefore, instead of the pneumococcus germ being responsible for the disease, common sense will tell us that the lowered resistance, the decreased vitality, the accumulation of morbid, toxic poisons, inadequate breathing, breathing of foul poisons, the destruction of vitality through sexual irradiations and social abnormalities—these constitute fundamental causes rather than the pneumococcus germ.

Pneumonia cannot develop in a healthy body, irrespective of the number of germs that may be present in the atmosphere!

Therefore, logic would teach us that the prevention of pneumonia would come primarily in the building up of this virile, vital form of resistance, that is found in a clean, sound and normally functioning body.

There is very much that I want to say concerning this disease but at this season of the year the most vital point that I desire to stress is the relationship of pneumonia to the orthodox treatment of "colds."

I started this article by comparing pneumonia with the "cold." Perhaps more than all other factors combined, the unintelligent, unthinking, unreasonable treatment of the cold is responsible for the development of pneumonia.

I have stated in this department repeatedly that a cold is nothing more than nature's effort to periodically clean house!—that during a cold every agency and avenue of elimination is functioning full blast—the lungs are discharging foul mucus and waste gases, the tongue is coated, furry and foul, the bowels give forth undue quantities of excreta, the urine is strong and yellow, fever burns up impurities—and in practically every case of uncomplicated, simple cold the patient is in vastly better health after the cold than he was before!

This house-cleaning acts as a purification and a sweep-out process—highly beneficial and reacting splendidly to the general health.

But our public intelligence does not usually consider the cold from this common-sense standpoint. By reason of the unpleasant nature of the symptoms, the usual psychological reaction is to—"do something" for it! With characteristic indolence, the "easiest way" is chosen. The short-cut of taking some medicine or pill to suppress the symptoms is the general method.

With hardly an exception the action of most of these drugs is to drive into the deeper tissues the waste materials attempting to make their exit. The elimination that was started now becomes suppression. The surface tissues which were previously congested becomes relieved, and the deeper, vital tissues, such as lungs, heart, nervous systems, are compelled to bear the load.

Drugs suppress, drive waste materials inward, force the various excreta into tissues little capable of withstanding their poisoning effect!

It is this that constitutes the menace in the cold. It is the suppression, the unrelieved congestion, the forced internal march of morbid wastes that ultimately lead to pneumonia.

You can suppress a cold again, again and again, but sooner or later nature will demand its full price—the grand explosion of the body will occur. The cold becomes aggravated manyfold—then we call it pneumonia.

Summing up, I can say this; no cold ever changed into pneumonia of itself. The only complication of the cold is drugging. The principle danger of the cold is suppression.

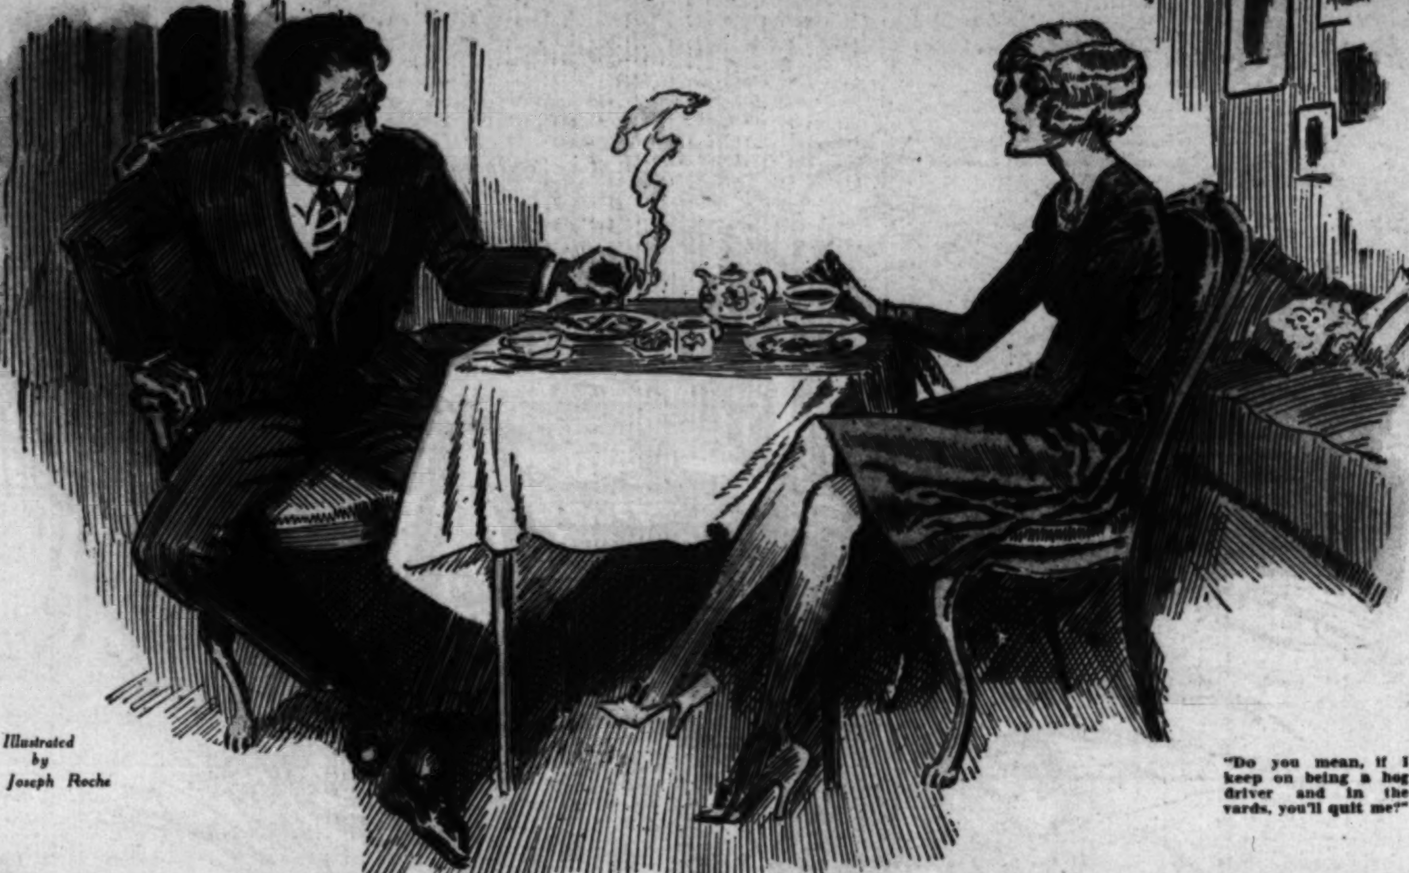
BLUE BLOOD

By Edna Ferber



Illustrated by Leo Joseph Roche

"Do you mean, if I keep on being a hog driver and in the yards, you'll quit me?"

DENNY REGAN was (and is) a hog driver and an aristocrat. To understand the cerulean hue of the fluid that flows in Denny's veins, you will have to know something of Emerald Avenue, where he lives. But Emerald avenue is only a street in the district called Canaryville. Canaryville is but a small part of Chicago's West Side. And Chicago's West Side is, after all, merely one huge arm of the giant, Chicago.

It would, perhaps, be simplest to tie the subject into one neat knot by saying that Denny, Emerald Avenue, Canaryville, West Side, and Chicago are dominated and permeated by that vast Augean acreage known as the Yards. The Yards is Chicago's abbreviation for the Union Stockyards.

Three generations of Regans—Old Dennis, Denny's grandfather, sixty-eight; Tim Regan, his father, forty-nine, and Denny himself, twenty—worked in the Yards. At night they dwelt and slept in Emerald Avenue, just east of Halsted street. Halsted street faces the Yards. Tim, the father, and Denny, the son, born in the shadow of the Yards, had olfactory nerves as insensitive to its peculiar malodors as were their auricular nerves to the din of the city. Old Dennis, with half a century of work resting lightly on his shoulders, would have denied that any odor existed. In three generations of Regans, the Yards had risen from a bad-smelling joke to the dignity of an institution.

Old Dennis's son, Tim, and Tim's son, Denny, had gone into the Yards as inevitably as a scion of the British nobility follows the law of primogeniture. As Old Dennis and Tim had started as hog drivers, so young Denny followed that calling as the first step in the course of porcine knowledge necessary to a true descendant of the house of Regan.

In the district to the west of Canaryville, known as Back Of the Yards, lived Miss Norah McGowan, the lady oftenest seen with Denny Regan at Saturday night dances. A quiet, serious-eyed young woman, Miss McGowan, with a Yards lineage as aristocratic as that of young Denny. She had a good job as stenographer in the Exchange Building at the Yards, not to mention a father, two brothers, three uncles and numberless male cousins employed in Packingtown, which is the factory section of the Yards.

Miss Norah McGowan didn't mind dancing with Denny. She loved it. He was a divine dancer. Why wouldn't he be! Irish, twenty, slim, and the son of Tim and Molly Regan. But—she didn't mind dancing with Denny. For, when you live Back Of The Yards and are employed in the Yards, you are all unaware of the something that so forcibly smites the stranger in Chicago as he nears Halstead street (and the breeze from the west.) He will sniff, look startled, and say, with emphasis, "What's that!"

"What's that?" the native will retort, a shade defensively.

"That! Gosh! Don't you smell it!"

"I don't smell anything . . . maybe you mean . . . it might be you imagine it's the Yards."

"Imagine! Why, say!—"

"I don't smell a thing," the native Chicagoan will repeat. And then, paradoxically enough, "I like it."

That whiff is but a zephyr of Araby, compared to the thing that Denny Regan encountered each morning as he flung open door after door of the trains packed with hogs from the farms of Illinois, Iowa, or Nebraska. It was Denny's job to usher these porcine guests into the Bluebeard hospitality of the pens. Before, and after, this rite, he changed clothes. He often shampooed his hair. He liked to simmer in the tub in the Emerald Avenue cottage. But the Yards were part of him; the pores of his skin, the roots of his hair, the nails of his hands were of the Yards. Denny, having grown up in the midst of it, was as unaware of the breath of the Yards as his grandfather, his father, his mother, Molly Regan—all the members of the household, except his sister, the elegant Ellen. And you should have seen her turn up her nose!

The elegant Ellen worked down-town, and she was renagade to the Yards. She called herself Aileen, and she tried to bring elegance into the Regan household, and looked with disdain on the stamped plush parlor set that was the pride of Molly Regan's life.

What a woman, Molly Regan! A hearty, slam-bang, broad-breasted, light-footed creature who had always made life interesting for the quiet, moody, brooding Irishman who was her husband.

It was incredible what she and Tim had done on thirty-five a week. They owned the cottage on Emerald Avenue. Ellen and young Denny and the oldest girl, now married, had had decent schooling; had been fed, clothed. True, the children had started to work at seventeen, or earlier. But there had been, before that, seventeen years of prodigious eating, shoe scuffings, garment rending. Yet here they all were. And here was the stamped plush parlor set. All this, on thirty-five a week, cannot be accomplished by good management alone. It takes high faith, humor, courage, health, and a belief in fairies.

Of course, Old Dennis, living with them these twelve years past, since his wife's death, and stepping proudly to his work at the Yards daily, contributed to the household's upkeep. A gentle old man, tall, gaunt, silver-haired. His blue eyes had a wistful, other-world look. His job had been that of wielding the nine-pound chopper that cut through the ribs of two-hundred-and-twenty-pound hogs.

"I'm as good as ever I was!" boasted Old Dennis. It wasn't true, but they didn't tell him so. Gradually, they busied him with other jobs. Overseer, they said. Dennis, you'd better oversee this, oversee that. You're the expert. The nine-pound chopper had grown heavy for the old arms. But, when visitors came through, he was often called on to show his skill.

"Here's Dennis," they said. "Fifty years with the company. Show them how a real hog chopper does it, Dennis."

He would step to the platform, king on his throne once more. The great hog carcasses slid past him. As each came directly in front of him, he lifted the chopper high. Down it came through the shoulder of a two-hundred-and-twenty-pounder. It was miraculous that he could wield this instrument with such precision. Two ribs made the cut a New York shoulder. Three ribs made it an English shoulder. One and a half ribs made it a picnic shoulder. And, when Old Dennis's eye, in that fraction of a second, measured one and a half, then one and a half it was.

"Fifty years an' more I've done that," Dennis would say complacently. "It's no more than play to me. I've bigger things to see after."

Such, then, was the heritage of aristocracy into which Denny Regan now took his place.

His own job wasn't pretty. But, then, even princes must learn.

Perhaps it should be told you that young Dennis was a throwback to his North of Ireland ancestors. He had their high cheekbones, and a certain deceptive look of frailty. His eyes were of a peculiar blue-gray, and the whites were very clear, with just a tinge of blue in them, like a child's. He had a dead-white skin, black hair, and heavy black brows. His lashes were long, shading his eyes so that they imparted to them a dreamy look, most misleading, and certainly unexpected, in a hog driver, but fatal nevertheless, to feminine beholders. He was not a merry young man, and rarely smiled. Another point in his favor. Women do not love a cut-up.

Denny's hours at the Yards were hard and concentrated. His was an eight-hour shift supposedly, but often his day was much shorter than that. It all depended upon the trains. Often it was necessary for him to be on the platform at four in the morning, for weeks together. Sometimes a train came in shortly after midnight. You were notified. You had to be there, ready, with your tall ash or hickory pole in your hand.

Denny had already been promoted. He was assistant marker. They'd make him marker soon. He didn't mind the work—rather liked it, in spite of the hours, the filth, the rough labor.

Molly Regan was used to a household whose male members went to work at an hour more favored wives and and mothers would have considered the middle of the night—as often it was. It was one of her boasts that none of her men ever had to go to work breakfastless. The aroma of coffee and bacon might be sniffed in the Regan household at the most incredible hours of the night and morning.

"Late nothin'! And, late or no late, you'll not go out of this house without you've got something hot in your stomach. Sit down and drink this coffee, even if it scalds you."

Down the long lane between the pens went Denny, on his way to the platforms. The locker-room shed abutted on the high platform. Here Denny swiftly changed his clothes, taking from his locker the high boots, the grimed corduroy pants, the rough coat, the hickory wand.

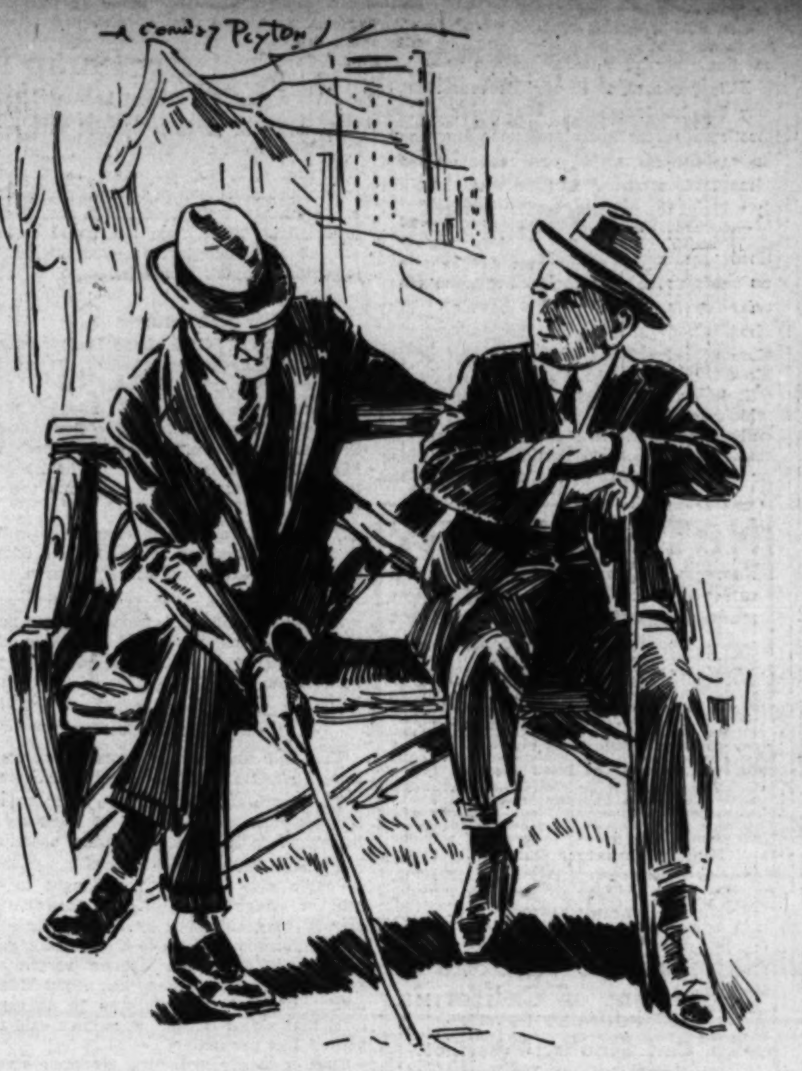
On winter mornings a fire glowed in the stove in the rough room, and the drivers, as they waited for their laden train, talked or dozed on the benches. They were, for the most part, lean young fellows like Denny, and largely Irish.

In mild weather they lounged about the platform or perched on the fence, staff in hand, keeping a sharp eye out for the first glimpse of the puffing black engine coming round the bend. At sight of it, they swarmed the platform. As the train

Professor Foresaw Genius of Youth

Nikola Tesla Studied Twenty Hours a Day Until He Learned Health Was Necessary to Make His Researches Successful

By Preston Wright



"Tesla traced in the sand the design for his revolutionizing invention."

YEARS ago at a social gathering in New York City, two men equally distinguished—although in widely differing ways—were introduced and began to converse.

One was Nikola Tesla, the scientist and inventor. The other was Mark Twain, the author and humorist.

"Do you know," said Tesla, "that twenty-five years ago, "you saved my life?"

And he went on to explain:

"I was a boy in Lika (a border country of what was then Austria-Hungary) and was desperately ill. The physicians had given me up. I was wasting slowly away. But I was allowed to read, and somehow I came into possession of some of your books.

"They were unlike anything I had ever read. They brought me laughter and relaxation. I began to grow better. I recovered."

Tesla stopped suddenly. Mark Twain, the man who had made millions laugh, had burst into tears.

One early morning, not long since, Nikola Tesla might have been seen strolling along Fifth Avenue in front of the New York Public Library, feeding the pigeons that gather there in flocks. It is his daily practice, which only a few early risers witness. But in every other way, he has disappeared from public view. In his seventieth year this man who, at the beginning of the century, was the most discussed individuality in America, is completely forgotten by the press which used to display prominently his slightest utterance.

His discoveries in connection with radio played a large part in the development of wireless transmission of sound. He established, in principle, the possibility of wireless transmission of power. His discovery of the rotating magnetic field, which led to his invention of the induction motor, revolutionized transportation. His experiments enabled him to forecast television. But time has passed, and he is almost forgotten by the public.

It was Tesla's promise, years ago, that he would soon be able to transmit electrical power without wires, that plunged him into the role of the forgotten and the unbelieved. He did not reduce his discoveries to practicality.

But he did not need to produce this wonder to establish himself as one of the great scientific geniuses of his day. The discovery of the rotating magnetic field, and the invention of the induction motor, which made possible street cars, subways, electric trains, electric drives on cruisers, transmission of power by wire, and the harnessing, for instance, of Niagara Falls, alone insured him immortality.

The story of that discovery, and the accompanying invention, is a true romance.

Tesla was born in Smiljan, Lika, in 1857. His father was a Greek clergyman and his mother, who, before her marriage had been Georgina Mandec, dabbled in invention.

The elder Tesla wanted his son to be a clergyman. The boy was sent one year to elementary school and four years to the Lower Realschule at Gospic, Lika. Then he was transferred to the Higher Realschule at Carlstadt, Croatia.

In the latter institution a professor in physics introduced him to electricity. The mind of the boy, which was essentially scientific—an inheritance from his mother—was completely upset by this marvel. He could not bear the thought of further preparation for the clergy.

But his father was obdurate. He would not consent to a change in plans.

It turned out that Nikola's will was firmer than his father's. Although a cholera epidemic was raging, and his parents commanded him to remain at school, he made his way to his home. He was stricken on the day of his arrival and for nine months thereafter he lay abed.

One day he said to his father:

"Perhaps I may get well if you will but let me study engineering."

The sight of his pale face, in which his eyes burned feverishly, and the thought of his wasted form, which seemed near dissolution, finally defeated the parent.

"Yes, yes," he replied, "it shall be as you wish. You shall go to the best technical institution in the world if you will but get well."

It was a solemn promise, solemnly kept, when the boy, with renewed hope, began to mend. But when Nikola was able to walk, his father insisted that he spend a year out-of-doors, without studying. Then he was dispatched to the Polytechnic School at Gratz.

It was a strange manner of youth that made his appearance at Gratz.

A tall, lean lad, Tesla was capable of enormous exertions. He had great strength and at the same time the most acute sensibilities.

He declared that as a boy he could hear the ticking of a watch with three rooms, with closed doors, between himself and the watch. Once, he says, he saved a neighboring house and its occupants from destruction by hearing the crackling of flames while they slept. When a fly alighted on a table in front of him the action, in his ears, was accompanied by a dull thud. He had extreme vision, too, and could see distant objects not perceptible to others.

At the polytechnic school he studied from three o'clock in the morning until eleven o'clock at night. His professors wrote his father that unless he was taken away he would kill himself.

He had a breakdown, but he recovered and pursued his studies with more moderation.

Three professors noted his genius—Rogner, arithmetic and geometry; Alle, integral calculus, and Poeschl, theoretical and experimental physics.

Of the three, Dr. Alle took the most interest in him.

"This young man is a genius," he told everyone.

Every day he remained with young Tesla in the lecture room an hour or so after the class had departed, giving him problems to work and discussing with him the most abstruse questions.

One day a small motor was brought into class. It was of the type then current. It sparked prodigiously. There was a tremendous loss of energy.

Young Tesla wondered how to improve that motor. He expected the utilization of the motor in mechanical flight. But how to build a motor that would not dissipate its own power was a question that was to occupy him for many years.

When he had finished at the Polytechnic School he went to the University of Prague. Later in Budapest he made his first invention, a telephone repeater and fastened on the idea of a rotating magnetic field.

America was the mecca of inventive-minded youth of that day. He decided to come to the United States. In 1884 he entered the employ of Thomas A. Edison.

One evening at sunset Tesla was walking in Central Park, New York, with a friend. Tesla recited a passage from Faust which runs:

The glow retreats, done is the day of toil;
It yonder hastes, new fields of life exploring.
Ah, that no wing can lift me from the soil
Upon its track to follow, follow, soaring!

A glorious dream, though now the glories fade.
Alas, the wings that lift the mind no aid
Of wings to lift the body can bequeath me.

In some mysterious way this passage opened his mind to the final truth that was to make possible the induction motor. With his stick he drew in the sand a diagram of his revolutionizing invention. His companion understood it thoroughly. As for Tesla, it was so real to him that he exclaimed:

"See my motor here; now, I will reverse it."

The induction motor, operated on an alternating current. The current rotated, pulling with it by induction the only moving part of the motor—the rotor, or armature. It dispensed with brushes and commutators, added immensely to power potentialities, gave vast new sources of power to the world and in a few years helped to remake the surface of the globe.

first. Red. Red what? He didn't even know Red's last name.

Norah? Norah was in. Not only was Norah at home, but her mother was home, and her father, one of her two brothers, two of her three uncles, five of the cousins, and countless offspring of all these. There was about that gathering something impressive, hearty, smacking of royalty, so sufficient were they unto themselves, so clannish, so established, so sure.

Denny they greeted as one of them; prince of another such line. Not a word of reproach from Norah. Not a glance of offense from Ma McGowan. Blue Blood. How's your ma? How's all the folks? Norah came forward. Her manner was hearty, but, perhaps, there was just a shade of reserve beneath. Her cheeks were pink, but it was the pink of sudden flush, and not her accustomed ruddy coloring.

"Hello, Norah. Thought you might like to take in a movie or something."

She hesitated—just the fraction of a second. "Kind of—late, isn't it?"

His voice dropped an octave, and vibrated. "Aw, Norah, it ain't late."

"I'll get my hat."

Denny, waiting, chatted with the clan. Their interests his, their viewpoint his, their life his. He and Norah stepped out into the warm, odorous, teeming city night.

"The old boneyard's hitting it up tonight," said Denny.

Norah sniffed a little, but whether the sniff was one of pride or investigation was difficult to know. "I don't smell anything," she said, a shade stiffly. At that, Denny Regan linked his arm through hers and brought hers sharply against his hard young ribs.

"Me neither," he said.

It was not until next day at noon that Denny had a chance to confide his story to Red.

"And, say," Denny concluded, "after I bawled her out, like that, why, all of a sudden, I wanted to get hold of you, see, and spill how I got the same deal you'd got. Well, you could have knocked me for a goal when I remembered I didn't even know your last name, and we been working together months. Can you match that? Say, what is your name, anyway, Red? First and last."

"Madden," said Red, "Martin Madden."

"Yeh!" jeered Denny. "Mar—" A terrible thought struck him. He looked at Red and saw that gentleman's intensely rising color more than justify his nickname. "Say, listen. You ain't the son of the old—why, say—"

"Yeh," said Red. "Learning the business from the ground up, like you. What's the matter with that?"

"Gee," said Denny Regan.

Too Much

The movie comedy director was sitting in the front row at his friend's wedding. He was in a bad humor, for not a single usher was inebriated, and the organist did not have an Adam's apple that would have been funny in a close-up. The bride entered sedately, and the groom and best man made their way to the altar without mishap. The director began to writhe. The bride wore a peach of a long veil, but no one stepped on it. One laugh after another spoiled! Even the minister failed, and held the prayer book right side up.

It was getting unbearable. And when the best man reached for the ring and found it in the first pocket, without fumbling, the director could stand it no longer. Quite forgetting himself, he leaped up and in a voice of rage shouted: "Do that over! Where do you think you are—in a church?"

Getting His Bearings

"And will you want a coat-of-arms on this silver, Mr. Newriche?"

"I dunno. Lemme see some samples."

stopped, they pushed open the doors, set the runway, and out poured the porkers. The noise was terrific. The stench was appalling. You prodded with your long hickory stick. You cried, "Soo-ey! Soo-ey!" and stepped nimbly this way and that, and just escaped being knocked down by a charging hog. You pulled and tugged, as this or that unwieldly bulk refused to take the step from car to runway. "Soo-ey! S-s-s-seee!" Toward the end, you entered the car to hasten the laggards.

Train after train. Car after car. Hundreds, thousands, hundreds of thousands of hogs. Food for a nation—for the world, indeed. The stench in his nostrils, the grime in his clothes, the pandemonium in his ears. "Heh! So-o-o! Soo-ey," called Denny Regan, working with stick and arms and feet. "Sooey! S-s-s-seee!"

Often his day's work was finished by noon. A change of clothes again. Then he could go home, there to snatch an hour or two of sleep. The movies. A ball game.

Oddly enough, though it might be her lunch-hour, Denny never thought of meeting Norah McGowan in front of the Exchange Building, where she worked. Dates were for hours of relaxation, after the day was over. Denny liked to be with Norah. She soothed and exhilarated him. She was easy to be with. Perhaps he had not concretely thought of marriage with her. He had not thought of marriage with any one. But the Regans married young and stayed married. There was Norah, of course. Perhaps that was the trouble. There was Norah, dependable, laughing, hearty. And there was hidden deep a strong vein of the romantic in this silent, handsome, brooding, moody hog driver.

Coming to work one May morning, Denny noticed a new driver. They came and went. You paid little attention to them. This young fellow had a locker next to Denny's. He was undoubtedly Irish, but of the other type; sandy-haired, freckled, stocky, blue-eyed. His shoulders were broad; his face was frank and good-natured. He had some trouble with his locker key. Denny showed him how it worked.

"New guy, ain't you?"

"Yeh."

His boots, his corduroy pants, his woolen shirt were new. Denny eyed them.

"Worked in the Yards before?"

"No."

"You want to be careful. You're liable to get a spot on them clothes."

"Yeh, I was worrying about that," said the new one. "Give me the address of your cleaner, will you?"

"Don't get fresh, guy," Denny warned him.

"Why, say, take a joke, can't you!" The boy's eyes bore a look of hurt surprise. And, as he spoke, he lifted gently out of his way one of the benches that was preventing his locker door from opening to its full width. On it, at the moment, were two substantial gentlemen in the hog driving profession. He had lifted the bench, almost without bending, and much as you would move a book from that side of the table to this. "Excuse me," he said, addressing the two on the bench. "I gotta get into my locker."

"That's all right, fella," said one of the two, palpably impressed. "Leave us know before you get ready to move the shack, though, will you?"

Down the track came the train. The drivers swarmed the platform. The new man followed, uncertainly. Denny eyed him with a new respect. Stick with me," he said. "I'll show you."

The new man stuck, gratefully. By noon his boots were as unspeakable as Denny's.

He and Denny became rather friendly in that remote, unquestioning way men have. He was known as Red. Sometimes, when they had cleaned up, they went to a soda fountain on the corner. Their broad shoulders drooped over a minature mountain of ice cream, topped by a snowcap of marshmallow.

Denny Was Proud of Himself and His Job, But His Girl Laughed at the Job and Said He Had to Give It Up

Denny never dreamed of inviting Red to his home. They knew very little about each other. Their talk was a thing made up almost entirely of monosyllable words.

From Denny: "You going to stick with the Yards?"

"Sure. You?"

"Yeh. We all been. My old man and his old man and all. All our life."

"Me, too."

"Yeh! You ain't said before. Right in the Yards, or what?"

"Packingtown's where I head in. Where my old man is, and all."

Sometimes they talked of women.

"You running with anybody?"

"Yeh, I got a girl. She lives Back 'Of The Yards. Works over in the Exchange Building. She's a good kid."

"What's she like?"

"Well, I don't know. She reminds me of my old woman. Jolly, and a kidder, and laughing."

"Figuring to marry her?'

"No!" said Denny, a little surprised at the vehemence of his denial.

Red spoke simply. At something in his voice, Denny looked up, and saw the other's features twisted with pain. What Red said was, "My girl turned me down because of the Yards." His round pink face was deeper pink, and his blue eyes were suddenly dark.

"How do you mean—the Yards?"

"Well, I'm working in the Yards, see, and I can't stay out late, because of getting up so early. But that isn't all. The stuff gets into your skin, and it doesn't matter how much you change and bathe and m—uh—bathe. And, when we're dancing, she says it makes her sick. And she wants to know if I'm going to stick with the Yards, and how long this is going to go on, and all, and I tell her years, though maybe I won't always have a job that smells so bad, and, at that, she says it's either her or the job."

"Ha!" jeered Denny. "The nerve! Say, I hope you told that jane where to get off at."

"Yeh," croaked Red, miserably. "Yeh, I told her."

"Didn't want you to work in the Yards, huh? When I'm married, my kid's going to work in the Yards, like me and my old man and his old man, see? Only different, see?"

Red seemed interested. "How's that? How do you mean, different?"

"Well, I quit school when I was seventeen. My old man, he quit when he was thirteen. And his old man—my Grampa—he quit when he was ten. Well, my kid, he's going to have an education in him, and don't you forget it, and then he's going to start in pig driving, but when he finishes, he ain't going to have no lousy little job, like my old man or like Grampa, after he's been working a hundred years or better in the Yards. Grampa, he thinks the old birds that made their piles in the business, old Cassidy and Martin Madden and like that—are like the guys in the Bible. What they do is right, see, even when it's wrong. He's always saying how good they been to him, and how old Madden, when he happens to be in the Yards and sees him, shakes his mitt, see, and calls him Dennis. You'd think he'd give him a million. My old man, he's different again. He's in more with labor, and like that. Always beefin'. At that, he's headed in right, only he don't know what it's about. Grampa tells him about meeting Madden, and Pa says, 'Well, what of it?'

"'What of it!' Grampa says. 'He shook my hand and called me Dennis, didn't he?'

"Pa says, 'You give 'em everything you got in you, didn't you? Well!'

"'They paid me for it, didn't they?' the old man says.

"'Like fun they did!' says Pa. At that, he's right. Only he don't know, like I do, that we're what counts now. My kid, he goes into the Yards, see. But he knows where he's headin' in, when he goes, like I do. Only better."

The elegant Ellen, hearing something of this new friend of her brother, was languidly curious. Each member of the family was likely to encounter certain characters that so impressed him as to be introduced into the talk that went round at supper. Red said this. I was talking to Red, and he said that.

The elegant Ellen's saga was all about a certain Genevieve, who graced the office in which Ellen was employed. All the graces were embodied in this young lady, who, by now, had become a myth (and a jest) in the Regan household. Ellen unfortunately explained that the owner of the name insisted on the French pronunciation. She illustrated.

"Jenny-veeyave!" Molly Regan had exclaimed. "Save us all, what a name!"

"It's French, Ellen went on. "Her father was French.'

'What's this Jenny-veeyave's last name?" Molly inquired.

"Duppy." Then, hurriedly, as a shout went up. "But that's only because of the way it's pronounced in America. Du Puis, that's what it used to be. Du Puis."

Denny Regan choked over his coffee. "Listen, did you ever tell her about your swell brother, Dennay?"

"Bring your friend here some time for Sunday dinner, or to supper," said the hospitable Molly.

"Leave me know when you do," said the gallant Denny, "and I'll be out."

But, when the exquisite Genevieve Duppy appeared, Denny was in.

Miss Duppy was dainty. Miss Duppy was cool. She was good. She was elegant beyond words. She was frail, blond, lymphatic. You, having swept your plate clean, saw with dismay that her fork was mincing fastidiously about among the less gross tidbits that made up her own portion. She leaned toward you a good deal, rarely smiled, and was, altogether, a thoroughly selfish and charming little defective.

She was more silent than Denny, so that, as he took her home, he found himself growing loquacious. Her diction and vocabulary were much less elegant and varied than her manner would have led you to expect.

"Can you imagine . . . I'll say you're wonderful! . . . You slay me! . . . Honest!" all uttered in a small voice that made the memory of Miss Norah McGowan's hearty utterances seem Amazonian in comparison.

Did she like to dance? Yeh. Would she go some time? Maybe. Next Saturday? What's tonight? Call me up.

There began a series of tortures for Denny Regan. Her tricks were cheap, and Denny was deceived by them. She broke engagements, pretended offense when none had been offered, was deliberately provocative, and took refuge in false dignity. Through it all, she disparaged the Yards, said the smell made her sick, and was none too delicate in stressing this fact as she danced with the miserable Denny.

Sometimes he encountered the forthright Miss Norah McGowan. "What's the matter, Denny? You sore at me?"

"No."

"I haven't seen you lately."

"I been busy."

As if she didn't know.

The anemic Genevieve, meanwhile, continued to find fault with him. He was contrite. She made unreasonable demands. He was abject. She objected to his manners, clothes, conversation, friends, home, address, finger-nails. He considered changing them all. He was in love.

She made a mistake. It was one night when he was having Sunday supper in the murky little flat Miss Duppy and two friends shared. The scene was domestic, intimate. Denny looked masterful. Perhaps this natural little parasite sensed in him potential success. She had dilated upon the aristocracy of her ancestry, the Gallic strain in her blood, the exquisiteness of her lineage.

"And," she said, concluding the tale of her own elegance, "why don't you get a decent job down-town?"

"What?" said Denny, not as one who has not heard, but as one would ask who has failed to understand.

"Why don't you get a job down-town? You could. If I'm going to keep on going with you, I can't have the girls all laughing at me because you're a hog driver. It makes me sick." She shuddered. "The Stockyards. Killing and everything."

"Makes you sick, does it?" inquired Denny, with a quietness that she mistook for meekness.

"Oh, yes," replied Miss Genevieve Duppy.

"Do you mean, if I keep on being a hog driver and in the Yards, you'll quit me?"

"Well, yes." Miss Duppy had hardly hoped her victory would be so immediate," so complete.

Denny crushed his cigarette and rose. "Good night," he said.

"What do you mean, good night!"

Denny's voice was not lifted above his usual conversational tone. "Listen, Frenchy. You ain't the only one has got blue blood, and don't you forget it. Me, I'm the son of a son of a hog driver. My grandfather remembers when they used to dump hogs on the hills outside the city and sell 'em for so much a head. That's how far back he goes. My uncle, John Daley, is the champion beef dresser of the world. Not of the Yards. The World! Twenty minutes from opening to dropping the hide. We been in the Yards since there was any. My grandfather and my father and me and my kid. You talk about your folks, will you! I guess, when it comes to blue blood, we're there!"

"What do you mean, your kid?" asked Miss Genevieve Duppy, a little breathless.

"Why—I don't know," replied Denny foolishly; and thought suddenly of Norah McGowan, who so strangely reminded him of his mother. Suddenly he strode out of the house. Miss Duppy's laugh, finely dramatic as it was, failed to reach his ears.

There were two people he wanted to see. Miss Norah McGowan. And Red. Red, whose girl had turned him down because he worked in the Yards and was redolent of the Yards. Hurt, angry, indignant, disillusioned. He'd go over to Norah's. Bet she was sore, and no wonder. He'd call up Red me all about it. Man, I'm your own people!"

"There isn't much to tell, Mr. Moulton. I'm here because I like it."

"Like it? Like this kind of a job? Lew'd spin in his grave! No, listen, son, let's talk right out. Why, I wouldn't have spoken to you, if I hadn't sized you up first. No, sir. And then to find out your pa was Lew Trowbridge! It—it kind of takes my breath away."

For an instant Trowbridge was inclined to enact the grand seigneur. He was inclined to reveal his true status in society—without revealing his financial status—and claim that he had recognized Mr. Moulton, and that the entire proceeding had been a joke. But, on the other hand, there might be some merit in strategy, for there was no guessing what the evening might hatch.

He said blandly: "Well, have you anything better to suggest, Mr. Moulton?"

The man peered at him. "Well, I might, at that."

"Really?"

"Couldn't be any worse, anyhow. You're busted, ain't you? Well, why don't you come back to America, where you belong?"

"And do what?"

"Well, what can you do?"

"That's a different story."

Moulton regarded him keenly. "Son, do you want a job? A he-job? If you do, you're hired. I'll start you at fifty a week, and I'll shove you ahead as fast as you earn it. And I'll pay your transportation! That's my offer, and it goes as it lays. I knew your pa . . . We're capitalized at a million and we pay seven per cent. We got eleven branches and we only just begun to spread. It's territory where your name carries weight. Lew was a prince, and you'd be all the better for the experience you had. And you got all the earmarks of the salesman I want. He'd specialize in the swell trade . . . It's your say. Do you want to dicker?"

Trowbridge frowned. At that moment, the orchestra catapulted into "Rose Marie." He stood up. "I'm not ungrateful, Mr. Moulton," he said. "On the contrary, I'm infinitely indebted to you. But Posy wants to dance—and the time to dance is when there's music. We'll talk it over afterward."

"Suit yourself," said Mr. Moulton.

And so they danced once more. She said: "I'm almost dizzy. It doesn't seem real. I can't cope with it. I used to watch you when I was ten or eleven. And now—in Cannes?"

He said: "A lot has happened since then. Would you like it if I went back?"

She said: "You're still a hero there. But—in Cannes?"

He said: "This is different. You can't imagine how different it is."

"Oh, yes, I can. Or I can guess. Are you coming back?"

"Well—do you want me to?"

Presently she said: "How can I answer that?"

He held her closer. She was very young and desperately lovely. But he was thinking, principally, of the prospect of the safe, tranquil life at Cowan, where, on fifty dollars a week, men were married and saved money. And, if they married the daughter of the boss—that is, when the boss owned a coal company paying 7 per cent—why, this was comparative luxury.

He said: "My dear—can't you?"

She relaxed in his arms. "No, not possibly. Let's go in the gambling-rooms. I want to see what they're like."

He said: "Wait a moment. Don't misunderstand me. I don't ask you to say too much. I just ask if it would please you to have me there. Even if it were just to dance with you. Just to know that I could see you, and that we could be friends. You can't answer me?"

She shook her head. "How can I? Let's get Daddy and go in the gambling-rooms."

He piloted the Moultons toward the Salle de Baccarat.

"They're playing chemin-de-fer," he said. "Shall I explain it to you? Well, the court-cards and tens count nothing, and all the other cards count face value. The object is to get two or three cards that come nearest to a total of eight or nine. An eight with two cards is better than a nine with three. Well, the dealer puts up whatever stake he likes, and the first player on his right can say 'Banco!' which means that he shoots the works. If he doesn't care to do it, then the other players in order have the right to go banco. If nobody does it, then, beginning with the right, they put up whatever proportion of the stake they choose. The dealer deals two cards, face down, to the player on the right and to himself. The player on the right is playing for the entire table, as against the dealer. If either of them has eight or nine, he has to show it at once. If not, either of them can have a third card, if they want it—that is, if they think they can get nearer to eight or nine total. Then they show down, and that's all there is to it. As soon as the dealer loses, the deal passes—or he can pass it voluntarily, if he thinks his luck is running. That's all."

"My soul!" said Mr. Moulton. "And I'd always thought this was a he-man's game!" He approached the nearest table, studied the play for a moment, and abruptly remarked: "Banco!"

The croupier turned to him. "A bank of five thousand francs, sir."

"Smell it!" said Mr. Moulton, producing the notes.

"Cards, monsieur."

"A four and a five," said Mr. Moulton, showing them. "That's nine in American—what is it in French?" And collected his winnings.

The deal passed. "A bank of five thousand francs, messieurs."

"Banco!" said Mr. Moulton, and was dealt a two and a six.

Some twenty minutes later, Dorothy Moulton—alias Posy—disengaged herself from Mr. Trowbridge's protecting arm. "If it's as easy as all that," she exclaimed, "I'm going to try it myself!"

At midnight, the two Moultons had won, between them, four thousand dollars. Thirty minutes later, their profits were nearly eight thousand. Trowbridge, who had grown increasingly restless, plucked at Mr. Moulton's elbow.

"I'm sorry," he said, "but I've got an appointment. If we could—"

"See you afterward," said Mr. Moultoh abstractedly. "This is too good to quit."

"Yes, but you're leaving tomorrow, so if I—"

"Write me care of Cook's, Rome," said Mr. Moulton impatiently. "What I told you, I stand by . . . Banco!" And shot the works.

Trowbridge went around to his daughter, who was flushed and intent. "My dear," he said to her, quietly, "if you could tell me, honestly, that—"

She brushed him aside. Why not?—When she was winning approximately twenty-five dollars every minute. "Banco!" she said, and shot the works.

"Listen, dear," he said, "can't you please listen, just a second? I wish you'd tell your father about tonight. I want to explain the whole thing. I—"

"Please don't bother me! Banco!" She shot the works.

He stood for a moment, looking from one Moulton to the other, and then he walked out to the Salle des Ambassadeurs. He stood at the stairway and looked guiltily for Lady MacDonald and her party. They weren't there. He beckoned to the head-waiter, and the head-waiter told him that they had come and gone.

Slowly, drearily, he went out, forgetting to tip the woman in the vestiaire.

Well, it was all over. It was finished. Everything was finished. For more than an hour his thoughts had been upon the little college town he had known, and upon the possibility of returning there. And, because of that fancy, which had so curiously soured, he had thrown away the living present.

The Moultons would move on, and complete their tour, and, perhaps, Mr. Moulton might even write him to renew his proposition. But Trowbridge would refuse it. Yes, even if he had to go hungry, he would refuse. For, in two more minutes, he might have told Posy—Dorothy—that he loved her, and, in two more minutes, it might have been true. He had been within two minutes of loving her—for herself, for fifty dollars a week, and for the salvation of his soul. But could she ever have saved his soul—she who was deaf to the cry of his heart, and cried only "Banco!" to the hearing of the croupiers? He himself knew all about that emotion. It was bad enough in a man, but in a woman, it was terrible. And she had seemed so innocent, so ineffably dear. But the voice of the croupier had drowned his own.

And her father, who had been so sentimentally kind until he, too, was admitted to the Salle de Baccarat, whereupon he had promptly lost all remembrance of Lew Trowbridge, and Lew Trowbridge's son, and thought only of the psychological moment to say "Banco!" And, with his pockets filled with thousand-franc notes, he had told Trowbridge to write him, care of Cook's, Rome.

Finally, Lady McDonald. Trowbridge awoke to a devastating reality. The quality that he had tried to love in Posy Moulton: It wasn't money; he would swear that it wasn't money; it was an elusive something that had drawn him to Posy, because, since she was Posy, he couldn't imagine her as rich. But because Lady McDonald was rich, he had discounted his own sentiments, since he himself was poor. He knew now that he loved Claire McDonald, and that he had loved her for months. It wasn't her money. It was not her money! It was that elusive something—he couldn't express it, but that was why he loved her. Himself, he was a bankrupt, except for what he could offer in affection. What he loved in Claire was exactly the quality of little-girliness he had found in Posy. That is, until they had begun gambling.

Claire was a little girl, too. She was spiritually eighteen. And she was beautiful, and she loved him. And tonight he had affronted her. He hadn't even put in an appearance at her party. Well, that was that.

Trowbridge stumbled up the stairs of his apartment-house. He opened the door, and Raoul de Ronronne tinkled briskly to meet him. Trowbridge gathered up the morsel of gray fur.

"Raoul," he said, "we are certainly on the rocks, old boy. We are absolutely on the rocks."

"Pr-r-ow?" inquired Raoul, and chewed his master's collar.

"Cat," said Trowbridge, "you're a lucky little beast. No dreams, no illusions, no sorrows. I envy you."

The telephone rang. With Raoul on his shoulder, he answered it.

"Oui. J'escoute."

Lady McDonald's voice. "Hello! Is that you, Jimmy?"

"Why, hello, Claire!"

The voice was tinged with laughter. "Oh, you miserable traitor! You didn't see me, but I saw you!"

"You saw me—where?"

"Going into the baccarat room. Who was she, Jimmy? It's all over Cannes."

"How so? What about?"

"How they mistook you for a pro. The Cliftons were right behind you and they heard the whole thing. She was sweet, though. I don't blame you, Jimmy. It was just like you."

"What?"

The voice had grown tender. "Of course. Nobody else would do beautiful, wild things like that. It must have given her the thrill of a lifetime. Did you think I'd be peevish? I was hoping you'd bring them back, so I could be in it, too. I'd have loved it. Why didn't you bring them back, Jimmy? Afraid I'd high-hat them? Why, don't you know yet what sort of person I am? I'm the same sort of person inside that she was outside. I'd have adored doing a party for them."

"Well—there's more to it than that. I'll explain, when I see you."

"Oh . . . you didn't gamble, did you, Jimmy?"

"Not a sou."

"You know that's the one thing I hate?"

"Yes, ma'am."

A pause. The voice was subdued. "I did miss you, though. Lots."

"I—I'm just beginning to miss you.

"Well—just what does that mean, Jimmy?"

"Well, how soon do you want to know?"

"Well, it's only just past one o'clock, Jimmy—and some of us are having a nibble here—we're in my house—and I've got a garden and I hear tell there's a moon—"

"Well, it'll take twenty minutes to get a taxi, dear."

"No, Jimmy! I'll send the motor for you."

"Not a prayer, old lady. I'll get a taxi."

"Really? Would you rather?"

"Yes, dear. Much rather." For he still had eight hundred francs in his pocket.

"Right-o. About twenty minutes?"

"Yes, darling."

"But, Jimmy! Can't you tell me—can't you give me a tiny hint—of what you'll say when you get here?"

Trowbridge gulped. "What I'll say, dear, is—banco."

"What was that, Jimmy?"

"Banco!"

"Oh!" she said, and the line buzzed and sputtered. "What do you mean, Jimmy?"

"I'll tell you—in twenty minutes," said Trowbridge.

He hung up the instrument, while Raoul gnawed diligently at his sleeve-buttons.

"Yes, cat," said Trowbridge, "banco! Banco, banco, banco!"

And gently tossed the kitten to the floor and went out again into the night.

CONCERNING A GOOSE

The goose sold for twenty cents per pound. Tommy's statement that a bird half the size of the one weighed by the butcher would leave him a credit of forty cents, whereas the large one cost sixty cents more than the sum of money that he laid upon the counter, proves that $2 was the cost of the larger goose. Tommy asked for a seven pound goose for which he expected to pay $1.40, so the goose must have been selling for 20 cents per pound.

THE STORM

By Clifford McBride

crowned with thorns; but there is world beyond this one, in which the rich oppressor will find his punishment, and the poor man his reward. In the Book of Daniel and the Book of Enoch this hope and promise become clearer and more positive; and Daniel sees God coming in a Last Judgment of thunder and lightning to drive the wicked into everlasting hell and take the just with him into Paradise. So was the soil prepared for Christianity.

Coda

The rest is dispersion. Through all the years of Greek rule in Palestine the Jews fled or drifted out of their cities to every port of the Mediterranean: to Antioch, and Athens, and Alexandria, and Rome, and Carthage, and Marseilles, becoming by force of circumstance the merchants par excellence of the ancient and the modern world. By Caesar's day there were more Jews in Alexandria than in Jerusalem.

In the old Temple discord rules. Chasidim and Zadikim, Pharasees and Sadducees, quarreled about the interpretation of the Law; and strange sects like the Essenes rose to protest against the growing surrender of the younger Jews to the pagan influences of Greece; scholars began to write commentaries on the Law, and commentaries on the commentaries, until the Talmud was formed, in which the text of the Law appeared on each page as a little island in the sea. But the greatest scholar of them all, Hillel, brought them back to the essence of the matter when he was asked to define religion: "What thou wouldst not for thyself, do it not to thy neighbor. Therein lies the whole Law." Here again the way was made straight for Christ.

Meanwhile the little land changed rulers, but could not keep its freedom. In 165 B. C. Judas Maccabaeus, with an army gathered slowly in the fields, man by man, entered Jerusalem and drove out the Greeks. The enemy returned reinforced, and Judas was killed in battle; but the memory of his courage inspired his followers to fight on till they were free. That year of victory, 142 B. C. became the Independence Day of the Jews; and to this day they celebrate it yearly.

But only eighty years later Pompey came, with all the power and ruthlessness of Rome. He had learned that the Jews would not fight on the Sabbath, and so on the Sabbath he attacked with all his forces. Great siege engines battered down the ancient walls, and sent heavy stones like shot into the Temple. The Jews, in the midst of death, went on with their services. What if the individual died? The race would remain, and return even to Jerusalem, long after every Roman had passed away.

So Palestine became a province of the new barbarians in the West; the Temple was despoiled of its treasures, and Jews by the thousand were sold into slavery. When Titus came, in 70 A. D., to destroy the Temple utterly, in a fit of petulant revenge for the insubordination of the Jews, it was the last scene in the tragedy of the Jews. In the Alte Pinakothek at Munich you may see, in Kaulbach's massive picture, Titus entering among the ruins, while the elders kill their children, and the priests kill the elders, and the last surviving rabbi presses the sword proudly into his own heart. It was a noble way for a nation to die.

But of course it is not dead. In Jerusalem enthusiastic students have helped skilled workmen raise, stone by stone, the great Library of the Hebrew University. Already 400,000 volumes have been placed upon its shelves. This library and this university have become the intellectual center and home of the Jewish people, the repository of their learning, the preserver of their language, and the Alma Mater of their youth. Nowhere in history shall we find greater faith or finer courage than this. Would it not be a kindly miracle if on that little hill a nation were being reborn?

DECEMBER IN CALIFORNIA HISTORY

American as they got to him, and thus almost swept the field clean of our men. That combat lasted only half an hour, but it was the bloodiest battle in the Conquest of California; for it cost us the loss of that superb soldier, Captain Benjamin D. Moore of the First United States Dragoons, and sixteen other Americans, nearly all slain by lances; while Captain Gibson, Robidoux, and fourteen others were badly wounded; in addition to which, Kearny and Gillespie received severe wounds.

However, our other soldiers came into action as fast as they could; our rearguard came up with howitzers; and presently their fire drove off the Californians, who galloped off the scene of conflict, without the loss of a man, although some twelve of them were wounded. With them they carried off one of Kearny's brass howitzers, whose mules had stampeded during the battle. Our men had fought bravely, but they had been badly beaten.

Stunned at this unexpected disaster, Kearny camped on the scene of conflict; and when night fell, he sent Lieutenant Godey—Fremont's famous scout—to Stockton at San Diego, with an urgent request for reinforcements. Next morning, Kearny took up the march toward San Diego; but almost at once, many Californians surrounded his force, which was then on a mesa near San Bernardo. And here they were cooped up by the enemy for several days.

Kearny's position was desperate, for his food was gone, his force decimated, his horses dead, the long-suffering mules tottered as they walked. His emaciated men and suffering wounded men were in a parlous pass. So, on the second night, Kit Carson, Lieutenant Beale and an Indian stole out of his harrassed camp, under cover of darkness; and after several hair-breadth escapes, they wriggled on their bellies through the enemy's lines, and sped off to bid Stockton hurry up his armed aid, ere Kearny's force were all gone goslings.

Startled at this new disaster to Kearny, Stockton sent out a force of two hundred sailors and marines, who arrived at Kearny's camp on the tenth—the Californians retiring at the approach of this new enemy. Convoyed by this rescue-party from our navy, Kearny and his dragoons reached San Diego two days later, greatly to the relief of all concerned. One thing was proved by this conflict—that the native Californians could and would fight—and fight effectively—whenever the odds against them were not too great.

Stockton's Famous March to Los Angeles

December 29, 1846. Rescued by our naval forces, the small army expedition under General Kearny had reached San Diego, and found that Stockton had his expedition about ready to move upon Los Angeles. Stockton's six hundred men were nearly all naval—sailors and marines—drawn from the United States warships then under the command of the gallant commodore; whilst Kearny now had only some fifty-seven soldiers at his command. Also, it was through Stockton's efforts alone that this expedition had been organized, and, as he was broad-minded enough to understand the bitter feeling of defeat that rankled in Kearny's mind after his military fiasco at the Battle of San Pascual, he generously allowed Kearny to command the military features of the expedition, whilst still retaining for himself the general command of it. Fremont was now marching southward from Monterey, to attack Los Angeles from the north; whilst Stockton now went on with his original plan, of assailing Los Angeles from the south.

On December 29, 1846, Stockton set out from San Diego on this famous march, with about 600 men. Of this force, 394 men were sailors and marines acting as infantry, forty-seven sailors serving as artillery men, fifty-seven of Kearny's dragoons, sixty volunteers and twenty-five native Californians and Indians. After much trouble, Stockton had gotten six cannon, of various calibers rigged up for land travel; and he had contrived a wagon-train out of a four-wheel carriage and ten native ox-carts (carretas,) each with two wheels made out of solid wood and about two feet in diameter.

This was a great historic march, but the going was rough, and our blue-jackets and marines deserve all the more credit for it, as they were not properly equipped or accustomed to marching and fighting on land. That 145-mile march of theirs was a trying and splendid one; and its outcome greatly added to the fame of our navy.

First American State Legislature of California

December 15, 1849. As early as February, 1847, the California Star editorially urged the calling of a convention to form a Constitution that would govern California. California was neither a State nor a Territory; but was simply a region governed by an army officer appointed as Governor by the President of the United States. As our Governor's powers were moot or limited, California was rightly described as a land "without law, without order, and without a government."

President Polk urged Congress to legislate into being some sort of a territorial government for California; but it played politics, stalled around, and did nothing. Finally, the good men and true of San Jose got so worked up about the growing lawlessness out here, that they held a meeting at San Jose, on December 11, 1848, to consider "the propriety of establishing a Provisional Territorial government for the protection of life and property."

Crime was rampant, when the reckless gold-hunters swarmed into California; but all action was postponed whilst Congress was in session, in the hope that it would provide a government for California. However, when it adjourned in March, 1849, without taking any action in this vital matter, California felt that the time had come for it to take action of its own. Californians agreed that a convention should be called to form a Constitution—but, the only trouble was, no one (save Congress) had the right to call such a convention. Governor Mason was a soldier, and had no legal right to do so; but his successor, General Bennett Riley—also a regular officer—boldly assumed a right to act in this crisis, which was not covered by our Federal Constitution.

He, therefore, called an election, to elect delegates to a Constitutional convention, which was to meet at Monterey on September 1, 1849. This election was duly held on August 1; and the convention met at Monterey on September 1, and formed a State Constitution, which was duly signed by the delegates on October 13, 1849, amidst great rejoicing. Conformable to this Constitution a State-wide election was held on November 13, which ratified the State Constitution by a fifteen-to-one vote, elected two Congressmen, chose Peter H. Burnett, an Oregon pioneer, as Governor, and elected Assemblymen and Senators for our Legislature.

On December 15, 1849, the First American State Legislature of California met at San Jose, which had been designated by the convention, although our State Capital had not been formally located. To house this august body, the San Joseans had supplied it with a crude two-story wooden box, sixty feet long and forty feet wide, which was thus our first magnificent State Capitol.

Their first matter attended to by this historic Legislature was the election of two United States Senators; for even if we were not yet legally a State—nor even a Territory—all felt that we would soon be such. Fremont was chosen Senator on the first ballot; and Gwinn on the third ballot. Next in order was the raising of revenue, wherewith to pay salaries and expenses—and all joined in this matter with the greatest of enthusiasm. Next, came the enactment of a State Code of Laws; and quite a good one was compiled, by utilizing the already existing codes of certain States of our Union. The Legislature also formulated a petition to Congress, requesting that the brand-new State of California be admitted into the Union, muy pronto—the pronto'er the better.

Legislating is dry work; and speechifying makes men thirsty—and that was a marvelously thirsty era. Hence, the most popular motion was the one frequently made by one noble Roman of a Senator, who used few words—but to the point—to formulate his usual motion: "Mr. Speaker, I move that we now adjourn, and take a thousand drinks!"

The motion was usually carried unanimously; and hence ribald writers have dubbed this as the "Legislature of a Thousand Drinks." Howsoever, despite these copious libations to Bacchus, this legislature did good work, and deserves due credit for it. San Jose was chosen as the State Capital; but it did not long remain so; for Vallejo, then Benicia, and then Sacramento were "it."

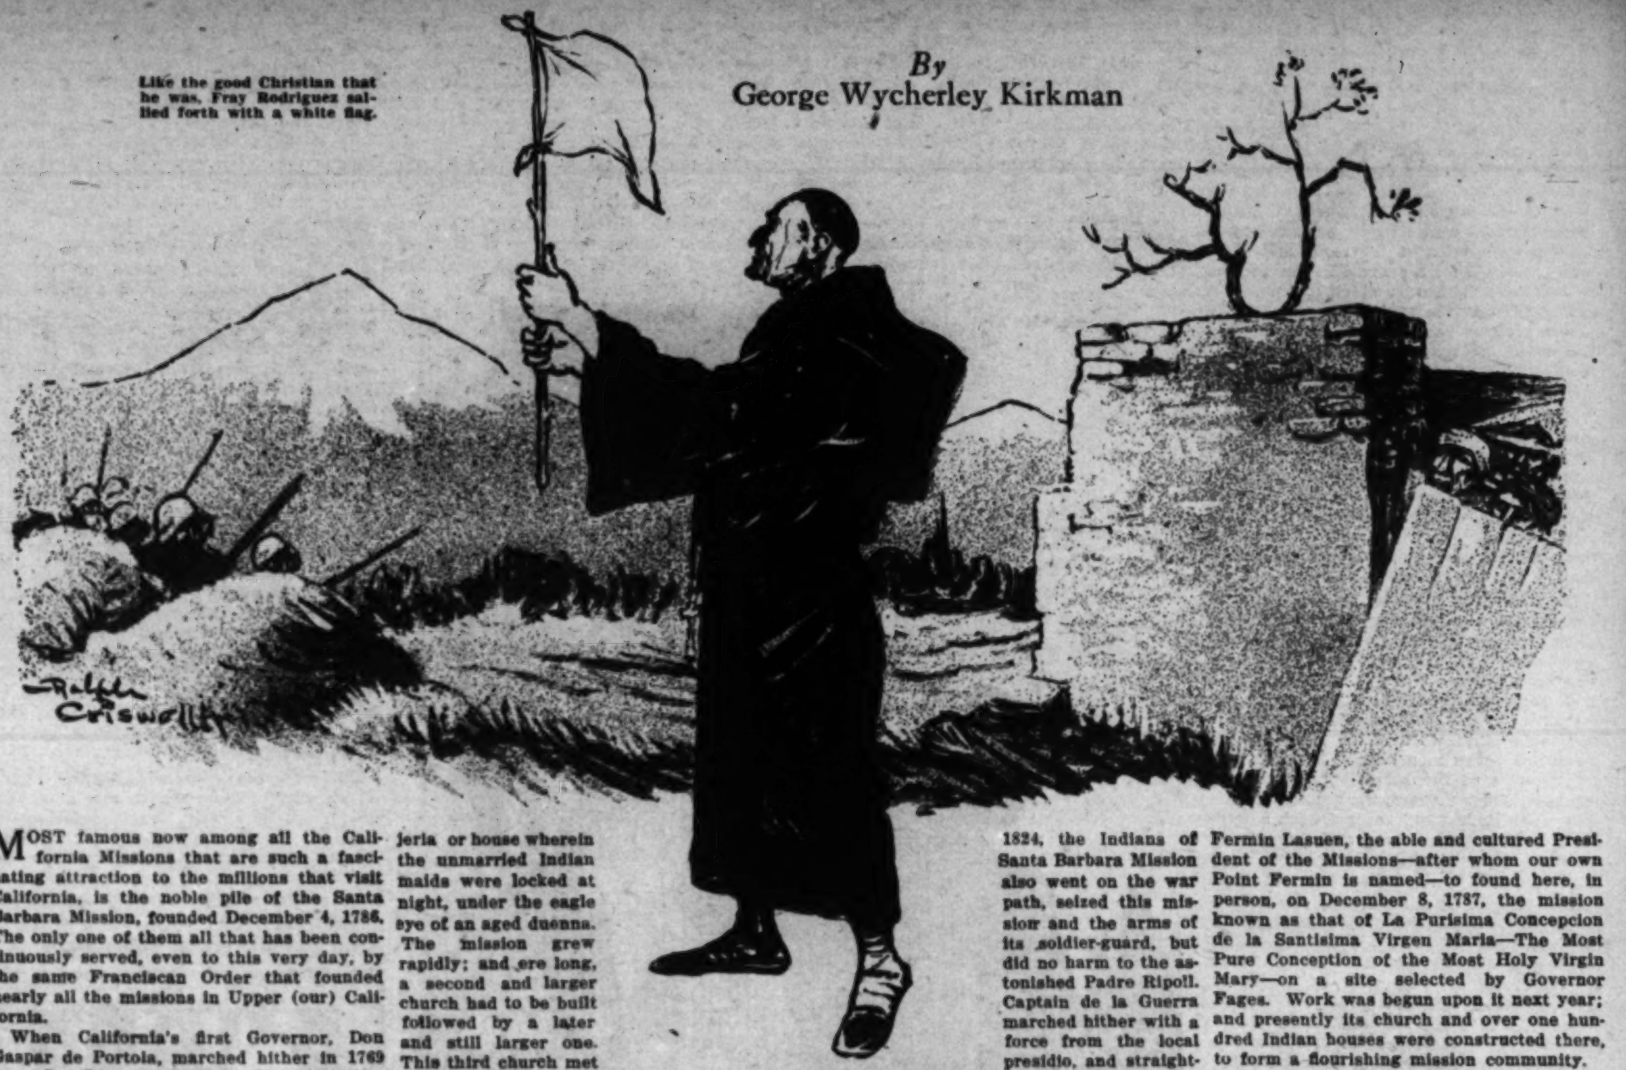
DECEMBER IN CALIFORNIA HISTORY

By
George Wycherley Kirkman



Like the good Christian that he was, Fray Rodriguez sallied forth with a white flag.

MOST famous now among all the California Missions that are such a fascinating attraction to the millions that visit California, is the noble pile of the Santa Barbara Mission, founded December 4, 1786. The only one of them all that has been continuously served, even to this very day, by the same Franciscan Order that founded nearly all the missions in Upper (our) California.

When California's first Governor, Don Gaspar de Portola, marched hither in 1769 from San Diego, to look for Monterey Bay, and start Spain's first actual occupation and settlement of California, he found all this channel thickly populated by the sprightly and intelligent tribes of the Chumash Indians—the finest and most remarkable red race in all California. The sight of all these unconverted heathen, together with its fertile soil, and magnificent scenic beauty combined to impress Padre Crespi with its ideal location as a site for a mission; a pious opinion shared by Father Serra, when he saw it later. There were then some 10,000 Chumashes dwelling along the channel; and although friendly at present, yet they were an independent lot, with visible traces of Polynesian and recent Oriental blood in their veins. They had peculiarly Polynesian canoes of planks sewed together; and they were so keen at bargaining, that our second Governor, Fages, called them the Chinamen of California. Located at this strategic situation where they could interrupt the line of communications between Southern and Northern California, military policy dictated the establishing of a military post here; and so our third Governor, Neve, founded the Presidio of Santa Barbara, in 1782, assisted at the ceremony by Father Serra himself.

The pious soul of this medieval mystic yearned over the red children of this lovely seashore, and longed to locate a misson here also; but he had to be content with the founding, that same year, of San Buenaventura Mission, some thirty-two miles south. Serra had been dead two years, ere the time came for its foundation here, and his successor, Father Lasuen, although then 66 years old, came to this presidio in person, and superintended its founding. A fine site, which overlooked the presidio, was selected at a spot called by the Spaniards El Pedregoso—the stony place. And here on the feast-day of the Virgin Martyr Santa Barbara, this mission was formally dedicated, and named in honor of this Saint.

Its first chapel was but a humble adobe, only thirty-eight by fourteen feet, with walls three feet thick, and a straw-thatched roof which protected an inner one, made of reeds bound to wooden beams and covered by a thick coat of dried mud. Around this were grouped the padre's house, storerooms, kitchen, servants' huts, and the monjeria or house wherein the unmarried Indian maids were locked at night, under the eagle eye of an aged duenna. The mission grew rapidly; and ere long, a second and larger church had to be built followed by a later and still larger one. This third church met the same fate as divers other California mission chapels, in the famous Year of the Temblores—1812; and was damaged beyond repair by the quakes.

The fourth church was begun in 1815; and was built in such solid fashion as to almost resemble a medieval stronghold. Its six-foot-thick walls were made of sandstone blocks, with great buttresses to strengthen them. Part of the timber for it was cut on Santa Cruz Island, and then was brought here aboard the American trading schooner Traveler, whose tall Yankee captain, Wilcox—called by the admiring Californians, Don Santiago—was a great favorite here, and wooed the still lovely Concepcion Arguello, heroine of our greatest romance, so ardently that he almost won her, and she had to flee to Mexico, to escape this bold Lochinvar of the high seas.

This notable landmark was finished in 1820; and millions of persons have admired its old gray pile, twin towers, old fountain, great corridor, its ancient aqueduct and reservoirs, and the mural decorations done by Indian neophytes of this fine old mission. As time went on, it prospered; and its lands later stretched from Carpinteria to Gaviota. Its most noted padre was Fray Antonio Ripoll, who presided over its destinies from 1815 until 1828.

His was a kindly and joyous disposition; yet the energetic and virile character of the man came to the fore in the fateful year of 1818, when the squadron of Argentine privateers under Bouchard raided the California Coast; captured, sacked, and burned its capital, Monterey; and then sailed southward to Santa Barbara. In response to Governor Sola's mandate to the missions, Padre Ripoll's martial ardor and loyal Spanish patriotism flamed high, in this California crisis; and he organized 180 of his best Indians into a military company, to which he gave the resounding title of—"La Compania de Urbanos Realistos de Santa Barbara." Thirty of this red array were armed with lances, fifty with machetes, and the remainder with bows and arrows—at the head of which strode their capitan frailero, the valorous padre, who proved anew that "A man's a man, for a' that!"

When the Indians of Santa Ines and Purisima Missions rose in armed revolt, in 1824, the Indians of Santa Barbara Mission also went on the war path, seized this mission and the arms of its soldier-guard, but did no harm to the astonished Padre Ripoll. Captain de la Guerra marched hither with a force from the local presidio, and straightway attacked these red rebels. From the windows of the mission, the Indians replied with their bows and arrows, to the fire of the soldiers; whilst tender-hearted Padre Ripoll mourned within, at this peril to his red children, whom he loved so well, but who had now reverted to the warlike ways of their forebears.

After thus battling for several hours, the noon-hour struck; whereupon the soldiers knocked off fighting, and went home for lunch. Poor Lo promptly improved the shining hour, by shinning out to the adjacent mountains; so when the soldiers returned, they found naught better to do than to plunder the Indian houses, and kill a few more Indians, who had foolishly lingered on the scene, conscious of their own pacifist innocence in this affray. Before this massacre of the innocents, the Indians had had two men killed; and both sides had a number of men wounded.

Padre Ripoll was a staunch Royalist and most faithful to Spain; and so he not only had no use for the Mexican Republic, when California came under its dominion, but he also openly avowed his hatred of and contempt for the Mexican government. This finally got him in hot water with its officials in California; so, one night in 1828, he and Padre Altimira slipped aboard the American brig Harbinger, then in Santa Barbara Harbor, and sailed back to his native Spain.

Here arrived, on January 11, 1842, Fray Francisco Diego, who had been appointed as First Bishop of California, two years before; and now made this his official residence. Since 1856, there has been a Franciscan College at this mission; which still houses a Franciscan community of friars. Father O'Keefe was a notable and lovable figure here, in later years, at this stately old mission; which has just been restored anew, after the damage done it by a temblor a few years ago.

Purisima Mission Founded

December 8, 1787. North of Santa Barbara and the mountain-range of that name, there then were numerous Indians, especially in the lovely valley of the Santa Ynez River; so two missions were founded therein. One of these was adjacent to our present town of Lompoc; and hither came Padre Fermin Lasuen, the able and cultured President of the Missions—after whom our own Point Fermin is named—to found here, in person, on December 8, 1787, the mission known as that of La Purisima Concepcion de la Santisima Virgen Maria—The Most Pure Conception of the Most Holy Virgin Mary—on a site selected by Governor Fages. Work was begun upon it next year; and presently its church and over one hundred Indian houses were constructed there, to form a flourishing mission community.

Twenty-five years later on December 21 this church was reduced to a heap of ruins, as also were the houses of the mission Indians here. A great rain followed which so swelled the Santa Ynez River—then called Rio de Santa Rosa (The River of the Holy Rose)—that its flood completed the destruction of the mission. Another site was now selected, some four miles away, in La Canada de Los Berros—the Broad Ravine of The Water Cresses. Hither the mission was moved next year; and, ere long, a fine mission was built up, and became quite prosperous. Frosts were rather frequent during the winter; and grasshoppers, rattlers, and bears from the adjacent mountains were ever present pests; but its herds

It was through his influence that those terrible passages were written into Deuteronomy (vii.) punishing heresy with death, which were copied verbatim by the leaders of the Inquisition.

So far they partook of the habits and perspective of their time; but in other regards how far they saw ahead, and how profoundly they spoke! They did not come to the intelligence and liberality of the Greeks; but they rose far above the Greeks in their conception of the brotherhood of man. They began the exaltation, even in a military age, of those virtues of simplirity and gentleness and mutual aid which Jesus was to make the essence of his gospel; they prepared for him by announcing the coming of a saviour; they transformed a tribal god of war into a universal god of love; they were the first Christian and the first humanitarians.

The voice of social revolt sounds in all their speech. They believed with a later Jew that quick riches are seldom innocent; they looked upon large fortunes as morelly indecent and politically dangerous; they denounced usury, slavery, and violence, they made God the father of all men, in order to make all men brothers. They made the Jews stand in history for fraternity, as the Greeks stand for intelligence, and the French for equality, and the English for liberty; Greece had culture, but no heart; even its philosophers made little protest against slavery; it created science, and it perfected art; but it remained for the Jews to formulate the conception of social justice and the rights of man. Through this faith little Israel, crushed between the jaws of brutal empires, won to victory in the end; and today the peoples that conquered it in the flesh bow to it in the spirit, pray to the gods it created, and aspire to the ideals which it gave to the world.

Philosophers

Half a century passed. Across the Gulf from Chaldea another empire rose to wealth and power, and sent out barbarian armies to lay waste settled states. Persia (whose story will come as the background of Marathon) had grown to such supremacy and repute that when its armies approached Babylon the great capital surrendered without a seige (539 B. C.) The enlightened Cyrus permitted the Jews to return to Jerusalem, and encouraged and protected them while they labored to re-establish their civilization.

Disaster may destroy states, but it nourishes religion. The Jews returned from Babylon almost destitute of political organization but their priesthood was still organized and powerful. As later the Roman Papacy succeeded to the Roman Empire in the midst of chaos, so now the High Priest of the Temple became the ruler of the Jews. The ancient warlike faith and trust in arms gave way to a passionate belief that soon Yahveh would vindicate himself as ruler not of a tribe only, but of the world. It was now that the priests collected the hyms sung in the Temple, and made up that book of Psalms which marks the highest reach to which lyric poetry has ever risen. It was now (ca. 440 B. C.) that the priest Ezra put the Torah or Pentateuch into its present form, and made it a staff of strength for his suffering people. Perhaps, if they were faithful to the Law, Yahveh would send a saviour, a Messiah, who would lead them out of misery into happiness and peace.

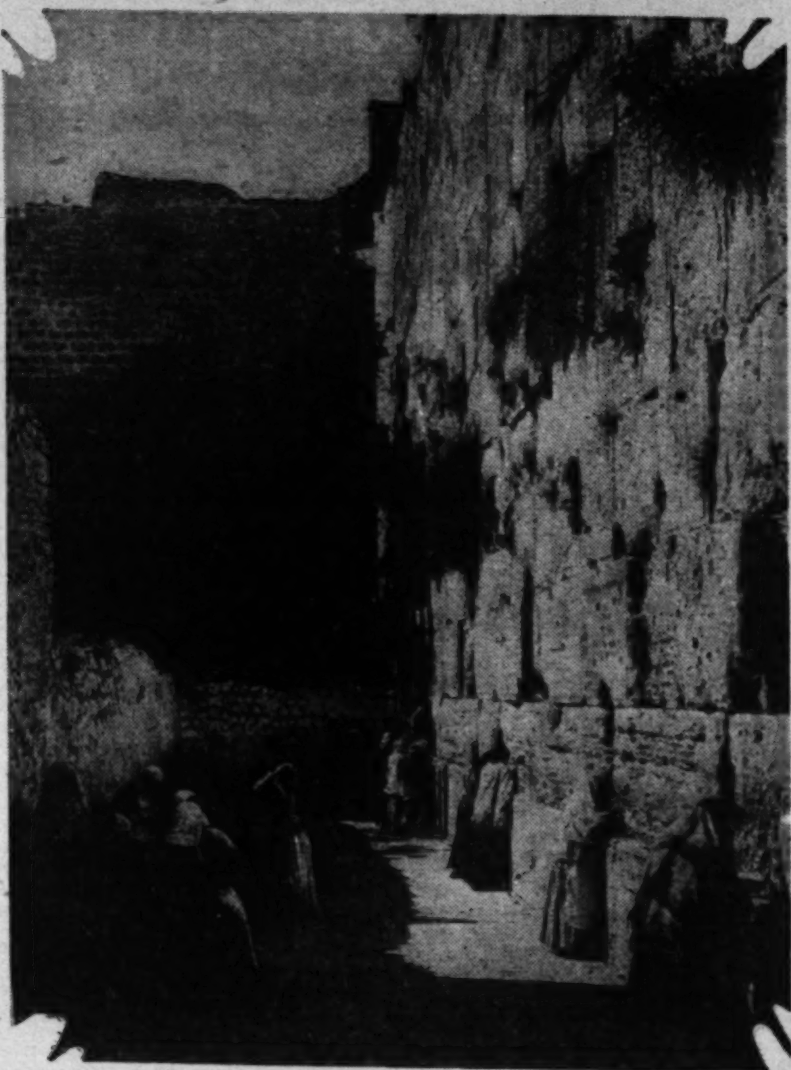
But Yahveh did not appear; in his stead came Alexander, further scourge of a bitter god; and the genial protectorate of Persia passed into the cruel rule of the Macedonian Greeks. Alexander was generous enough; but when he died he left his empire "to the strongest," who had had no Aristotles to refine them. In 319 B. C. Antiochus entered Jerusalem to collect human material for a colony at Alexandria. Unable to understand the resistance of the Jews, he descended to the most brutal revenge, and set about to destroy their religion as well as their remaining state. Thousands of inhabitants were killed, thousands were sold into slavery; many thousands more fled, so that there came a time when Jerusalem contained hardly a single Hebrew. Circumcision and other Jewish rites were prohibited; no religious observance of the Sabbath was allowed themselves tq be suffocated with the government could find were destroyed. "Horrible things, no doubt exaggerated, were told. Two mothers were brought before the judges charged with having circumcised their children. They were hung up by the breasts, and then flung from the city wall. Some people who had taken refuge in a cave, to keep the Sabbath there, allowed themselves to be suffocated with smoke rather than to defend themselves." (Renan, History of the People of Israel, col. iv, pp. 270-2.) To fill the void left by persecution, deportation and flight, non-Jews were brought in from every quarter of the Mediterranean. "The courts of the Temple become the scene of pagan orgies: pagans came here with their concubines and gave themselves to debauchery."

It was against the background of desolation that some nameless immortal Jew wrote the Book of Job. Picture a people that had believed itself favored and "chosen" of Yahveh, now destitute and enslaved, every heart broken, every home laid waste; was it possible to hold this faith clear of doubt? Or was it not inevitable that a voice should arise asking in despair whether this evil history could be reconciled with this loving God? Here in this strange chapter of the Bible is another "man against the sky," questioning the heavens in the name of justice. Of what use was it for a people to worship its god with passionate reverence, if he was to pour upon it the bitterest suffering? Of what use to be honorable, to be generous, to be loyal to wife and children, as Job had been, if in the end, one is to lie on a bed of ashes, rotting with sores? Was it true, then, as Shakesjeare would phrase it, that

From hour to hour we ripe and ripe,
And then from hour to hour we rot and rot,
And thereby hangs a tale?

With Job the Jews pass from theology and blind faith to philosophy that reasons why. Read the book again, and see how near Job comes to a resentful atheism, and how, to console him, his friends broach, almost for the first time in Hebrew literature, the idea of immortality: surely, if the just man is defeated here, there is another life in which he shall find reward? "Shall mortal man be more just than God?—shall a man be more pure than his Maker?" How Job wavers between hope and despair, believing and casting out belief! "I know" (let us waive the criticism of this passage as an interpolation of later scribes)—"I know that my Redeemer (literally, avenger) liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth; and though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God" (xix, 35-26.) But then hear the authentic accents of the deepest doubt:

> Man that is born of a woman is of few days, and full of trouble. He cometh forth like a flower, and is cut down; he fleeth also as a shadow, and continueth not . . . For there is hope of a tree, if it be cut down, that it will sprout again, and that the tender branch thereof will not cease. Though the root thereof wax old in the earth and the stock thereof die in the ground, yet through the scent of water it will bud, and bring forth bough like a plant. But man dieth, and wasteth away; yea, man giveth up the ghost, and where is he? As the waters fail from the sea, and the flood decayeth and dryeth up; so man lieth down and riseth not; till the heavens be no more, they shall not awake, nor be raised out of their sleep. (xiv,1-12)



Mourning the loss of the Temple beneath a section of the original wall.

And then, at the end, the inexhaustible faith of the Jewish people reasserts itself; and in a vision as magnificent as anything in Michelangelo, Job sees God not as the maker and ruler of man merely, but as the order and law of the planets and the stars, the structure and substance (as Spinoza would say) of the universe.

> Then the Lord answered Job out of the whirlwind, and said, who is this that darkeneth counsel by words without knowledge? Gird up now thy loins like a man; for I will demand of thee, and answer thou me. Where wast thou when I laid the foundations of the earth? declare, if thou hast understanding. Who hath laid the measures thereof, if thou knowest, or who hath stretched the line upon it . . . when the morning stars sang together, and all the sons of God shouted for joy? Or who shut up the sea with doors . . . and said, Hitherto shalt thou come, but no further; and here shall thy proud waves be stayed? . . . Hast thou entered into the springs of the sea? or hast thou walked in the search of the depth? Have the gates of death been opened unto thee? or hast thou seen the doors of the shadow of death? Hast thou perceived the breadth of the earth? Hast thou entered into the treasures of the snow? . . . By what way is the light parted, which scattereth the east wind upon the earth? Who hath divided the water course for the overflowing of waters, or a way for the lightning of thunder; to cause it to rain on the earth where no man is, on the wilderness wherein there is no man; to satisfy the desolate and waste ground, and to cause the bud of the tender herb to spring forth? Hath the rain a father? or who hath begotten the drops of dew? Out of whose womb came the ice? and the hoary frost of heaven, who has gendered it? The waters are hid as with a stone, and the face of the deep is frozen. Canst thou bind the sweet influence of the Pliades, or loose the bands of Orion?

In this majestic philosophic flight the Hebrew poet sees the universe as Whitman saw it in Salut au Monde; he realizes it as a cosmic whole, and in its light he sees each part with a healing perspective and modesty; we are made whole by seeing whole. No wonder Carlyle calls Job "a noble book, all men's book!" It is our first, oldest statement of the never-ending problem—man's destiny, and God's ways with him here in this earth. And all in such free flowing outlines; grand in its sincerity, in its simplicity, in its epic melody, and repose of reconcilement . . . There is nothing written I think, in the Bible or out of it, of equal literary merit." (Hero and Hero-Worship: The Hero as Prophet.)

Nevertheless, the problem was not answered. Even if one part's evil is another part's good, and both are subjective things, lost in the vastness of the whole, evil is real, and human suffering is too pitiful to be done away with by metaphysics. When the Jews had felt for a century the liberalizing touch of the Greek mind, and especially in Alexandria had developed a culture half Hebraic, half Hellenic, and learned to think independently of their traditions and their laws, the scepticism lurking in the Book of Job grew bolder in its speech; and suddenly, amid the Bible's poetry of fervent faith, we come upon the strange and subtle Book of Ecclesiastes, another treasure of our literary heritage.

Here the pessimism of Job finds unrestrained expression. "Vanity of vanity, all is vanity. What profit hath a man of all his labor which he taketh under the sun? One generation passeth away, and another generation cometh; but the earth abideth forever . . . All things are full of labor man cannot utter it . . . The thing that hath been is that which shall be; and that which is done is that which shall be done; and there is no new thing under the sun . . . For in much wisdom is much grief; and he that increaseth knowledge increaseth sorrow." Here is Schopenhauer in nuce; a chapter of Ecclesiastes thoroughly understood is as strong and bitter a potion as all The World as Will and Idea.

There is no justice in the world, this preacher thinks; the wicked prosper shamelessly in every nation. "So I returned, and considered all the oppressions that are done under the sun; and behold the tears of such as were oppressed, and they had no comforter; and on the side of their oppressors there was power" (iv, 1.) And there is no meaning in the world; let a man ponder it as long as he will, the secret of the universe eludes him forever. Nothing is more ridiculous than to write books of philosophy: "Of making many books there is no end; and much study is a weariness of the flesh" (xii, 12). It is as wise to be a fool as a philosopher, for both come in time to the same end and probably the fool is merrier on the way. "I saw that wisdom excelleth folly," but "then I said in my heart, As it happeneth to the fool, so it happeneth even to me; and why was I then more wise? Then I said in my heart that this also is vanity" (ii, 13-15. He concludes that "wisdom is good, with an inheritance" (vii, 11).

Back of this sadness, as behind so much of our own delicate melancholy, is loss of belief in another life, with its reunions, its compensations, and its eternity. "For that which befalleth the sons of men befalleth beasts; even one thing befalleth them; as the one dieth, so dieth the other; they have all one breath; so that a man hath no preeminence above a beast; for all is vanity" (iii, 19).

As Job is an allegory of Judah stricken and beginning to doubt its god, so Ecclesiastes is the symbol of a people definitely conquered, scattered in exile to strange lands, and driven at last to denial and despair. It is a sign that Yahveh was beginning to die and that the soul of man, left empty and discontent, would soon be ready for another faith. Already in the Book of the Wisdom of Solomon the new belief appears, and centers itself about the hope for another life: yes, it is true that on this earth might is right, and the just man is of cattle were numerous, and famous throughout California.

Padre Mariano Payeras was its guardian angel from 1804 until 1823; and he was President of the Missions for nineteen years. The Indians here were industrious and clever at wood and metal working; and they were docile enough, until the soldier-guards took to making them work for their own private purposes, under the lax Mexican regime in California. Then these Indians and those of Santa Ines Mission, some twenty-two miles distant from here, got together and formed a conspiracy with other mission Indians, all the way from San Gabriel to this region. Bows, arrows, spears, and war paint were secretly prepared by all of these discontented red men; and a day was appointed for a general Indian uprising in Southern California, which was promised armed help by the wild Indians of The Tulares (Upper San Joaquin Valley,) with whom the Indians of the Santa Ynez Valley always had friendly intercourse.

Many of the young bucks were fairly itching to try out their war weapons, and could hardly wait until the fateful day and hour set for their vengeance upon the white man. It only needed a spark to set off this powder-magazine; and this was accidentally supplied by a corporal of the guard at Santa Ines Mission, who flew into a rage over some matter, and proceeded to flog an Indian of the Purisima Mission.

Instantly the Purisima Indians flew to arms; and on February 21, 1824, 400 of them attacked this Purisima Mission, which was defended by only six soldier guards and two white guests. The soldiers fought until their powder gave out, and then had to surrender. In this combat, the two guests and two soldiers were killed; whilst the Indians had seven men killed. The red men let the rest of the surviving soldiers go; but kept, under a guard, the resident Padre, jolly Fray Rodriguez, who got such a thorough fright from all these and the ensuing warlike doings here, that he died within a year after this early Indian war was over.

Now masters of the mission, the Indians in high glee proceeded to cut loop-holes in the walls of this mission, and otherwise fortified it against attack. They got hold of six muskets and two old pedreros (swivel-cannon;) and with these, they bade defiance to the white man and all his works. Day and night, the tom-toms beat, and the yelling Indians, ferocious in their warpaint, gave the wild warwhoop, as they bounded about in the war dance.

For three weeks, the Indian carnival held sway; but on March 16, the Purisimas were attacked by a column sent hither from Monterey and Santa Barbara, with a four-pounder cannon to emphasize their war talk with these deluded aborigines. Horse, foot, and artillery assailed the mission, which replied valiantly with its ancient pedreros, six muskets, and yard-long war arrows.

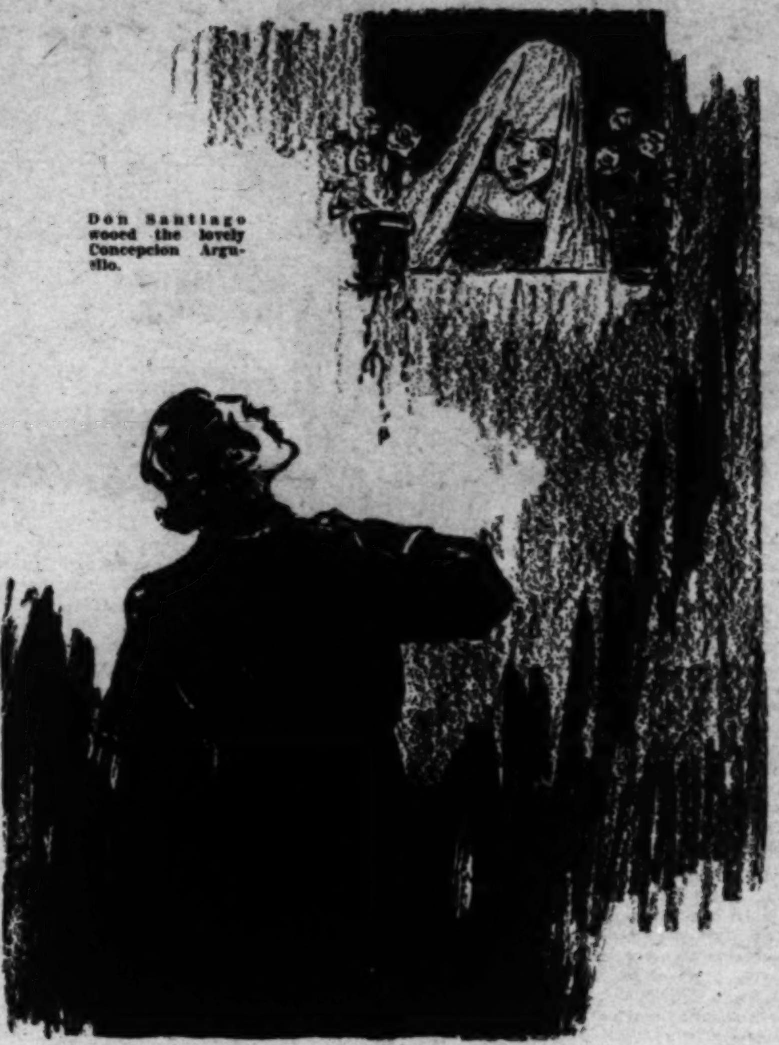
After the four-pounder and soldiery had bombarded the luckless mission for two hours, the Indians' loss of sixteen men killed and many wounded, cowed the red skins—that they begged poor trembling Fray Rodrigues to intervene in their behalf, as the besiegers now had the Indians completely surrounded, and death stared every red man jack of them in the face. Like the good Christian that he was, Fray Rodriguez sallied forth with a white flag, and presently induced the attacking soldiery to raise the siege of the place; after certain Indian leaders had been delivered into their hands.

Some of these red chiefs were sentenced to death, some to exile, and some to imprisonment, in atonement for this uprising. Several soldiers were wounded in this famous Siege of Purisima; but the rest later proceeded to The Tulares, and there sought to complete the white man's revenge in several battls with the wild Indian allies of the mission Indians.

In this historic battle, the buildings of Purisima Mission were badly damaged—so much so, that the church had to be rebuilt. Through the Padres' intercession with the Governor, a general amnesty was soon proclaimed; and presently most of the Indians of this warlike mission returned to its fold. Secularization began its ruin; and after it was sold and fell into private hands, its buildings fell into hopeless decay. When last I saw it, only a few crumbling and roofless walls of adobe remained to mark the site of this once flourishing mission. Yet it had its splendid hour of high emprise, on the part of its red warriors, who here dreamed of regaining their former proud independence, when they were lords of a thousand foothills in the lovely region that lies north of the Santa Barbara Mountains.

Battle of San Pascual

December 6, 1846. Commodore Stockton had taken peaceful possession of Los Angeles and Southern California; had sent the famous scout, Kit Carson, East to Washington with despatches which stated that he had "conquered" California; and had then sailed north from San Pedro, after leaving Captain Gillespie and a small American garrison to hold down Los Angeles, long known as a hot-bed of revolutionists.



Don Santiago wooed the lovely Concepcion Arguello.

True to form, the fiery Spanish-American Angelenos soon got up another revolution, besieged Gillespie on Fort Hill, and compelled him to surrender and march off to San Pedro, where he boarded an American ship, and waited for Stockton to send the reinforcements asked by Gillespie, whilst still besieged in Los Angeles. Meanwhile, all Southern California rose in arms, hoisted the Mexican flag, and drove out the small American garrisons left herein by Stockton. Captain Mervine sailed the U.S.S. Congress into San Pedro Harbor, united with Gillespie and thence set out to march upon and recapture Los Angeles, without any artillery—only to be halted by the Californians' solitary cannon, at the Battle of Dominguez Rancho, on October 8, 1846.

Mervine saw he could not hold Los Angeles, in the face of a mounted enemy, when he himself had no horses; so he fell back to San Pedro, and waited for the arrival of Stockton, to whom he sent word of his dilemma. Stockton arrived at San Pedro on October 23, intending to march on Los Angeles; but, through a clever ruse, General Flores fooled him into believing that the armed Californians numbered thousands; so he had perforce no choice, save to sail south to San Diego, and there prepare a land expedition that would advance to the north, and recapture our warlike City of the Angels.

At San Diego, the stout old sea-dog was lucky enough to secure invaluable assistance from Don Juan Bandini, the Arguellos, the Pedrorenas—who helped him in obtaining cattle and horses here; whereas, elsewhere, the Californians had driven all their stock inland, to keep them out of our hands. By early November, Stockton had assembled a force of 800 men at San Diego; from which place, he was about ready to move north to Los Angeles, when a messenger rode in with information that General Kearny was near at hand, en route to San Diego.

In our war with Mexico, our War Department had planned four different lines of attack upon Mexico; one under General Taylor, against Monterey; one, under Wool, against Chihuahua; the main one, under General Scott, against Vera Cruz and Mexico City; and the Army of The West, under General Kearny, who had orders to conquer and occupy New Mexico, and then march west to California and seize it also. Kearny had seized New Mexico, and was en route to California when he met Kit Carson with Stockton's despatches, which apprised him that California was conquered and garrisoned already. Really, there was no need for Kearny to now go to California at all; but he did so, anyway, sending back all his troops except a hundred men or so, and taking Kit Carson along as a guide, greatly to the latter's disgust.

After a trying march across Arizona and the Colorado Desert, Kearny was glad to arrive on December 2 at Warner's Ranch, where his famished troopers at last got plenty to eat. Whilst his men were recuperating, Kearny sent a messenger to Stockton, asking him to send some one to meet and guide his force to San Diego; as he had heard, en route hither, that the Southern Californians had risen in revolt against our forces. Stockton at once sent to him Captain Gillespie with thirty-nine men and Lieutenant Beale, including twenty-five men of the California Battalion under Captain Gibson. This force joined Kearny at Warner's Ranch on December 5; and that same night, Kearny's scouts discovered that a troop of the Californians had just that evening camped not far away, at the Indian pueblo of San Pascual.

General Flores had sent this force, under Captain Andres Pico, to watch Stockton's movements, and prevent his obtaining horses, cattle, and supplies. This native troop numbered eighty men, and their chief weapons of offence were their pistols and long deadly lances—a terrible war-tool in the hands of men as skilled in its use, and as splendidly mounted as the Californians were—in addition to which, they were, like most Californians of that day, the finest horsemen in the world. Captain Pico had been observing Stockton from San Luis Rey; but this night, he had camped here at San Pascual, quite unaware that Kearny's force was in the vicinity, although the latter quickly heard about Pico's presence.

Kearny later claimed, in self-defense, that Carson and Gillespie led him to believe that the Californians would flee at the first charge of Kearny's troopers, and were not game fighters in any event. So he ordered that an attack should be made upon the Californians, early next morning; although he should have known better, as his ragged men were in bad shape from famine, fatigue, and exhaustion; they had lost most of their horses in the deserts, and many of them were now mounted on half-starved mules; and the cold rain that fell upon them, all that night, reduced the morale of men and beasts to a low ebb.

Early next morning, Kearny moved on Pico's camp, sending ahead an advance-guard of fifteen men under Captain Johnston, which presently came to the top of the hill that overlooked Pico's camp. Expecting the Californians to flee at the mere sight of the sabres of this small advance-guard, the latter were foolishly ordered to charge the now alert enemy. Pico received this crazy charge with a pistol volley followed up by an attack with his terrible lances that killed Captain Johnston instantly, and would have annihilated the entire American advance-guard, had not Kearny come up with his main body of mule-cavalry.

At the sight of this re-enforcement, the Californians wheeled about, and galloped off on their fresh and speedy mounts, easily outdistancing the oncharging Americans on their jaded horses and mules. In this stern chase, Kearny's men galloped recklessly on in pursuit of the fleeing foe, each man for himself; with the result, that soon they were strung out all along the road, at widely separated intervals.

Pico was only using old Moorish tactics on his enemy; and once he saw them thus drawn out in a long line, he ordered his troop to turn and charge the Americans. The Americans' guns had not been reloaded after the first volley, and now their clubbed guns and sabres were useless against the lances of the Californians, who landed each to their finger-nails and [illegible] photographic copies of important documents. Then, having covered both with a polish such as is used by manicures, they were quite willing to submit to any search . . .

But even that, although I'll admit it was clever, wasn't good for long. The agents of the Reich kept falling into our hands just as they had before. Then it was that the Germans thought up two more stunts to make sure that their correspondence should not fall into our hands. The least one can say about them is that they were inspired.

What could seem less suspicious than a bit of music entitled "Myosotis d'Alsace?"

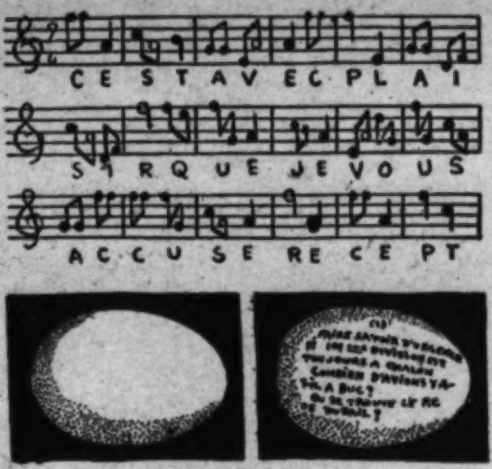
You and I would pass a store window displaying that catchy little piece a thousand times without thinking any more about it than we do about all the other songs of that sort. That would have been a mistake, however, for that little piece of paper had more than music on it. It contained instructions from the main espionage office in Berne to the German agents in France!

When we had organized our postal censorship so well that no letter coming from or going to any German Secret Service Office could reach its destination without having been deciphered and read by us on the way, one of the most important of the German spies in England proposed the "sheet of music trick" to his chiefs. He seems to have invented it himself. This trick was to identify each letter of the alphabet with some musical note. As the agents who send the document and those who receive it are the only ones to possess the key, it is meaningless to the uninitiated. The secrecy of this method was still greater because it was perfectly simple to change the key each week. No one could have any conception of the trouble we had discovering it.

When the postal censors saw that suspicious letters no longer came through the mails they passed the word on to the counter espionage headquarters. The latter then got to work and discovered that information was still getting over the border in someway as yet unknown to us. It was up to us to find out in a hurry, just what this new means of communication was.

Every branch of the service was put on its guard, and our watch over border towns and seaports, vigorous as it had been, became pitiless. Not only were incoming ships searched—and how we searched them!—from the bottom of hold to top of masts, but we even forbade the crews to come ashore. And yet nowhere at all could we find anything suspicious. The Paris office, however, informed us that the leak continued! We were all in despair!

In our zone one fine day, however, an agent who was shadowing a suspicious-looking man in Lorrent communicated an extraordinary discovery that he had made. This suspect was a bug on music, and each week a foreign musical publisher would send him a number of new pieces. Among them each week without fail was a song entitled "Myosotis d' Alsace." We set up a strict watch over him and, in three weeks, we came to the conclusion that if the title was always the same, the music, on the contrary, was different each week. Thus, you see, we were on the right track.



Above— The key by means of which the "Myosotis d'Alsace" was deciphered.

Lower left— A perfectly ordinary looking egg.

Lower right— The same egg after being treated to a chemical bath.

A report was drawn up at once and sent to the proper authority. Two days later a "decipherer" arrived. He was an expert in reading secret messages and was, moreover, a good musician. He soon cleared the matter up. It was by means of this sheet of music that the German Secret Service office in Berne communicated with certain picked agents in France.

The key, as I said before, had an infinite number of possible combinations, but, as its basic principle was always the same, nothing was easier that to decode it. I assure you that for a while the German General Staff was receiving all kinds of "information!" Once again our estimable officers in the Second Bureau had played an abominable trick on the Germans, and, by upsetting their plans, had saved thousands of French lives . . .

Let us now pass to another trick that the Germans thought up. Surprising as you will doubtless think it, its authenticity cannot be questioned.

"While it is all right to have a fondness for eggs, it is not necessary to send hundreds to a foreign country when you are not in the poultry business."

Such were my thoughts one morning as I read a report from one of our agents at Lausanne, that large quantities of eggs were being shipped by a man in Switzerland, of whom we were suspicious, to a certain woman in France. The lady in question, a charming woman, received many callers and kept open house. She was very generous and had many "godchildren" at the front, to whom she was constantly sending packages.

It happened at times that a "godmother," without thinking of doing harm, would in public ask her "godson" about military affairs. However that may be, although we kept an eye on this generous lady because she had so often indulged in conversations on delicate matters, there was really nothing about her to lead us to think that she was given to spying. There was nothing suspicious about her mail; her telephone conversations left nothing to be desired. . . . Why the deuce such a craving for eggs?

As we had no right to overlook even the tiniest clue, I ordered that the eggs addressed to her should be brought to my office before they were delivered. I sent them to a laboratory, where, surrounded by the greatest secrecy, the chemists got to work, and the next day I received the following report: "A chemical examination of the eggs . . . shows that on the shells of some of them are messages written in invisible ink. The ink is probably made out of [illegible] (a variety of [illegible]). The messages have to do with military operations . . ." The report added: "To bring out the secret writing, it is merely necessary to dip the eggs in a solution of galic acid."

Although the guilt of this charming lady was no longer in question, and although we had the text of the questions that had been sent her on the eggs, before we could do anything we had to find out how she sent her answers to the German General Staff. We put two of our best agents in the case.

One day when we examined the eggs we found the following message:

> Let us know at once whether the 101st Division is still at Chalons.
> How many airplanes are there at Buc?
> Where is the O. C. Dubail?

Here were three explicit questions. They required exact answers. From the day she received those questions, she was never out of our sight. She was so conservatively dressed that she looked more like a housewife than the beautiful courtesan she really was. We followed her every movement and she was in the act of putting her reply into the "mail box"—it was a bureau—when we arrested her.

Her answer was written on—a curling-iron! Eaten into the iron by acid and later covered with a thin covering of rust, artificially applied, the answer was as definite as could be.

> The 101st Division is at Nancy.
> There are 70 airplanes at Buc;
> Dubail is at Etain.

Notice that it took this spy only four days to get these three bits of information. She had proved herself really dangerous. We punished her as she deserved . . . and her accomplice likewise.

The matter, moreover, did not stop at that. From various sources we found that other eggs were being smuggled across the border from that same place in Switzerland. Guards were stationed at various places along the border and, because of the understanding that existed between the French and the Swiss customs officials, the traffic in these "literary" eggs soon stopped.

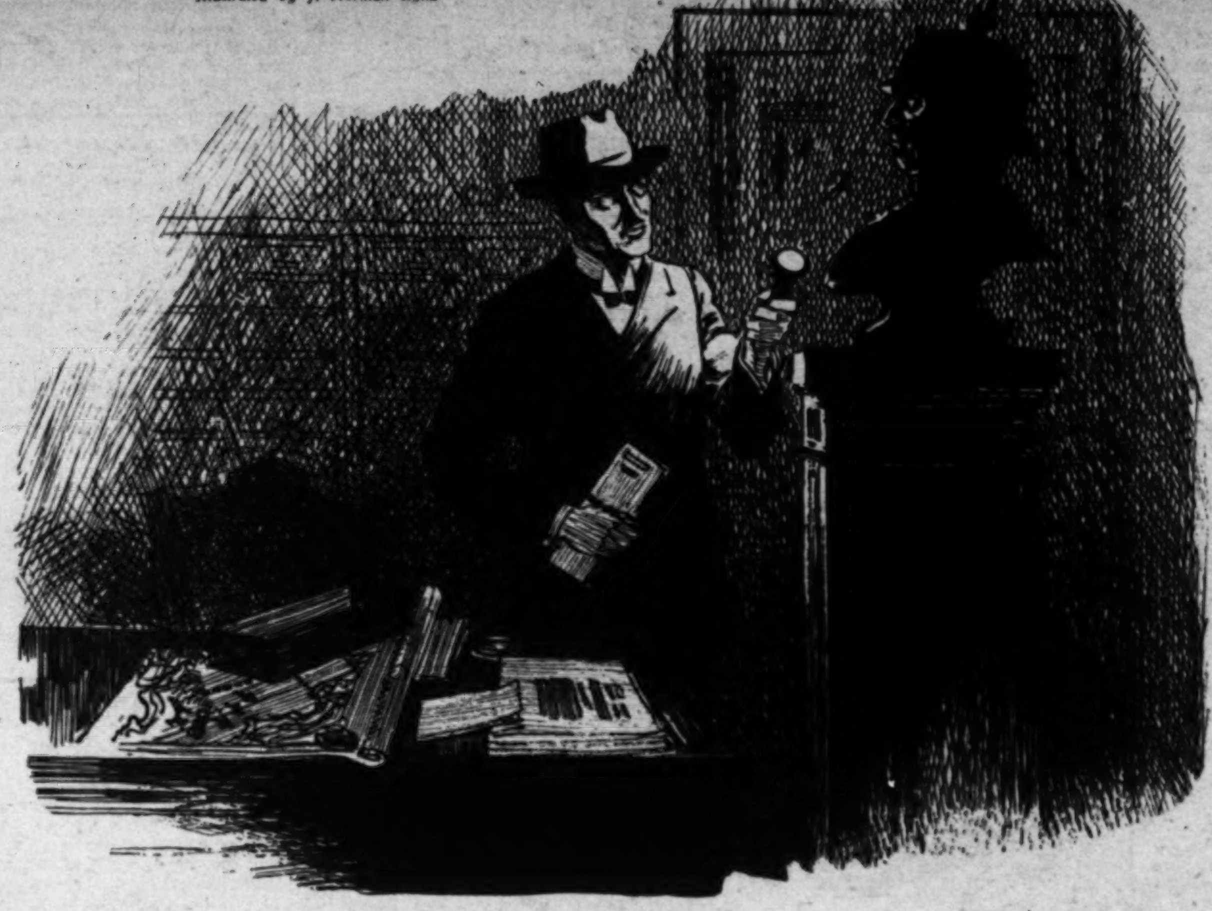
Bewildering Stroke in the Game of Guile —the Immensity and Intricacy of the German Secret Service



In the center of the room a bust of the Kaiser looked down as if, somehow, it were presiding over the schemes that were here being hatched.

ON THE theory that, when you want to know exactly what is happening somewhere, there is no better way than to go there and find out, I left, one fine morning for Berne, which was one of the most active of the German espionage centers.

The nominal director of this center was Major von —, a nephew of a German statesman; the actual head of the office, however, was M. von X—.

From this office were sent out the orders and questionnaires to the German agents in France. It was not near the center of town. On the contrary, it was out in a suburban district, not far from a small forest. The dwelling was a huge and peaceful looking villa modeled after an English country house. The windows were usually covered by green shutters.

The general offices were in another building to the right of this; although the office of M. von X— was not with these, but in the main building. It opened on a waiting-room that was always patrolled by guards distinctly military in bearing.

This study was large and well ventilated. It was very much cluttered up with files, indices, and maps. Everywhere, on M. von X—'s desk, on chairs, on stools, on tables, were numerous documents. In the center of the room, facing M. von X—, a monumental bust of the Kaiser looked down as if, somehow, it were presiding over the devious schemes that were here being hatched.

This study, into which it was my fate to enter many times (always in the absence of its owner—usually at night,) was arranged like a setting for play. Under certain boards in the floor were hidden bells. If one stepped on one of them, it would start a number of bells ringing violently to announce an intruder in the room. It was important not to sit down in certain of the armchairs in the room. They were veritable beartraps.

Above all, it was dangerous to step on the rosette in the middle of the rug . . . without being careful first to shut the trap door that was underneath. And if you valued your life, it was imperative not to touch even slightly any of the keys that had been . . . forgotten . . . in various key holes. Because he forgot this slight detail, one of M. von X—'s personal secretaries was electrocuted.

If M. von X— is cross at me for having let the public know these details about his "home," he must still admit that it would have been difficult for me to do otherwise, when I knew such details as I am about to relate. I guarantee their authenticity.

In this connection, a writer in Germany has taken me to task, saying,

"Definite proof that the author of On Special Missions is ignorant of most of our secrets may be found in the fact that he describes as being in the Wilhelmstrasse certain offices that are really somewhere else."

As these gentlemen seem to want more definite details, here they are.

According to this writer, we in France don't yet know where the "Nachrichten Bureau" is. That, of course, is the name the Germans have given to their Secret Service. Still better, this same paper charges that we don't even know where are the headquarters of "Abtheilung," the anti-French espionage service.

I will do my best to take the reader through the headquarters of the German Military Secret Service.

At the end of the famous "Unter den Linden" avenue and just across from the Imperial palace is the Place de Paris, upon which are the Brandenburg gate and the French embassy. Going through the Brandenburg gate, one finds oneself in the Thiergarten. Passing by the column of Victory, one soon comes to an immense palace whose architecture is a little out of keeping with the atmosphere of this aristocratic section. This palace is the headquarters of the German General Staff. You would never guess it, if you did not know. There is nothing unusual about the building. In front of it there is no sentinel; inside, no corporal's guard.

At times an immense, heavily-braided porter walks back and forth in front of the door. Only important officials are allowed to use this door.

The small fry use the other door, which faces the Herwarthstrasse—to give all details. On the second floor of this building are the offices of the German Secret Service.

If these details don't convince my colleagues on the other side of the Rhine, I can easily add to them. For instance, in the anti-French section, there are five officers —a director and four assistants. And I could give their names. Let us walk into this room. It is a large room, furnished with a desk, two tables, and a few chairs

A huge steel cabinet takes up one whole side of the wall. In it are kept all documents—collections of papers, maps, photographs, etc.—that have to do with the French army and navy. Pasted on that cabinet is the sign. "In case of fire, save this first!" There is a door in the wall opposite the cabinet. It opens into the office of the head of the section.

This room is more comfortably furnished. The desk and chairs are of oak. There is an iron safe in a corner, and over the mantelpiece is an Empire clock. Above is Edouard Detaille's painting, "Le Reve."

I have no doubt that such revelations will irritate several people in Berlin. And yet, I must admit, they are far from complete. There are things that I am not allowed to tell!

One interesting question concerning which I must be reticent is, "How do the Germans organize their map-making service?" If I tell my German colleagues—for I am positive they do not know it—that the headquarters of this branch of the service is in the room directly above the one that I have just described, perhaps they will recognize that, once again, we are, to say the least, quite as well informed about such matters as they.

Do they want still another proof?

I have already remarked that the palace of the German Staff faced the Thiergarten, and that the most imposing entrance to the building was on that side. I did not, however, mention the fact that side by side with this door is another, very small, discreet, and unimposing . . . At the present time there is just one man in all Germany who has the right to use that door—and that man is General von Seeckt, commander-in-chief of the German army.

Formerly, that is, before the armistice, the Emperor himself was the only German who might use it. Unknown to anyone, he would use that door when he went to the offices of the German General Staff to give his orders. It was after having left the building through this door that, one fine morning in August, 1914, he declared war on France.

The German Secret Service, with its official headquarters at the Thiergarten, in Berlin was the most gigantic system for espionage imaginable. It may be said without fear of exaggeration that when the Kaiser decided to declare war on us the German General Staff knew all that was to be known about the condition of our military forces.

It seems scarcely necessary to mention the fact that the activity of the Secret Service since the armistice has diminished so little that at the signing of the famous secret treaty between the Germans and the Bolsheviks at Rapallo, it was necessary to erect two buildings in which to house the new agents . . .

The Secret Service, made up out of whole cloth and put into working order by the spy Stiber, who died in 1892, comprises three distinct branches: (1) The political branch; (2) The military branch; (3) The naval branch.

Before the fall of the Kaiser the political branch was directly attached to the Emperor's Cabinet. At present it is under the control of the Minister of Foreign Affairs—at least to outward appearances it is —and it comprises as many sections as there are countries in the world. Before the war the most important division was the "Personal Section," under the direct supervision of the Emperor. He, however, exercised his power clandestinely and allowed the Premier in office to retain nominal control. This section of the service is still in existence It has merely changed its name, now being called the "Private Section."

We must admit that the German agents did their work thoroughly, for the information they turned in to the General Staff by filling out questionnaires left nothing to be desired. A set of these questionnaires was found on a spy who was captured behind our lines. They were on the thinnest paper obtainable. He had rolled them up and hidden them under the tobacco in his pipe. This was a favorite place for concealing papers by the agents of the Thiergarten, as it had the added advantage that, if they thought themselves in danger, they had only to light their pipes to destroy all evidence of their crime.

We had been warned about that trick and usually we succeeded in stopping them in time. Eventually the Germans realized that we were on to their little pipe stunt, so they promptly invented another that we had much trouble discovering.

When he had information of some sort to get back to Germany—a report, map, sketch, or something of that sort—the spy, using a special ink, would copy this information out on a piece of mica thinner than a cigarette paper. He would then glue this on to the lenses of his glasses. Whoever invented the "glasses trick" was a genius. No one will ever know how much damage he did!

That was not bad, but the Germans eventually went it one better. By means of special equipment, they were able to glue on

THE STORY OF CIVILIZATION

By
Will Durant, Ph. D.

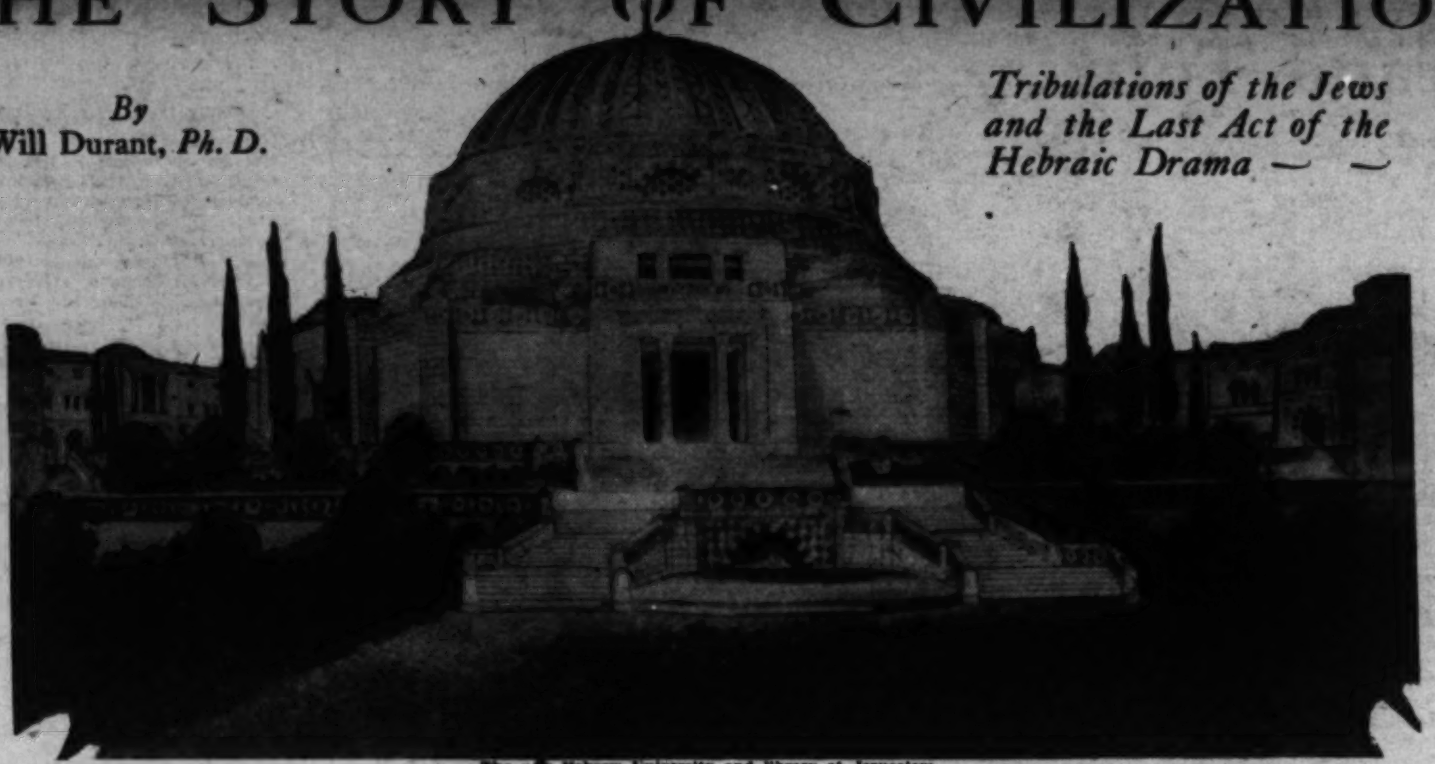
Tribulations of the Jews and the Last Act of the Hebraic Drama



The new Hebrew University and library at Jerusalem.

THE Temple brought into the religion of the Jews a centralization of power that reflected the consolidation of the monarchy. Though it could not have accommodated Solomon's wives, it was enough to require heavy taxation of the middle classes, and severe labor from the manual workers of Jerusalem. By the time it was complete the gap between the poor and the rich had grown so wide as to precipitate one of the historic crises in the ancient war of owners and owned. The poor were ground down by the state, by landlords, and by priests, while the rich grew richer every year as trade increased between Phoenecia and the Red Sea.

In this clash of social forces the Temple played a timidly neutral role, or leaned to the side of royalty and wealth. The evolution of theology among the clergy lagged behind the natural development of moral ideas among the people; this is one of the recurrent themes of history, and the secret of the mortality of creeds. Yahveh was still a tribal god; the Jews worshiped him while making no pretense that he was also the god of other lands; they loved him as the modern populace loves a pugilist—because they thought him a better fighter than the rest. They did not care that he was (in the words of Hobhouse) "half a barbaric chief, half an Oriental despot," or (in Renan's judgment) "capricious, cruel, greedy, irascible, loving even human sacrifice," (cf. 2 Sam.; xxi, 6f.) or that he stole and lied, and killed men for lying, or for touching the Holy of Holies to save it from falling to the earth; or that to gain his ends he slew whole nations and committed atrocities beyond the cruelty of a man. It was for them that he had done all this; and they loved him all the more for it. Nothing is so popular as despotism.

Meanwhile the Hebrews of Judah, the southern half of Palestine, had retained the old simple life of herding flocks and tilling the soil. After the death of Solomon (955 B. C.) they separated from Israel and formed a state of their own, with Jerusalem as their capital. The division did not merely weaken the Jews in the face of the voracious empires that surrounded them; it brought to a sharper point that conflict between the country and the town which groans like a tug of war through the pages of history. Jerusalem had become a city of commerce, and industry, of luxury and slums; and all about it were peasants envious of this luxury, and caught (as in our own day) in the toils of a thousand middlemen. It was to voice the protest of these peasants that the Prophets came.

These prophets were not fortune tellers; they did not predict the future except as threatening an evil issue to contemporary injustice and greed. Nor were they priests; they bore the same relation to the prophets or Rabbi of the Temple that Schopenhauer and Nietzsche bore to the professors of philosophy in nineteenth-century Germany. "No prophet am I, no prophet's son am I," warns Amos, first of the great line; he was only a shepherd, who had come up from simple Bethlehem and found the cruel industrialism of the capital an abomination. So he "stood in the gate" (on the street-corner, as we should say) and denounced the rich men of the city and the wealthy priests of the Temple with powerful and touching eloquence.

> Woe to them that are at ease in Zion . . . that lie upon beds of ivory, and stretch themselves upon their couches . . . Forasmuch therefore as your treading is upon the poor, and ye take from him burdens of wheat; ye have built houses of hewn stone, but ye shall not dwell in them; ye have planted pleasant vineyards, but ye shall not drink wine of them . . . Therefore the Lord saith: Woe unto you that desire the day of the Lord! to what end is it for you? . . . I hate, I despise your feast-days; . . . though ye offer me burnt offerings, I will not accept them . . . Take thou away from me the noise of thy songs; for I will not hear the melody of the viols. But let judgment run down as waters and righteousness as a mighty stream. (v, 11, vi, 1-21.)

Here is glorious language and poetry; and when you reflect that it is part of the oldest written literature in the world—part of that same Bible, or Books (Gr. biblia) which gives us also the oldest connected historical narratives, and the poetry of Ruth and the Psalms and the Song of Solomon—you begin to understand what a debt we owe to this little people hemmed in among the hills of Palestine. No wonder Renan describes the Hebrew language as "a quiver full of steel arrows, a trumpet of brass crashing through the air." And history, which can be as reckless as nature, has allowed that noble speech to decay, giving its place to dialects cut off from all literary traditions, and shorn of all beauty and power.

But if Amos reaches at the very outset to splendor of thought and utterance, what shall we say of Isaiah, who is to Amos like thunder and lightning to gentle rain?

While Palestine was weakening itself with division, great empires were growing about her to the east. In 722 B. C. the Assyrians took Samaria, capital of the northern Hebrew kingdom; and a few years later, led by Sennacherib, they laid siege to Jerusalem. And while the despairing Jews felt the anguish of starvation, and asked themselves why their god had abandoned them, a greater prophet rose among them than ever before, and dared to tell them that the army of Assyria was but a rod and a scourge in Yahveh's hand to bring his people back to justice and social peace.

It is unnecessary to meet war with war, said Isaiah to the incredulous Jews, war is a worse evil than any that it can remedy; meet it with righteousness, and God will show a just nation the way out of might into right, out of empire into federation. "And he shall judge among the nations and shall rebuke many people; and they shall beat their swords into ploughshares, and their spears into pruninghooks; nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more." (ii, 4.)

For a time it seemed that Yahveh would protect his people; a great pestilence swept away the army of Sennacherib (701 B. C.) and Jerusalem was saved. But the political chaos of Judah combined with its desiccated soil and its economic dependence upon Phoenician trade to leave it open to renewed attack; and in 586 B. C. Nebuchadnezzar, leading the armies to the new empire of Chaldea, captured Jerusalem, and dragged most of its population away with him to captivity in Babylon. It was in these awful days that Jeremiah poured forth his wrath upon the leaders of his people, denouncing their foolish reliance upon force, and attributing the misfortunes of the Jews to the exploitation and greed which belied in practice their religion of benevolence and justice. His country exiled him, and he ended his days in misery and bitterness in Egypt; but he had prepared the way for a prophet greater than himself, that anonymous genius who, in the later chapters (xl-lv) of the Book of Isaiah, explained to the Jews the narrowness of their tribal deity, and lifted them for the first time to the vision of God as the spirit of life; not of one people merely, but of all things. No longer "I am the Lord thy God, thou shalt not have other gods before me;" there were no other gods, there was only one: "I am the Lord, and there is none else" (xlv, 5). And then again we touch a peak in literature;

> Behold the Lord God, who hath measured the waters in the hollow of his hand, and meted out heaven with the span, and comprehended the dust of the earth in a measure, and weighed the mountains in scales and the hills in a balance . . . Behold the nations are as a drop of a bucket; behold he taketh up the isles as a very little thing. It is he that sitteth upon the circle of the earth, that stretcheth out the heavens as a curtain, and spreadeth them out as a tent to dwell in. (xl.)

Here at last is monotheism, and the prelude to Job, and the introduction to Spinoza, and the preparation for science; here is the first clear view of the unity of the world.

Yet the spirit of the prophets is not the spirit of science; it is rather the stern voice of Jesus and Paul, of Luther and Calvin and Knox, of Milton and Carlyle. The prophets were Puritans; they were the first to emphasize the idea of sin, and to brand worldly pleasure as iniquity; they were the first protestants, and it was the Old Testament, rather than the New, that made the Reformation. Perhaps because their nation was in the throes of mortal combat, they found no place in the good life for the joys of the earth; and their influence so strengthened the ancient prohibition of graven images that their people have been until modern times almost completely sterile in the plastic and pictorial arts. And like all moralists, and even while denonuncing tribal theology, they betrayed a tribal narrowness and dogmatism in their more bitter moments; Jeremiah denounces to death those who differ from him; and some say

Have and to Hold

Al Jolson, still trying to prove to Sir Harry Lauder that the Scotch are tight, tells of the Scot living in Chicago who wanted to break his engagement to a girl because she had grown so fat. It was all right with the girl, but when it was found that she couldn't get the engagement ring off her finger, the Scot insisted on marrying her.

Playing Safe

Mrs. Lydia Barnes of Woman's Club fame, was scoring the modern mother for dressing like her daughter. "What is chic and proper for the young," she contended, "may be and usually is, vulgar and ridiculous for the giddy parent. The worst of it is, that the young folks know this and lose respect for those who should be their guides and mentors.

"The other day I heard one of those modern mothers say to her daughter: 'Gertrude, are you keeping something from me?'

"'Yes, my millionaire boy friend!' was the pert answer."

Almost Strangers

There are many who claim that Charles M. Schwab is the world's greatest salesman. This may or may not be true, but Charles himself loves to recall his first venture as a knight of the road.

He tried and tried, but had not the slightest luck and finally reached the last store in the town.

"Really," protested the merchant, "there isn't a single thing I want today."

"But surely you'll let me show you my samples," pleaded Schwab.

"No, I really haven't the time to waste."

"Well, anyhow," said the desperate salesman, "would you mind letting me use your counter to look them over myself? You see, I haven't had the opportunity to do so for some time."

Remote Control

One of the janitors at Warner Brothers discovered that with the aid of alcohol he could clean the dressing-room mirrors ten times as fast as by ordinary methods. At least that is what he said, and by one of those miracles that sometimes happen, he put over the idea and got the alcohol.

Not long afterwards, the head janitor caught Pat in the very act of drinking some of the precious fluid.

"Patrick, you told me you wanted that alcohol to clean the mirrors and now I find you drinking it. What have you to say for yourself?"

"Shure, boss, it's a-drinkin' it an' breathin' on the glass Oi'm a-doin'," explained Pat.

High Finance

The old-fashioned burglar, according to Detective Nick Harris, used to rush to a "fence" after making a haul and get rid of his plunder for whatever the "fence" chose to give him. Thus, many a valuable gem was recovered, for which the burglar had received less than one cent on the dollar.

"But today it's different," declares Harris. "Most of them handle their business like Chicago Sam. After a good haul, Sam's partner said to him: 'gee, this is a lot of swell swag, but I ain't got the savvy to figure what it's worth an' you ain't either.'

"'We don't hafta figger it,' said Chicago Sam, scornfully. 'The mornin' papers will give us de exact amount.'"

Getting Ammunition

The following incident shows to what an unselfish extent some will go in their zeal to perform their duty of being their brother's keeper.

In a little village in Ohio lived Rev. Peter Jefferson, a negro parson, who was loud in his exhortations against attending a circus that was to visit his town. He threatened to expel any of his flock who dared to spend their money in such a sinful way. Strange to say, when the eventful performance was given, the most conspicuous person present was the violent parson. When one of his white friends inquired how he came to be at the circus, he said:

"Law, Mistah Henry. I hates it mightily, sah. But I's de shepherd, and I's 'bliged to look arter my flock. I got my eye on every las' one dos onchristian sinners, and you see if I don't make 'em smell fire and brimstone on Sunday!"

Hot Stuff

The fire and heat shedding propensities of asbestos are now so thoroughly proved that it is hard to realize that there was a time when, in the old idiom of Missouri, one had to be shown. A curious test—it entailed as well the winning of a prize—is said to have taken place in France a century ago, when a Frenchman named Chaubert, clad in an asbestos-lined robe, entered an oven along with a steak.

"In twelve minutes," runs a recent account of the odd occurrence, "the steak and Mr. Chaubert emerged—the former cooked, if a trifle overdone, the latter uncooked, but well warmed up."

Heavy Schedule

"Good mornin'; you're early this mornin'; said Mr. Hedger.

"That's a fact," replied Mr. Ditcher. "But I've a big job afore me, an', sez I to myself, I'll jest start in an hour before I begin, and work an hour or so after I quit, an' do a little bit more while I'm restin' at noon, an' so I'll have it done 'twixt daylight and dark."

Scandal

Seeing his mother nod pleasantly to the minister who went by, Archie inquired:

"Who's that, mamma?"

"That's the man who married me, dear," replied mother.

"Then if that's the man who married you," said Archie, "what's pa doing at our house?"

Put One Over

L. D. Bentley, in an article on "crashing the gate," tells the following instance:

"A well groomed, suave individual introduced himself to a company manager, saying, 'I am a close friend of Mr.—,' giving the name of a famous theatrical producer. 'He told me you would give me a couple of good seats to his show.'"

"Nothing doing," retorted the company manager abruptly, "that's old stuff and I don't fall for it."

"May I have your name?" the outraged one asked with great dignity.

The manager obligingly wrote his name down on a slip of paper.

"Thank you for that much," said the stranger, and left.

But that was not all. Outside the theater, the man was joined by another. On the slip of paper just above the manager's signature, the first man wrote, "Two good seats." The second man took the paper to the box office and received a pair of front row seats.

Real Curiosity

A traveling menagerie show had been visiting the villages of Northern Scotland, and on the day they left their last village the gorilla died.

Instead of burying the animal they left it by the roadside. Later in the day two ghillies happened to pass the spot, and the defunct gorilla caught and held their gaze.

"An' what'll it be, think ye?" asked one.

"Weel, it's oower big for a MacPherson," came the answer, "an' it canna be a Gordon for it has nae kilt, but, judgin' by its een, I'm thinkin' it is ane o' thae American veesitors!"

To the Rescue

Reggie Denny, the picture star, is English, but that doesn't deter him from telling good ones on his countrymen. One of his briefest and best is:

"'Elp, 'elp! A bald-'eaded man over 'ere has fainted!"

"Give him hair! Give him hair!"

Flying Nut

The late Senator Lodge of Massachusetts always counseled against reckless haste; indeed, he was inclined to classify haste and radicalism as synonymous.

"Hasty legislation," he once said, "reminds me of the man who was tearing down Pennsylvania avenue in his high-powered car at terrific speed.

"'My goodness!' exclaimed a bystander, 'What makes Senator Blank's car rattle like that!'

"'It's not his car that rattles,' was the answer, 'it's his brains.'"

Nothing Overlooked

"Englishmen go globe trotting to see the world and Americans do it to cover the distance," said Wilbur Russell recently.: "Not long ago I met a friend who had just come back from across the pond and who bragged that he had 'done Paris' in two days

"How in the world did you do that?" I asked him.

"'Oh, it was easy,' said my friend. 'My daughter visited the monuments and the museums, my wife the stores, and I did the music halls and cafes.'"

Behind Bars

Former Prohibition Chief Andrews used to tell a good story anent the fate of bootleggers. This one did business in a Vermont town where his horse and buggy were as well known as the country doctor's.

One day, while delivering some goods, they encountered a zebra that had escaped from a circus. The bootlegger stared for a moment at the black and white stripes and then shouted at Dobbin:

"Git up, you lazy cuss! That's how you'll look if you're ever caught!"

Restores Hearing With German Discovery

SCIENCE has made remarkable progress in making it possible for deafened people to hear. Recognized authorities on both continents consider a new discovery called the "Duotone" the most perfect means of making the deafened hear instantly. It is an entirely inconspicuous device and is so tiny, the earpiece is worn in and not on the ear.

Results are astonishing in even the most severe cases.

The R. L. Scherer Company of Los Angeles are the distributors in Southern California and Arizona for this German invention. A trial demonstration for those interested will be given by Mr. L. E. Greene, factory representative, at the offices of the company, 736 So. Flower Street. Write him today for full information and trial offer.—Advertisement.

PHYSICAL CULTURED

By
Alma Whitaker

He made me bend over in a dozen directions and when I didn't achieve it to his satisfaction he pushed my head down

EVERY few months a dulcet voice over the telephone has been inviting me to accept a free trial physical culture treatment.

The voice talks a little intimately, with naught but my own interests at heart. If I am too fat they will "take it off." If I am too thin they will "build me up." If I am just right, they will keep me "in perfect condition." For my own sake, they implore me to take just "one trial treatment."

The last time that voice caught me on a week day. A go of neuritis . . . was this treatment any good for that? You bet it was. Why, they were more successful with neuritis than any licensed physician could ever be . . .

I was astonished to find this home of physical culture on the top of an office building and functioning in two by no means large rooms. One was fitted up with cubicles—tiny booths to undress in round the wall, larger ones containing the "tables" in the center, a cabinet bath tucked into one corner and a shower in another. The other room, about as big as our living-room, was called the "gymnasium."

I was handed a most blousy and unattractive bathing costume designed for a lady twice my size and told to get into it. It is all very well, but poise and aplomb in a bathing suit do depend considerably on the svelte fit of the garment. So it was with some embarrassment that I presented myself to Victor.

Victor is a short stocky male, with an amazing pompadour, showy muscles and an impersonal expression of face. He lords it over the gymnasium. Three plump females were lying flat on the floor, obeying Victor's staccato demands to raise their legs up high over their heads, the while they panted o'er the earnest effort. Victor set them all exercising and then turned to me.

Victor looked me over with cold appraisement. "You can stand a little off there," he remarked, poking me in the stomach. "Get on the scales." I got. Nothing chatty about Victor. "Humph. One hundred and twenty-one pounds. Might take a bit off here," he mused, slapping me with the back of the hand on the hips.

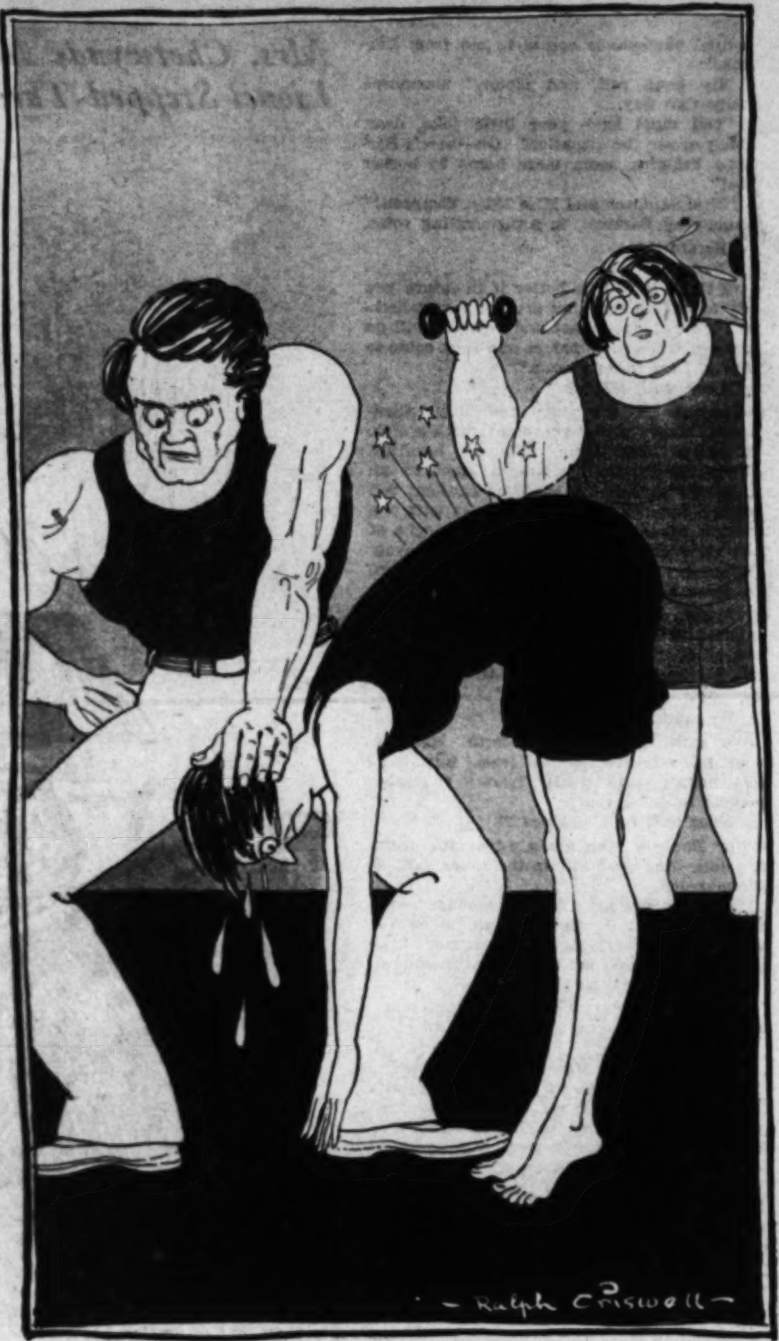
Now it's all very well, but hitherto I have not even permitted a husband these intimate calculations. But Victor does not respond to a chilly, haughty eye—above a sloppy bathing suit.

"Stand on this mat," ordered Victor. I stood. "Now bring your knee up as high as you can. No, no. Higher than that. Hit your stomach with it. When he had me started, yanking each knee up alternately, he left me to change the exercise of the breathless ladies on the floor.

He was soon back. He made me bend over in a dozen directions and when I didn't achieve it to his satisfaction he pushed my head down, or yanked a leg out, or pushed an arm. Finally, I too, was laid out on my back, tossing legs in the air to Victor's commands. By-and-by he held my feet down and made me bend upward. Victor grabbed my feet as though they were wooden handles. Presently he had me trying to touch my forehead with my instep . . .

I was denied one jolly part of the treatment that looked most intriguing. It was, it appears, only for ladies with much more hip than mine. They slithered a leather belt around the lady and turned on an electric machine, that made her shimmy beyond Gilda Gray's wildest imagination. It is not good form to laugh during a physical culture class—but that act would make no end of a hit in vaudeville. A very fat lady in a baggy bathing suit, doing a wild dervish dance for ten solid minutes. I had no idea fat ladies could be so active. She sighed blissfully when the current was turned off and hopped to the scales to see how much she had shaken off. About six ounces . . .

But I was hustled into the bath cabinet instead. It is a big box, with four huge lights. There is a little stool and a towel for the patient to sit upon. They remove the bathing suit, shut up the top of the box, leaving only one's head out, and smack a wet towel round one's head. Then they stand a clock on top and tell you you have to sit there ten minutes. Pretty soon one is perspiring copiously . . . That ought to have baked any amount of neuritis out of one.



— Ralph Criswell —

The next item on the program was a shower and a rub down. Then they rolled me in a blanket and sat me on a chair in my tiny cubicle. A bed would have been merciful—but they don't encourage anyone to sleep up there. While waiting I heard numerous whacks and ouches and startled giggles from the center cubicles, where those tables were. My turn came and I knew then.

A strong-armed lady flopped me down on the table and covered my embarrassment with a sheet. Then she turned a bit back and started pummelling. Phew! She took up whole handfuls of me and kneaded it. She grabbed bunches of muscles and twirled them. She dug Herculean fingers deep into bunches of nerves . . . It tickled, so I giggled through my groans, but she was quite unimpressed by any of my reactions to her drastic ministrations.

"Aren't you giving me an extra hard one?" I pleaded.

"Lordy, no, honey. I'm giving you a gentle one. I gives it to 'em much harder 'n that when it's for reducing," she beamed. "And they likes it," she added. "They don't think they gets their money's worth if I don't make it deep."

She wiggled my legs around and sawed my arms up and down, and cricked my neck, bent my knees up and grabbed handfuls of innards and pummelled them, and finally turned me over like a flapjack and pounded my back. Then she slapped me all over.

And to think I get a wicked looking bruise if I only bump myself against the kitchen table at home. And hubby can purple me up by just grabbing by arm when we cross a road!

The next part of the treatment was "the light." One is stretched out on a narrow cot, right under a huge violet-ray light, with a towel over one's face to protect the eyes. This light, which feels like hot sunshine, penetrates right through one. It takes all the aches out left over from the thumping and whacking . . .

Lying there, I could hear the conversation in the cubicles.

"Well this is my eighth treatment," one fat lady was saying. "I have taken off four pounds—and never dieted once. I eat what I like. Believe me I have no use for dieting. Life without good food isn't worth a cent to me. I weighed 188 when I first came and I only weigh 184 now. I sure am for your system . . ."

What a life! Eating and putting "it" on, and then taking these drastic treatments to take "it" off . . . and glorying in the discovery that she could continue to eat like a hog, with two hours a week off to keep the results down. I yearned to ask her what else she did besides eat, when she wasn't taking physical culture treatments at $100 for twenty.

Although they claim to "build you up" if you are thin, there was only one skinny dame there. And she was most anxious about her neck and her legs. She liked being skinny everywhere else . . . "But evening dress sure looks punk with a bony neck," she was confiding, "and isn't it fierce to have broomstick legs these days?"

Her treatment omitted the shimmy and the cabinet bath, but included some extra patting and rolling-pin attention on her legs, and some extra massaging round her neck. I couldn't see any difference between the thumping and whacking she received, and the neck massages and those given the fat ladies. And Victor put her through exactly the same exercises.

When I was finally dressed, the real tussle came. I had, you see, had a free trial treatment. But I was yet to be persuaded that I needed the $100 worth. For this purpose a frightfully handsome young man of about thirty, who ought to be a movie hero, brought his charms to bear upon me. I was a difficult case, because I wasn't fat and I wasn't skinny and he didn't happen to know about the neuritis, so the nice fellow didn't have a really good talking point. I spoiled the whole party by asking him all sorts of searching questions and failing to answer the ones he asked me. It was a dirty trick. And when I finally got away, without signing on the dotted line, by remarking that I was a poor working girl and couldn't afford these fancy luxuries, I know he made a mental note to inquire how the deuce I ever got into the Blue Book, and so became eligible for a "trial treatment." I never confessed it was because the publisher is a friend of mine . . .

But I know that young man counts that day lost upon which a "free trial treatment" patient gets away from him. I could feel his baffled scorn as I hurried to the elevator.

But my conscience was quite clear when the dear old neuritis started right up again, even before I reached the office . . . And anyway I tipped the husky masseuse. I wouldn't have dared tip Victor.

putting out a manual with black naturals and white sharps and flats. "This is a veritable Father Schmidt. You blow it with the foot."

"Yes. That's it—a Father Schmidt! And you blow it with your foot."

"You are lucky to have this. They are very rare. Even Hampshire hasn't got one."

He stood for a moment in a curious pose of attentiveness. Then turning abruptly he said: "I must go. Thank you for a very pleasant tea. Directly—directly I can manage it I will call with my motor to take you over to Hampshire's place. He and the duchess will be delighted to see you."

"Really that will be enchanting!" said Mrs. Chetwynde Mason warmly.

He seemed to hesitate, staring at her.

"You—would you mind very much if I brought my two friends with me?"

"Of course not."

"They may not—still they usually like to accompany me."

"Do bring them, of course. Any friends of yours are sure to be delightful."

When Lord Lionel had accomplished his tranquil exit from her drawing room, Mrs. Chetwynde Mason stood for a moment looking 'round at all the beautiful things she had gathered together. How much more he knew about them than she did! What a marvelous mind! What culture! What knowledge! Was any mortal thing not known to him? He had really made her feel almost as if she were on a level with Mrs. Sampson and Miss Ellen Sampson—on the rummage sale level. She had not even been aware that the little old organ was a "Father Schmidt" until he had told her so. And he was going to motor her over to the Duke and Duchess of Hampshire with two of his intimate friends! He had chosen her out to—

A prolonged howl from somewhere in the inner or outer hall broke horribly upon her reverie. Something frightful must have happened to cause such a piercing outcry. And it hadn't been a woman's voice.

Was it possible that Barstow had gone suddenly mad and tried to murder Lord Lionel, or that Thomas, the saucy looking young footman, had attempted to strangle his superior servant? She sank down on a sofa and with a shuddering finger pressed an electric bell. In a moment the door opened and Barstow appeared, looking painfully agitated.

"Yes, madam?" he said in a hoarse voice.

"What has happened?"

"Madam, it was Thomas."

"Thomas! Why? What caused Thomas to howl?"

"Not being there, madam, I can't say for certain. But Thomas swears, takes his oath, madam, that he did nothing to his lordship."

"What do you mean? What should Thomas do to his lordship?"

"I couldn't say, madam. But Thomas must have done something."

"Why?"

"Because, madam, so Thomas swears, just as his lordship was leaving the house, with Thomas holding the hall door for him, he took a sort of run, and let out with his foot and caught Thomas—well, madam, I scarcely like to say it.

"Go on! Go on!"

"Caught Thomas a regular oner, madam, in the hinder parts. Excuse me, madam."

"Really, Barstow!"

"I'm sure I beg pardon, madam, but you asked me."

"Then Thomas must have insulted his lordship."

"I couldn't say, madam."

"I say he must have!"

"Certainly, madam!"

"Give Thomas his notice and a month's wages. He must leave tomorrow. I cannot keep a footman who obliges a visitor of noble birth to assault him in self protection and then howls in that disgraceful manner. That will do, Barstow."

When he had gone Mrs. Chetwynde Mason went to her writing table, sat down, and wrote the following letter to her friend, Lady Caroway.

Amber Grange,
Amber,
Thursday evening.

My dearest Eleanor:

I take back all I said to you today about the English countryside containing nobody of interest or cultivation. Since you left me this afternoon I have had a wonderful experience. It appears that a brother of the Duke of Hampshire, Lord Lionel Danesborough, lives in my immediate neighborhood, though I didn't know it till now, and just after I had got rid of that dreadful old person in a bonnet and her daughter he came to call on me. He stayed for hours, and we had a really enthralling discussion about painting, music, Christianity, Etruscan vases, ceramics in general, the classics, poetry, sculpture, book-binding, literature, horticulture and, in fact, almost every subject that can interest two omniveorous and far reaching minds. We touched on Wagner, Nietzsche, Cagliostro, Liszt, Correggio, Horace, Virgil, Ovid, Cicero, Burne-Jones, Browning, and many others.

He is a wonderful man, perhaps even a man of genius. Naturally, being who he is, he is ultra refined and has perfect manners. But in addition there is this marvelous culture, this far reaching intellect, this critical acumen, and this quite amazing knowledge. Is it not wonderful to have such a neighbor, to have found at last living almost at my very door a worth-while man?

I cannot tell you, Eleanor, what a feeling of uplight I have this evening. My reaction to Lord Lionel is so vivid that I am almost dazzled, as if by a sudden blaze of light. There was only one thing to mar an otherwise perfect afternoon. You know Thomas, the saucy-faced footman whom you took quite a fancy to? When Lord Lionel left me Thomas let him out. And it seems that Thomas was so impudent to Lord Lionel that the latter was forced to correct him physically—in the hall. I heard Thomas howling—yes, dear, actually howling—sent for Barstow and inquired about it, and that was the explanation. Of course, Thomas leaves my service tomorrow.

Best love from
Your ever affectionate
Tessie.

P. S. Lord Lionel is going to take me over in his car to see the Duke and Duchess of Hampshire at Morton Abbey in a day or two. He wants my opinion on some of the duke's furniture. Two of his dearest friends will accompany us. T.

This letter went to London that evening and was received by Lady Caroway at breakfast time on the following morning. She read it over her tea and toast, and then turned to the morning paper. After glancing over the leading articles and the latest foreign news she happened upon this paragraph:

"ESCAPE OF A LUNATIC.

"Yesterday afternoon at about two o'clock a dangerous lunatic, who was recently confined in the luxurious home for mental cases known as "Brankhurst," in Surrey close to the Sussex border, managed, by some as yet unexplained means to evade the two keepers who were attached to his person and to get out of the large and beautiful grounds which surround the mansion.

"He was recaptured late at night in Winsley forest after a prolonged search. The lunatic in question belongs to a famous English family, bears a courtesy title, and is a man of the widest culture. We understand that before being taken he paid a visit to a well known lady who resides in a beautiful house near "Brankhurst" and even took tea with her.

"His conduct while at tea seems to have aroused no suspicion, but we gather that when leaving the house he committed a savage and entirely unprovoked assault upon a footman who was letting him out. The name of the lady whom he visited is Mrs. Chetwynde Mason, well known for her literary and artistic proclivities, who lives at Amber Grange, Amber, Surrey."

Lady Caroway's bright blue eyes were smiling as she put the paper down and went to her writing table.

"I really must beg Tessie not to dismiss that nice looking footman," she said to herself as she took up a pen.

The Priceless Gift of Invention

By James J. Montague

"THE trouble with you scenario writers, Jake," said the movie producer, "is that you ain't got no invention. Unless you can swipe some idea off a story that is so old everybody wants to forget it, you can't turn out anything that will bring any money into a house. If it wasn't for me, this company would have been busted long ago, instead of making a name for itself and climbing up to where pretty soon it will be a rival of the big fellows.

"The difference between you and me is that you never pay no attention to what is going on, while I keep my eyes open all the time. What makes a good picture is something that really happens, and things are happening all the time, only you got to notice 'em and think about them.

"Now I got an idea here that I picked up only this morning. I ain't got time to work it out myself, but you're pretty good as soon as you have something to work on, so I'll give it to you, and you can put it into shape. Maybe if I tell you how I happened to pick it up it'll be a lesson to you to look out of your eyes now and then and hunt around for human interest stuff, and then I'll have more time to devote myself to the artistic side of the game.

"I was looking out of the window of the apartment this morning when I heard one of them carry ons, which is another name for chimes, in a tower a block or so down the street. There was some big bells and a lot of little bells, and one of the big bells was pretty near as big as one of them lemonade tents that you see at a circus, and it was ringing to beat the cars. While I was watching it the idea come to me—not all at once, but piece by piece—and then I had the story just as I am going to lay it out for you.

"I thought first that it would be fun if you were a kid to hang on to the clapper of one of them bells and take a few rides for yourself, if you didn't get your fingers busted when they hit the inside of the bell. Then I thought how would it be if you didn't want the bell to ring, like there was a fire in the house of some guy you didn't like, and the bell would call the fire company. All you'd have to do when you see the fire would be to go up into the tower and hang onto the bell, and then it couldn't ring because you'd be so heavy it wouldn't get a full swing, and by the time they climbed up and found out what was the matter, the fire would have a head start on the hose company, and it would be too late to prevent any damage.

"But an idea like that ain't no good for the movies, because people ain't got no sympathy with fellows who want other people's houses burned down, and the guy who was swinging on the clapper wouldn't be considered a hero, but a kind of dirty skunk.

"But I knew there was a good movie in the idea, all the same, so I thought about some way to make a fellow want to stop a bell ringing for some good purpose, and by and by it occurred to me that they used to hang people in the old times when the curfew rang, and that if you could stop the curfew from ringing the fellow wouldn't be hanged until maybe you could get to the judge and put up an argument that would show him where he was wrong when the guy was sentenced.

"Then it just flashed across my mind how much better it would be if the fellow's gal stopped the bell ringing, long enough to send somebody to the judge, so as to save her boy friend. And that was the whole idea.

"After thinking it over at odd times for a couple of days I worked out a story where a fellow named Basil Underwood, which just popped into my head and is a swell name, was to be hanged for something he was innocent of at the ringing of a curfew.

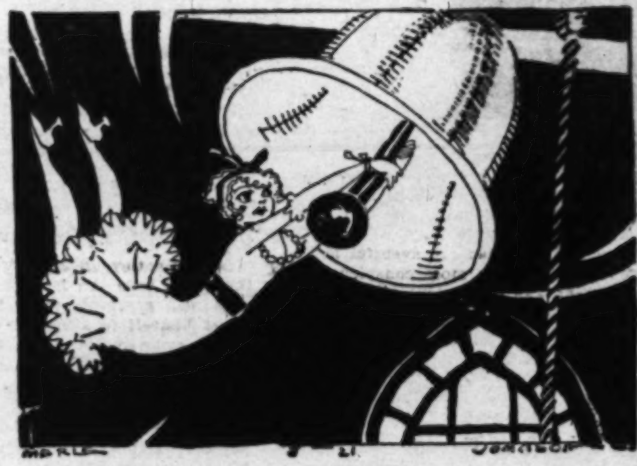
"I had his gal read about the sentence in the morning paper, and after she had failed to get an appeal from the decision of the supreme court, went to see the chap in jail for the last time. That kind of parting stuff is always sad, and gets 'em hard. Him and her talked it over and she says she'll save him.

"It seems that the judge, after pronouncing the sentence has gone off on a trout fishing trip to the Black Hills and won't be back till tomorrow and without him there ain't nobody that can issue a reprieve. But the girl says she'll fix it somehow if she can just postpone that curfew from ringing at nine o'clock, because if it misses that hour it can't ring again till nine o'clock the next evening, on account of nine o'clock in the evening being the law which says what time it must ring and can't be changed.

"Basil ain't got much hope that she'll pull it off, but he kisses her good-by and tells her to take care of herself and think of him once in a while, and not to let his execution make her feel bad.

"Well, the first thing the girl does is to go to the sexton of the church who is an old friend of the family, and try to talk him into getting sick or something so he can't toll the bell. But the sexton says that while he knows Basil is a fine upstanding chap, and would do anything in reason for him, he'd be fired if he forgot to ring the bell, and like everybody else he has his living to make and can't take any chances of losing his job.

"That worries the girl for quite a while. Then she gets the big idea. While the sexton is home for supper she slips in through the window of the church, climbs up to the belfry, and finds out that by taking a big jump off the ledge she can grab the bell clapper and hang on to it. So she waits till she hears the sexton come in just before nine and makes the leap. She catches on all right, and swings back and forth getting her knuckles barked pretty bad, but never letting on that she is hurt.



So she waits till she hears the sexton come in just before nine and makes the leap.

"You'll have it planted in the script that the sexton is a deaf old guy and don't know whether the bell is ringing or not.

"Well, pretty soon, when the sun begins to go down the town people wonder why they ain't heard the curfew ring, and the official who has led Basil out into the court yard has nothing to do but to take him back and put him into his cell again, on account of not daring to do his official duty except according to law.

"There is a lot of talk all over town about it, but nobody finds out why the curfew didn't ring till the girl sees the judge the next morning and makes a clean breast of the whole business. The judge has a big heart, and so he decides to give Basil a new trial, and with the new evidence that is discovered in some lost documents he is acquitted, and the next time the bell rings it is for a wedding.

"Now I worked that whole story out by myself, just from seeing a carry on and if I can do it you ought to be able to do the same thing. But of course if you had the same kind of an inside of your head that I have you would be producing instead of getting a little coin now and then for fixing up a scenario, wouldn't you?"

THE WORTH WHILE

Mrs. Chetwynde Mason Thought Most of Her Neig
Lionel Stepped Through Her Drawing Room Windo

"THAT'S the difficulty in the country, unfortunately," said Mrs. Chetwynde Mason in her slightly hard, intellectual voice. "Nature—well, one has the blessed power of choosing your Nature. But when it comes to people, to what are called neighbors"—she made a slight gesture as if repelling an invisible something—"why, then you are at the mercy of chance, fate, whatever you may choose to call it. There is nothing to prevent a rich pork butcher from settling down next door to a famous philosopher. Neighbors! Oh, my dear Eleanor, you who live almost perpetually in London can probably scarcely imagine the dreadful associations that word holds for some of us who happen to be sensitive, who happen to care only for the worth while, not merely in art, literature, and music, but in people."

"Well, now, that gives me the courage to make a confession to you, said Lady Caroway. "I've always rather wondered at your buying a property and building this lovely house so near to Brankhurst."

"To Brankhurst!" said Mrs. Chetwynde Mason, lifting her large, intellectual head a little. "What has Brankhurst got to do with it?"

"You are so sensitive about your neighbors that I've always wondered that you cared to make your home—one of your homes—so near to a lunatic asylum."

Mrs. Chetwynde Mason laughed, patronizingly.

"Lunatics are not neighbors, dear!"

"Don't you ever see them?"

"Occasionally I see poor Lady Glenbarley—the Earl of Glenbarley's wife—driving with her keepers, or Lord Brighton motoring with his. (Brankhurst is the most expensive and luxurious asylum in England.) But lunatics are not at liberty to call on you, to invite you to their houses, to persist in expecting you to lavish hospitality on them."

"Supposing one of them escaped?"

Mrs. Chetwynde Mason smiled as only a very rich woman can smile.

"You evidently don't know much about Brankhurst. It's perhaps the most exclusive asylum in Europe."

"Well, but how can a lunatic be exclusive?"

"Cannot a lunatic be well born?"

"Oh, yes, of course!"

"Cannot a lunatic be wealthy?"

"Yes, no doubt."

"Brankhurst is specially arranged and run for such lunatics. They have their own apartments, furnished according—"

"Not surely according to their own individual taste," interpolated Lady Caroway.

"No, according to the taste of their nearest relatives or guardians. They have their own highly trained keepers."

"Are keepers trained—like setters?"

"You frivolous creature! They have their own carriages, horses, motor cars. Lord Brighton has lived there for over twenty years. He has a Rolls Royce and two charming looking keepers. A place like Brankhurst is no disadvantage to me. No; it's the neighbors I suffer from."

"Are they so dreadful? I thought Surrey and Sussex were full of interesting people. And as you're just on the border—"

"Surrey and Sussex are full of bores!" said Mrs. Chetwynde Mason emphatically.

"How unfortunate! But do they come and bore you?"

"They do. You see, I'm pretty well known."

"I should think so!"

"They've read about me in the papers. They've found out I had a salon in New York where all the famous men of the day used to come. Of course, since my husband's death I've given it up, but still—"

"But still—indeed!" murmured Lady Caroway, seriously.

"Then my connection with Shakespeare has made me known over here."

"Are you relative of Shakespeare?"

"No, but I founded a library in Kansas and endowed a Shakespeare chair in connection with it, and my press agent—I mean that there was a lot about it in the papers over here."

"To be sure!"

"The result of it is that all bores in Sussex and Surrey, and they are many, call upon me. Although I have been here now for two summers, I have not met a single really worth while man or woman who lives in my neighborhood. All my artistic and intellectual sustenance comes to me from London."

"By boat, rail, and motor," murmured Lady Caroway.

"You must have your little joke, dear. But you see the situation! Oh—here's Barstow bringing some more bores to bother me!"

"Mrs. Sampson and Miss Ellen Sampson!" announced Barstow, in a penetrating voice.

"Barstow!"

"Madam?"

"I think it will be better if in future you say to callers that you are not sure whether I am at home or not and that you will go and see. Take their names and then come to me—if I am in, of course."

"Very well, madam."

Barstow left the room and Mrs. Chetwynde Mason glanced 'round it with a sigh. It was a lovely room, full of beautiful things, large, with windows open to an exquisite garden. A shaft of sunlight fell on her favorite Correggio, Christ with the woman taken in adultery. She thought of the view outside, a wide, blue, and lovely distance. And then she thought of Mrs. Sampson and Miss Ellen Sampson.

"If this lovely weather holds the rector intends to have the annual rummage sale out of doors in the rectory garden. Will you be there? Ellen's going to sell castoff garments, aren't you, Ellen?"

"Yes, mother."

No more of it! Henceforth Barstow should guard the house from intruders. She hadn't spent nearly twenty thousand pounds in order that—

"What is it now, Barstow?"

For Barstow was again advancing from the door that opened into the inner hall of the mansion.

"A gentleman has called, madam, and asked for you. At least he said to me"—and Barstow's baritone took on a more dignified tone—"'Is your mistress at home?'"

"What name did he give?"

"He told me to say Lord Lionel Danesborough, madam."

"Lord Lion—"

Mrs. Chetwynde Mason paused abruptly and mentally scampered through Dubrett, Danesborough! Let's see. That was surely the family name of the Dukes of Hampshire. Yes! One never met the present duke and duchess in society. They were both notoriously shy, and lived in great retirement at their lovely place, Morton Abbey. The duke had brothers—Danesboroughs. This must be one of them. She had never heard of a Danesborough living in her neighborhood. Still—

"Lord Lionel! Oh, of course! Show him in, Barstow, and—"

"May I come in?" said a pleasant voice somewhere.

Mrs. Chetworth Mason started and turned 'round. In the embrasure of one of the drawing room windows stood a very tall man of perhaps forty-five, with a long, large featured face and large brown eyes that held a rather melancholy expression. His brown hair was thinning on a curiously narrow but well shaped head. He was extremely well dressed in country clothes and held a soft gray hat and a gold topped walking stick in one long fingered hand. He was really an ugly man, but he was the sort of ugly man whose obvious high breeding and quiet assurance are full of attractive power. And he had, as Mrs. Chetwynde Mason noticed, a magnificent figure.

"I couldn't resist taking a peep at your marvelous garden, so I came 'round informally," added the very agreeable voice.

And the slender figure stepped into the room.

Mrs. Chetwynde Mason, rather surprised, but with her usual complete composure, held out her hand.

"Very kind of you to come, Lord Lionel. Bring tea, please, Barstow."

"Yes, madam."

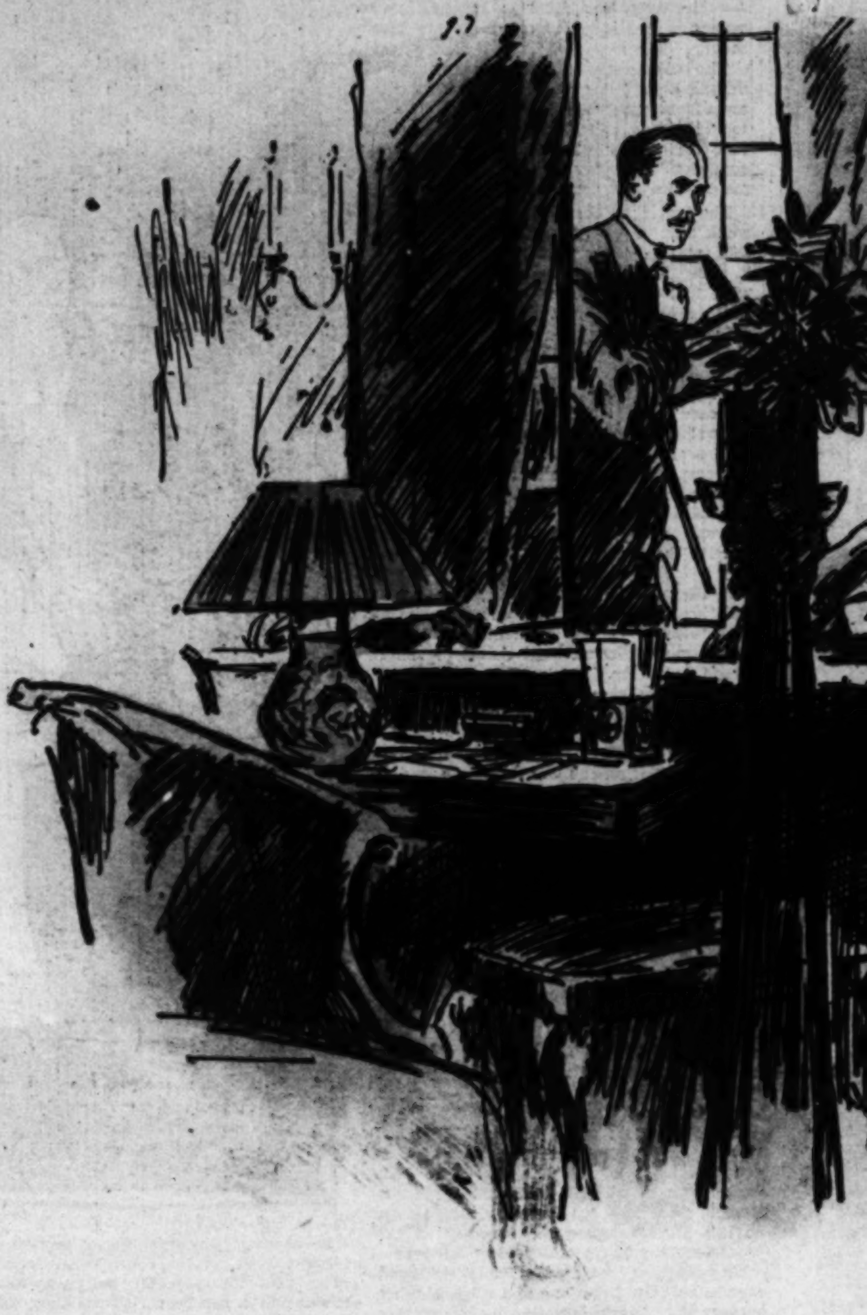
"Your lobelias are extraordinary," said the visitor, after pressing his hostess' hand. "Surely that must be a Correggio."

And he walked slowly toward the woman taken in adultery.

"Yes, it is," said Mrs. Chetwynde Mason.

"Antonio Allegri," murmured the visitor. "A very fine specimen, too. The woman's attitude is masterly. You have been to Parma, of course?"

"Yes, of course—well, no, I haven't—yet," said Mrs. Chetwynde Mason, in some slight confusion. "But I am going—probably this year."



"I couldn't resist taking a peep at your marvelous garden, so I ca

"You ought to," said Lord Lionel, with a hint of reproach. "Until you have been to Parma and seen the cupolas there you cannot be said to know Correggio. By the way, it is quite untrue that his people were rich. They were neither rich nor poor. But no doubt you are aware that his father was comfortably off. So you have a Burnet-Jones, too. Do you know his 'Love Disguised as Reason'? But of course you do. My favorite picture—I'm speaking of his work—is his 'Chant d'Amour.' There is a rare ecstasy of romance in that. Isn't there?"

"Indeed there is! Do sit down, Lord Lionel."

"I see you have a fine piano," he said, walking over to a grand piano. "Are you fond of Wagner still?"

"Yes, very."

"So am I. But, you know, les jeunes are beginning to run him down. Bayreuth, so they tell me, is only frequented by the middle aged now. There is no doubt that while the reputation of Wagner begins to wane, the reputation of his adversary, Nietzsche, waxes. Do you remember that passage in Nietzsche's 'Nietzsche contra Wagner,' beginning, 'Richard Wagner, ostensively the most triumphant creature alive; as a matter of fact, though, a cranky and desperate decadent suddenly fell helpless and broken on his knees before the Christian cross'—do you?"

"I'm not quite—let me see—"

"You don't," he remarked, quietly, with just the least hint of intellectual regret, "No one can understand Wagner who has not studied Nietzsche's attack on him. The great Charlatan! The great necromancer! Cagliostro in music! Have you been to Palermo?"

"Yes. I—"

"Giuseppe Balsamo—that was Cagliostro's real name—was born there, as, of course, you know. He died at San Leo. Cagliostro, Paganini, Wagner—there is an affinity between them. And Franz Liszt? What about him?"

He fixed his large, rather melancholy eyes on her dreamily and yet inquiringly.

"You think that he—"

"Hadn't he a touch of the charlatan, too? Saintly and naughty! For you know Liszt was naughty. When he lived at Tivoli in his old age he had two female servants, and he used to embrace them. They said so themselves when they, in their turn, were old. 'He was very fond of embracing us.' Those were their very words."

"Were they, really?"

"You didn't know it?"

Barstow and a saucy looking young footman appeared with a sumptuous tea, and Mrs Chetwynde Mason, conscious unusually of ignorance, begged her remarkable visitor to come to the tea table.

"I am very fond of the music of Liszt," she said, striving after her usual authority as he sat down opposite to her. "His Hungarian rhapsodies—"

"Circus music!" said Lord Lionel, quietly. "Thank you." (He accepted a cup of tea and reached out gently for a bit of buttered toast.) "The real Liszt, the ascetic libertine, the Abbe with illegitimate children—him you will find in such things as 'Saint Stanislas' and 'La Gondole funebre.' You are familiar with them, of course? No!"

He sighed faintly like a man disconcerted, as a school inspector might be by the ignorance of a child unable to remember who Adam was.

"Do have some strawberry jam, Lord Lionel," was the best retort Mrs. Chetwynde Mason could muster.

"Thank you (He took some.) Is that vase I see in the distance standing on an ebony pedestal Etruscan?"

"Yes—no! Which vase? Do you mean—"

He felt for her, and put up to his eyes a double eyeglass circled with rims of tortoise shell.

"Oh, no, it wouldn't be Etruscan, would it? I thought you meant—

"It is Etruscan," he remarked, putting down the eyeglass and spreading some strawberry jam on his buttered toast. "Of the primitive period. Have you made a deep study of ceramics?"

"Oh, yes! At least—well, deep is a strong word, isn't it?"

"No study is worth very much unless it is deep—and wide. At Morton, my brother Hampshire's place, there is an Etruscan Amphora imitating the Greek style. It shows Alcestios and Admetus. You remember who Admetus was?"

"Of course I do. He was loved by Aphrodite and was killed by a wild boar when hunting."

"You are confusing him with Adonis. Admetus was king of Pherae, in Thessaly. Surely you remember his story? Euripides took it as the subject of his 'The Alcestis.'"

"Oh, to be sure!"

"And Browning—but, of course, you have studied Browning's 'Balaustion's Adventure?"

"Of course. Who hasn't?"

"A great many people, I'm afraid. Noble poetry isn't read much in these days."

"Oh, but think of the Sitwells!" said Mrs. Chetwynde Mason, with all the eagerness of one retaking a lost position.

"No," said Lord Lionel, almost with severity. "I shall think of Homer. I shall think of Horace, of Virgil, of Ovid, especially of Horace."

He closed his expressive eyes for a moment and murmured:

"Nec lusisse pudet, sed non incidere ludum."

He opened them and added: "I hope you feel as he did about that?"

"I certainly do!" said Mrs. Chetwynde Mason, with anxious conviction.

"You understand the classics?"

"'No shame I deem it to have had my sport;
The shame had been in frolics not cut short.'"

"Well, yes—in a certain degree. That is, I don't read them fluently, but I can pick out—"

"It is not seemly to 'pick out' in the classics. But why be ashamed to confess ignorance of them? I say with Cicero, 'Nec me pudet ut istos, fateri nescire quod nesciam.' When I do not know I am not ashamed to say so."

"But your knowledge, Lord Lionel, seems far reaching, quite remarkable, if I may say so."

"Oh, I took a first in classics at Oxford. But that's nothing."

"Some more tea?"

"Yes, if you are good enough to give me some. Are you fond of solving mathematical problems?"

"No," said Mrs. Chetwynde Mason, rather hastily. "I prefer the arts.

"Painting? Sculpture?"

"Oh, I love sculpture. What is your opinion of Epstein?"

"I know nothing about him. I have never heard of him. May I take some more of this delicious jam?"

"Do, please! But surely you must have—"

"Never, I assure you. He hasn't come my way. I was brought up on Michael Angelo, Donatello, Benvenuto Cellini, that rascal of genius. What do you think of Jacopo Della Quercia?"

"Oh, well—of course he is very fine, very fine indeed."

"I am not, like some men, ashamed to confess my ignorance when I do not know."

"What do you think of his Ilaria del Carretto at Lucca?"

"Wonderful! Marvelous!"

He fixed his eyes on her in a look that seemed to her piercing.

"You have visited Lucca?"

"Oh, yes—at least—"

"You haven't visited Lucca. Go there, when you have the time, and study Quercia."

"I will most certainly. I have always intended—"

With a vague look he seemed, but gently indeed, to rebuke her.

"Good intentions should be carried on in to actions," he said, but not unkindly. "The philosophers tell us that fine thoughts should produce fine deeds. If you have always intended to go to Lucca in order to see the Ilaria del Carretto there you should yield yourself entirely to that intention—and go."

He laid a rather startling emphasis upon the final word.

"Are you a great traveler?" asked Mrs. Chetwynde Mason hastily, to make a diversion.

"I never travel now."

"Indeed! And—and you live in Engand?"

He looked slightly surprised.

"Of course. I live in this neighborhood. I have motored past your beautiful house several times and wished to enter it. But till today it has not been possible. So many engagements."

"Of course you must have! I thought I had seen you somewhere when you came in by the window with such pleasant informality."

"You have probably seen me motoring. I passed here only yesterday with a couple of men friends. You have probably seen us about together. We are inseparable."

He frowned slightly and looked out into the garden.

"Horticulture is evidently a hobby of yours," he said, after a very slight pause.

"Yes, indeed! I am a great gardener."

"Do you believe in bottom heat?"

"Bottom heat?" said Mrs. Chetwynde Mason in a rather blank tone of voice.

"Don't you know that gardeners call artificial heat applied to the roots of plants bottom heat?"

"Do they? Oh, yes, to be sure! I remember now. Yes, I do believe in it—in certain cases."

"Which ones?"

"Well in—well—I—I think it depends a good deal on the nature of the soil."

"I don't. I think it depends on the nature of the plant. The optimum temperature best suited to a zonal pelargonium, for instance, is totally different from the optimum temperature which would give the best results with, say, an asplenium bulbferum. Don't you agree with me when you really give your mind to it?"

"Yes, I do.

"I noticed as I came in that your fibrous-rooted herbaceous plants are in fairly good condition. Your Penstemons are healthy looking. But do you think it wise to mix the purple aubrietia with phloxes, as I see you have done in the border which runs toward that small painted arbor?"

"Perhaps that was a mistake. I will speak to my head gardener about it."

"That's a nice binding you have there. May I?" (He reached out toward a small table.)

He picked up a book.

"This was bound in France. Possibly by Duru? Is it Duru?"

"Yes!" Said Mrs. Chetwynde Mason, firmly.

He opened the volume and looked at the inside of the lower edge of the cover.

"No, you're wrong. This binding is by Bauzonnet. Here is his signature in gold lettering."

"Then we were both mistaken," said Mrs. Chetwynde Mason with an attempt at a smile.

"But it isn't my book," said Lord Lionel, gently, but with a raising of his fluffy brown eyebrows. "Have you any Roger Payne bindings?"

"I'm afraid not."

"Any transparent vellums such as Edwards of Halifax introduced in the eighteenth century?"

"No. I wish I had."

He turned the book over and looked at its title.

"I see it's Nietzsche's 'Ecco Homo.'"

"Yes. Poor Nietzsche."

"Why poor?"

"Because he went mad. He was practically mad when he wrote that."

Lord Lionel's eyes became almost stern.

"Do you say a madman could have written this great yea-saying book?"

"Well, we know that—"

"We know that whipper snappers who couldn't write a line to save their souls, that men totally devoid of knowledge and who knew not the meaning of culture chose to call the great Nietzsche mad, as they call great men mad to this day. But that only proves their own madness. Genius always seems madness to the little strutting bourgeois."

He put the book down rather sharply and got up, stretching his splendid figure and looking 'round the big room.

"You have some very fine furniture," he said.

"Yes. I am rather a connoisseur of furniture."

"In that case I should like some day to take you over to Morton Abbey, my brother Hampshire's place. He has quantities of magnificent specimens."

"Oh, I should simply love to go with you!" exclaimed Mrs. Chetwynde Mason.

"The eighteenth century was, of course, the great period for furniture."

"Of course it was!"

"But Hampshire has specimens of almost every period. His Hepplewhites are the finest in England. But he has quantities of old Venetian furniture, as well as, of course, Chippendale, Sheraton, and so forth. French furniture is not lacking, either. He has some marvelous Louis Quinze armchairs. Quite priceless."

He moved on and paused before a tall piece of furniture like a cabinet and yet somehow not exactly like a cabinet.

"That is a great treasure. It's an organ."

"An organ!" he exclaimed. "May I open it?"

"Pray do!"

"By whom is it?"

"Well now—let me see—"

"Good heavens!" he said, opening it and

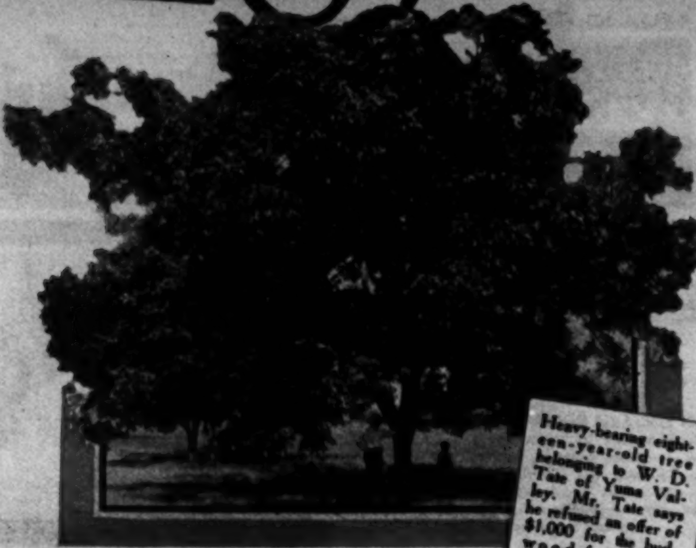
A Permanent Growing Income

THIS small down payment and monthly payments of $11.98 each will start you toward ownership of a one acre Pecan Grove.



Heavy-bearing eighteen-year-old tree belonging to W. D. Tate of Yuma Valley. Mr. Tate says he refused an offer of $1,000 for the bud-wood from this "champion."

Guaranteed 6% Return

Your income starts immediately when you make your first payment on an improved Papershell Pecan Grove in Yuma Valley. The Yuma Trust & Holding Company, owned by the Yuma National Bank, the First National Bank of Yuma, and the E. G. Caruthers State Bank of Somerton, guarantees 6% return during the six-year growing period of your trees.

Prized four-year-old grove of K. S. Yowell, Yuma Valley. Yowell says he has refused $3,000 per acre.

No Further Expense

After you make your down payment of $287.50, there is no further expense to you except the $11.98 monthly payment until you have paid $1,150. The Yuma Trust and Holding Company will plant your land, care for it, pay the taxes, charges, and all other costs.

Beautiful groves like this dot Yuma Valley. The owners have realized that pecans bring them as much as ten times the profit they net on cotton, alfalfa and grain.

Immense Profits

Your 6% return from the date you make your down payment is a trifling return when compared to the profits which are being reaped by Yuma Valley pecan growers NOW.

W. D. Tate, Yuma, writes that he has netted $1,100 per year for eight years on about ONE-HALF acre on which eleven papershell pecan trees are growing. Needless to say he's planting more trees.

F. W. Creswell, A. R. Heineman, K. S. Yowell—prominent Yuma Valley farmers—and many others, have beautiful productive groves. One six-year-old tree belonging to Mr. Creswell produced 105 pounds of nuts last year—setting a world's record. Mr. Yowell says he has refused $3,000 an acre for his four-year-old grove. These are typical of Yuma Valley pecan growers.

Let us show you how you can participate in the profits which are coming to Pecan Growers. Fill out and mail the accompanying coupon for free illustrated booklet, or better still, drop into our office any afternoon at 2:30, or Tuesday or Thursday evening at 8:00, and see Yuma Valley in motion pictures.

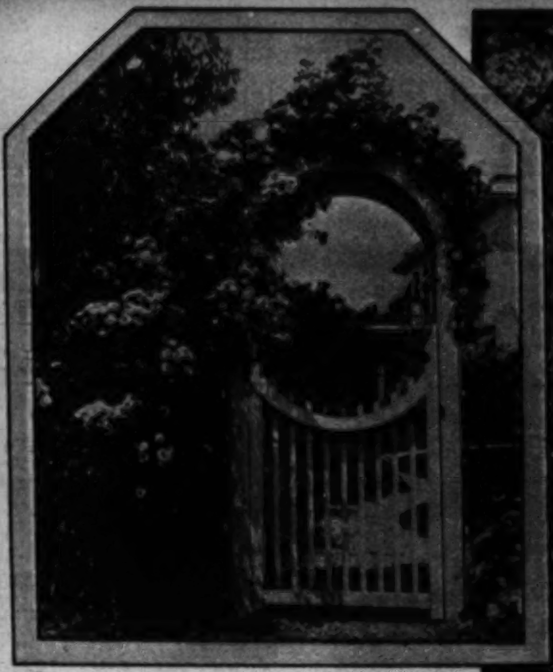
Merry Christmas! Say It With Plants, Seeds, Bulbs!

By Frances Duncan



Roses grown over an arched gateway opening on a Pasadena garden.

Cleverly managed tree and path in Dr. Raymond Mixcell's garden at San Marino.

Well-placed statue in a Pasadena garden.

Garden statuary is so rarely well-placed, that it is a pleasure to show this figure from a Pasadena garden. The figure fits so well into its environment, with the quiet pool and shaded recess, that it seems to have happened there. Both in a private garden and a public park, statuary should be introduced with care—for once in, it is not easy to have it out.

"GO, LOVELY Rose, tell Her—" It's no novel idea—that of "saying it with flowers." Poets, lovers, and friends have expressed their feelings in that way for centuries. The friend sends flowers to friend—lover to his beloved—thinking, undoubtedly, that their loveliness expresses the beauty of his feeling. The cynical may think they express, also, its brevity, typifying quite perfectly the sentiment of the old Scotch ballad—that "love is bonnie, the little while that it is new."

Lovely as the flowers are, they are perishable. But the plant typifies affection of a different sort. The rose-bush ready for planting may seem as unpromising as the casket of Bassanio's choice, but it's a charming gift from one friend to another, for, like friendship, the bush can endure much. It can be cut down, pruned rigorously, and yet blossom divinely. It responds wonderfully to care and tending, suffers from neglect—yet it endures. The orange trees may come and go, but the roses remain. "My luv is like a red, red rose," sang Robert Burns. If that is the youth's opinion, better send a dozen or so of the cut flowers, and also a plant of Hadley, Gen. MacArthur, or Red Radiance. Then every time a bloom appears, she will remember his sentiments, and get the idea of the permanency, rather than transiency, of his feeling.

Years and years after, when the book you have given has long ago been borrowed, when the candies are as completely forgotten as yesterday's breakfast, and when the decorative apparel has gone to the Salvation Army, the plant may still be a joy in the garden, and still bring to mind the giver. One of the unending charms of this climate is that every day may be a planting day. For the New Englander, planting at Christmas time is out of the question, but not for the Californian. He can plant in December as he can in May—and more and better.

Safety First!

But here's a caution. Reputable nurseries have a careful inspection of plants, and send out none but those on which they can put a certificate. This is the plant's passport, and enables it to travel afar unworried by inspectors. Therefore, in sending your favorite plants, don't put Merry Christmas stickers over the nurseryman's certificate of health. It's wiser, also, to have the nurseryman pack and send for you. Also, if you are sending plants from your own garden to distant points, your local horticultural commissioner can inspect, and give you a certificate to stick on your package, informing all concerned that the plant is O. K., and has permission to travel.

Bulbs should be purchased from an accredited seedsman or plantsman, who can send them for you properly certificated. This seems, perhaps, like a nuisance, but it has much to do with maintaining a high average in plant health.

Aside from sending your favorite rose-bushes and shrubs to be set out in the garden, charming plants may be had in pots. The Chinese lemon in a terra cotta jardiniere is a most imposing Christmas present—so is the sequoia gigantea in a tub, and many another lovely thing may be had in tub or pot which will be a permanent delight. There are charming ericas, curious and interesting cacti for the lover of desert plants. Perhaps the most satisfactory for sending are the bulbs. Most florists get up interesting Christmas packages of bulbs, but the enthusiast should remember that except for the chance of a January thaw, planting time for Dutch bulbs in the East is past. One can send dahlia or gladiolus bulbs for next spring's planting, and anywhere in the South it is still planting time for daffodils, jonquils, tulips, and the like.

Perhaps the most satisfactory Christmas garden gift, to send East, is a package of California wild flowers. Many of these lovely Californians thrive admirably in the East, and are a charming reminder of the fact that the Californian, and the adopted Californian, still remembers the home people. Gilias, Clarkias, and Godetias thrive well—so do the lovely California poppies. There are also collections of wild flowers which make delightful Christmas gifts. The addition of photographs of bits of California landscape, or details of the flowers, would make the package still more interesting. Older people, especially, love such a gift, which takes them away in mind, and when the lovely things are a-bloom, brings them into curiously close touch with a friend a continent's breadth away.

Garden tools are gifts that a gardener much appreciates. Almost anyone who has worked with plants has found pet tools, and it is a pleasure to pass the knowledge of these on. Christmas time is a lovely time for doing it. Besides they look so impressive Christmas morning. If Bobby has a new bicycle, or the smaller buddy a kiddie-car, a new little hand-cultivator for dad, or a new mowing machine, gives that worthy a little deserved importance. Gifts for dad are usually difficult. Why not forego the necktie he doesn't like, handkerchiefs he doesn't need, and tobacco of the sort he abominates, and buy him garden-tools, red-painted and handsomely varnished, seeds and bulbs, and plants—something for him to take out and try on Christmas morning, and exhibit to the neighbors, as the children exhibit what Santa Claus has brought them? This is not a bad idea. And if the garden tool or cultivator isn't exactly the brand he uses, he can exchange it, and no offense is taken.

Planting Hints

Since December is planting time, gardeners are looking very carefully at charming Southland gardens to see whether it's possible to do likewise in their own. In pictures on this page are suggestions from some lovely Pasadena gardens. The gate with the arch over it shows one delightful use for a climbing rose. In fact, the arch over the gate is altogether too little used. The effect of it is almost invariably pleasing—it frames the garden beyond, completes the gateway, gives a sense of privacy to garden and grounds, yet makes both appear more inviting than ever. Also, it is hard to find a better vine for a gateway than a climbing rose. Cecile Brunner is especially good here, for foliage, as well as flower, is charming.

The bit of Dr. Raymond Mixcell's garden, at San Marino, shows a very interesting treatment of the fine live-oak, which a less imaginative gardener might have cut down because it blocked the path. The seat at the side gives a reason for the bowing out of the path, and a corresponding curved extension opposite the tree is just enough to balance. The tree and the seat become a feature of the garden, instead of an interruption to the path. The moral to this lovely bit of garden-craft is, when you think you have an obstacle, look at it a long time before you disturb it, for, cleverly managed, it may be an asset of high value.

Little Glimpses of a Few Southland Poultry Yards

(Illustrating Stories in This Issue)

Charles C. McElroy, formerly a Nebraska attorney, has developed into a good "judge" of White Leghorns since coming to Southern California to make his home. His poultry ranch at La Canada is a model plant. He now has a flock of 1,800 laying hens and pullets—the cockerels are killed as quickly as they "sprout" tail feathers.

In February, 1926, James Hare, a Kern County Union High School agricultural student, purchased these birds from his father, and went into the turkey business for himself. By Christmas time, the same year, he cast up his accounts and found he had made a clear profit of $319.40. He tells how he did it elsewhere in "Farm and Orchard."

That a small home flock of chickens and turkeys is a profitable venture has been demonstrated by F. T. Miner, a teamster living at Agoura. He always has plenty of fresh eggs and chicken meat for his own table, and usually has a surplus which finds a ready market with his neighbors. Here are two holiday turkeys he raised this year.

G. S. Lee, former Los Angeles hotel man, has proven that good poultry equipment not only pays, but also makes the work easy. His poultry plant in Arcadia is completely electrified, and he has running water in each pen. With the aid of modern conveniences, he is able to care for his flock of Rhode Island Reds unassisted, and has plenty of time to devote to a thrifty young orange grove and a home garden.

B. C. Watkins, of Glendora, furnishes his chickens shade in the form of a platform, upon which they can roost when the sun goes down. He lets his chickens run at large in his small orange grove, and finds that the grove is improved by the practice.

Mr. Watkins has a new type of chicken house. It is built like the ordinary lath house, but he uses wire netting instead of lath. Thus more sunshine gets in.

This is part of the breeding flock of White Leghorns owned by M. C. Hammack, of Pasadena. More than 50,000 baby chicks were hatched on this place last year.

$17.69 a Day from Eggs

— and Mr. F. L. Kemp's 1050 pullets are on the job 7 days a week

— at Fontana

You owe it to yourself to know more about FONTANA Tear out and mail this COUPON NOW!

"MY 1,050 White Leghorn pullets (only about seven months old) are bringing in close to $20 a day," Mr. Kemp reports. "For instance, the other day I received a check for $70.77 for four days production of eggs—an average of $17.69 a day. Since then the daily average production and the price of eggs have gained steadily. Cost of feed, straw and spray averages about $4.25 a day.

"The assistance and service given by the Fontana staff of instructors has been one of the big factors in my success," Mr. Kemp said. "I had to learn the business from the ground up."

There are other cases like Mr. Kemp's. We are citing it to show what can be accomplished even by the average city man at Fontana.

Bear in mind that here, in an established community, organized for cooperative production and selling, you can buy irrigated, unplanted land as low as $500 an acre, with ten years to pay, and that here you benefit from twenty years of development.

Fontana is 50 miles east of Los Angeles—1½ hours' ride on P. E. cars, or reached by driving out Foothill Blvd. and turning right at big overhead sign. Ask at building with tower for information. BUT TEAR OUT AND SEND IN THE COUPON NOW for full details.

Mr. F. L. Kemp, Fontana rancher, is shown here beside young walnut tree in his grove. Pails hold part of one day's production of eggs.

Fall Truck Deal Fills Imperial Calendar

Vegetables and Melons, Timed to Reach Markets Before Holidays, Newest "Specialty" of Inland Empire—Careful Check Being Made of This Season's Operations—Growers Optimistic Over Plan

By IVA M. McFADDEN

BRAWLEY.—Two crops of head lettuce each year have long been the regular order of things in the Imperial Valley, but a second crop of other vegetables after the general spring and summer deal is a new feature of agriculture even in this area of winter production. Only a short time ago the fall season in the vegetable world was a time of preparation for winter products, but this year those months preceeding the holiday season have been marked by the harvesting of many varieties of garden favorites, planted early in September for production before the first damaging frost.

Asparagus is perhaps the most unique of all these fall products, for, so far as has been determined, Imperial Valley is the only place in the world where a double cutting of asparagus has been found possible. Last year this fall cutting was rather hesitatingly begun by a number of growers, and some fifteen cars were shipped. This year, however, the practice has been of a general nature, and growers of the older fields have nearly all taken to fall cutting. The first crate of fall asparagus went out October 4, and shipments increased to car lots shortly after. Cuttings will continue as long as warm weather brings the shoots out of the ground.

For the fall crop, the asparagus is allowed to go to "top" at the end of the spring season, the tops being cut with a disk, and worked into the ground shortly before the second season opens. This is no short process, for the tops are heavy and much discing is necessary. Fields are often gone over as many as seven times in the process of cutting and discing, rebedding and preparing for irrigation. In about five days after the water is put on, the asparagus shoots up and is ready for cutting.

The asparagus is packed in sheds on the individual ranches, where small crews of men are kept busy cutting and sorting. Bunches of asparagus must weigh two pounds. Grades are carefully made, which necessitates skill and careful sorting. First grade is the Jumbo, which has twenty stalks to the bunch; second grade is Extra Fancy, with twenty to thirty stalks; Fancy allows thirty to forty-seven stalks; Extra Choice, forty-seven to sixty-seven, and Choice takes in all over sixty-seven, except the very smallest. No bent stems or seeded tops may enter the pack, and the stalks must be eight inches long, with not more than one inch of white at the end. For this reason Imperial Long Green is a most appropriate name for asparagus going out under this grading.

GOES BY EXPRESS

Peculiar sloping crates are used for shipment. After the bunches have been cut to proper length and tied, they are placed in wet moss, which keeps the "grass" fresh. For distant journeys, cars must be iced, and all asparagus is sent by express. Full cars have been a common thing, but this year the express company, to accommodate the asparagus trade, put on a special "l.c.l." service. That is, less than car loads were given the benefit of ice. The rate was the same as commodity rates on less than car lots, but icing was furnished.

Forty-two markets have been definitely opened up to these fall shipments of Imperial Long Green asparagus. It has moved to an eager market. Only 40 per cent was sold in Chicago and New York, which is a significant fact, for only a few years ago Chicago was considered the market center. The most encouraging development in this, as well as in other perishable shipments, is the definite drive toward smaller markets. Obviously, the housewife in a remote town is just as eager to get green vegetables in winter as is her sister in New York City. It is only a matter of getting the stuff to her. In all marketing organizations the American housewife is coming to the front as the person whose interests must be considered. Advertising caters to her, and marketing must be made to reach her.

HONEYDEWS, TOO

Another extremely interesting crop this fall is honeydew melons. These melons have previously been confined largely to the spring calendar, but this fall over 500 acres in Imperial Valley have been devoted to them. They are yielding well, though they undoubtedly will not produce the 450 crates per acre so common in the spring. Their flavor, is, if anything, better than that of the spring melon, and the market seems to be absorbing them eagerly. The vines are very thrifty and will bear until a heavy enough frost comes to kill them. So far (middle of November) the weather has been playing into the hands of the growers, whose profits have been augmented by a mild season.

Cantaloupes are seen quite generally in Imperial valley markets, though comparatively few have been shipped outside. Shippers do not feel that these will ever really become a popular fall crop, but certainly the flavor of the fall product is delicious. Many of these cantaloupes have come from volunteer vines, while a very few acres have been planted as an experiment.

Summer squash vines have been producing for some time, and the Italian, is also in production. This is longish, like a cucumber, green with flecks of yellow, and many prefer it to the little summer variety. Certainly both come happily on the market when many other vegetables are "laying off duty."

BEAR UNTIL FROST

String beans planted in September are bearing prolifically. Their pods are particularly tender, and are almost stringless. The vines themselves grow rankly, and they, too, will continue producing until frost nips them off.

Cucumbers are becoming quite popular as a fall venture. They have been bearing for some time, six cars having gone out up to November 15. Frost will end the production of these vegetables, unless, indeed certain growers who have planted sweet corn on cucumber and squash rows, with expectation of thereby preventing destruction of the vines, have the right hunch. These growers think they will be able to grow cucumbers up until Christmas with this system, getting production from the corn as well.

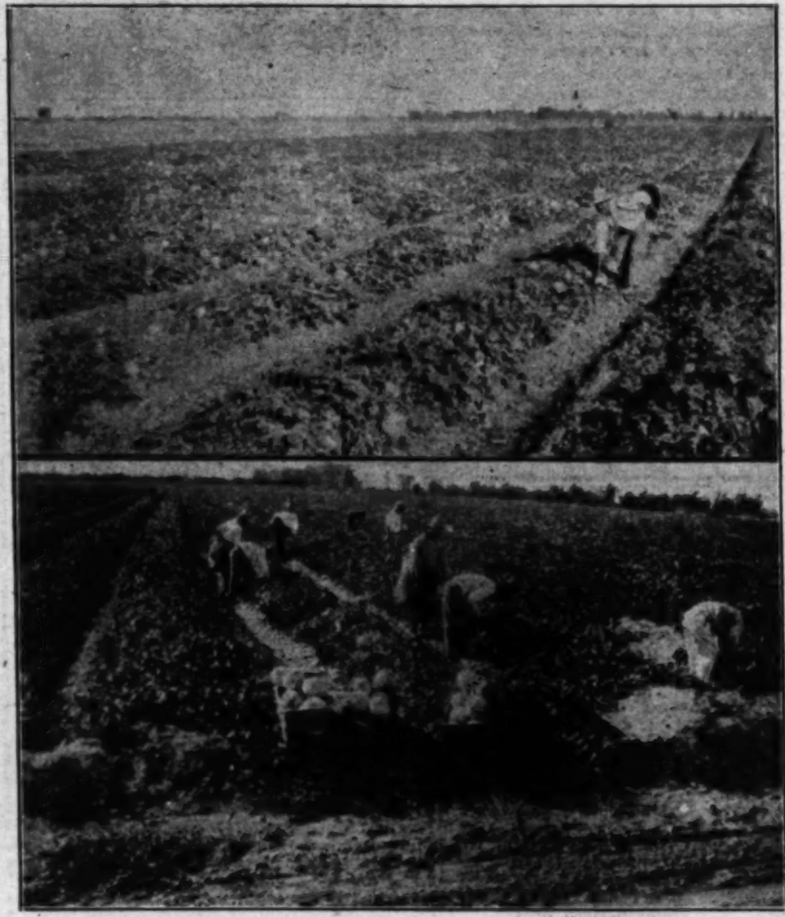
Spinach, or "greens," are going out in car loads, five cars having been shipped by the middle of November. These cars go east.

Peas, of all the fall vegetables, have been planted longest, having been a fall crop for some years. The Laxtonia variety is planted almost exclusively for the fall season. They go into the ground in September, and car lots go out in early November. Here again frost sets the end of the picking.

Large acreages of peas are a very common sight in Imperial Valley this year. When picking starts, these fields are thickly dotted with pickers, for many people must be employed to get the crop off at the proper time. Both men and women may be seen, and the work is done almost entirely by Mexicans. The picking is contracted at so much a pound, and this is no small amount when it is reckoned against the profit in peas. In fact, a very substantial price must be realized if the grower is to get as much as his pickers.

This fall harvest adds another definite productive season to the year's cycle in the Imperial Valley. All the ground will be worked down and planted to another vegetable crop that will make its appearance next spring before most localities have thought of entering into production. Some fertilization is necessary, but the fact that vegetable land is turned back to alfalfa at the end of three years makes it possible to do a lot of growing during its vegetable cycle.

Unquestionably the returns on these fall products will be carefully checked this year. The possibility of producing unusually fine crops has been proven beyond a doubt. The net to the grower will be the thing that dictates a future attitude toward expansion of the fall industry. A few large companies are established in the fall business, while others are merely merchandising for individual growers. Quite a yield, too, will be realized from the small plots being tried out by individual farmers, who enjoy vegetable growing, and who will be happy to add fall returns to the annual budget. Certainly a very optimistic feeling prevails in regard to the season, because growers cannot help believing that markets will absorb unusually fine fall produce.



Fall Melon Now Reality in Imperial Valley

"Hidden Waters" of Mojave River Offer Real Farming Possibilities

BY ROBERT T. LYANS

WHEN Jedediah Smith, famous trapper, came through the Mojave River Valley more than 100 years ago, he found it inhabited by jackrabbits, horned toads and Piute Indians. It was certainly uninviting from an agricultural point of view, and to this day one of our favorite descriptive terms for a drouthy condition of weather or terrain is "Dry as the Mojave Desert." Yet, in spite of all this, it must be admitted that the Mojave never was as dry as some people would have us believe. As proof of this, it might be pointed out that the Mormons who settled in the Mojave River Valley in 1869 evidently found it to their liking, even though the annual average rainfall was only five inches. It is interesting to note, too, that the last of these pioneer cattle herders passed out of the picture only two years ago.

In 1885 the railroad came, the California Southern being built by J. N. Victor, after whom the valley and Victorville, the principal town in the valley, were named. Considerable mining has been done in this vicinity for many years, while the valley has also become noted for its fine deposits of cement. Deciduous fruit growing has become quite a factor during the past ten years, many prizes having been won on fruit from this section. During the past few years alfalfa farming and dairying have become popular forms of agriculture.

About 12,000 tons of high-grade alfalfa have ben trucked out of the valley this year, while another cutting still remained to be harvested when the writer visited the area recently. All of this has been grown on 2500 acres. A few fine dairy herds are now established, with apparent assurance of more in the near future. Thus, it would seem that this section is finally coming into its kingdom as a producing center.

The Mojave River country lies in San Bernardino county, approximately 120 miles north and east of Los Angeles. The proportion of the large area actually in production is small by comparison with the whole of it. In fact, it would be necessary to delve below the fertile surface of the region to get any idea of how much of it is worth while. Its water resources are truly hidden, for, except in the rainy season, mile after mile of the Mojave River is but a tiny trickle, while much of its

SEASON EXTENDED

Brawley.—Harvesting of a fall crop of honeydew melons has been going on since early November on the Palm Ranch a mile and a half east of Alamoria. The honeydews were planted about the first of August on land that had produced a crop of cantaloupes in May and June. Many cantaloupes were left growing on the land when it was plowed and a considerable number of volunteer cantaloupe plants come up and are duly gathered, being separated from the honeydews at the packing shed. Jack Brothers and McBurney, who are handling the crop both as growers and distributors, are among the largest growers of melons and vegetables in the Imperial Valley. The planting of fifty acres of fall honeydews was tried out as an experiment designed to demonstrate that melons can be grown in Imperial Valley the greater part of the year.

"Probably no other single mistake causes so much loss to Americans, and especially American farmers as does the loss of time," says a writer on economics.

Hens Not Night Layers

Electric lights to lengthen the working day for the hen have not improved egg production under California conditions, according to a preliminary survey conducted by L. W. Fluharty, farm management specialist in the agricultural extension service of the University of California. In the county where the study was made, not only did the electric lights not increase production, but the hens in flocks where the lights were not used laid more eggs. In the flocks where no lights were used the hens averaged 153 eggs per year, with a profit per hen of $1.80; where lights were turned on between 5 o'clock and 6 o'clock, the per hen production was 143 and the per hen profit $1.49; where the lights were turned on between 4:30 and 4:45 the production was 143 and the profit $1.53; where the lights were turned on between 4 o'clock and 4:20 the production was 125 and the per hen profit 97 cents.

BIG CATTLE DEAL

UPLAND.—What is believed to be the largest chattel mortgage secured by live stock ever filed in San Bernardino county is now on record in the office of County Recorder Fulton G. Feraud. The mortgage, for $58,000 was made by J. A. Pitts of Upland, to the Boise Live Stock Loan Company of Los Angeles, secured by 1089 head of live stock, mostly cattle. Mr. Pitts is the largest cattle feeder in this community.

WALNUT RUN ENDS

CHINO.—The Chino Walnut Growers' Association has finished its run for the season, having received 1600 tons of nuts at its local plant. While there are still some walnuts on hand, the bulk of the crop has been shipped, about 100 cars having been used to handle the product. There are 460 members in the Chino association, the orchards being located in the vicinity of Chino, Pomona and Elsinore.

If that new concrete floor in your dairy barn is to be a real improvement, it must have the right dimensions, the gutters must be the right width and depth, and the floor must not be too smooth and slippery.

Good Equipment Makes Poultry Easy Work

ARCADIA.—Like many another California poultryman, G. S. Lee, former hotel owner of Los Angeles, bought a little place because he wanted quiet, an out-of-doors life and a lucrative occupation. His "ranch" of one and a half acres is on Huntington Drive in Arcadia, and he has gone in for Rhode Island Reds.

He began with twenty-five Reds for his own use and with 1000 White Leghorns as his producing flock. But in his enterprise, which now includes the selling of fowls for meat, hatching eggs and baby chicks, as well as table eggs, he has come to rely on the heavier birds. To his way of looking at it, the difference in the price for table birds tips the balance in their favor.

No commercial hatching is done on the ranch, but two large incubators are kept busy producing chicks for the plant. Through the brooder house, which is partitioned into three units, a succession of young chicks pass on their way to the outside houses. These are eight feet wide and 160 feet long, and are built in two parallel rows with ample yards adjoining. The yards are regularly freshened by plowing, and are seeded in rotation to green stuff (supplemented when needful with liberal cuttings of alfalfa.) All the buildings are electrically equipped and there is running water in each pen. Mr. Lee believes he has spent more money than the average poultryman in equipment, but his labor-saving arrangements make it possible for him to do all the work himself, except for a half-day's weekly assistance in the heavier cleaning and hauling.

Besides the poultry, there is a thrifty young orchard and space is given over also to grapevines and berry bushes, and to a garden where enough vegetables are grown not only to supply the family, but to provide a surplus for sale to customers who come to the place. Mrs. Lee is a garden enthusiast, and has found time to make the place attractive, as well as do her part in making the enterprise a success.

FARM NEWS

November and will continue until early in February, according to a report just issued by the bureau of agricultural economics, United States Department of Agriculture. Harvesting of the 400 acres of lettuce in Graham county, Arizona, began on November 10, and the Yuma Valley harvest will start about the middle of December. It is estimated that fully 14,000 acres are planted to lettuce in the three Arizona districts this winter. Figures on the spring crop in the State are not yet available.

POULTRYMEN ON TOUR

ONTARIO.—Directors and officials of Chaffey Junior College trapnest station received hearty commendation and encouragement from Southern California poultrymen, who made a tour of poultry plants of this district recently. The poultrymen formed an auto caravan from the San Bernardino county farm bureau headquarters. From Chaffey station the visitors inspected the Claude Buhley ranch, in East Acacia street, Ontario, and the Harrington Hatchery, 828 East A street. At each stop a practical poultryman discussed some phase of the subject of poultry raising, as related to his own flock.

OFFICERS ARE NAMED

TERRA BELLA.—Stockholders of the Grand View Citrus Association, at their annual meeting, elected the following directors and officers for the coming year: P. A. Schultz, president; F. H. Gerdes, vice-president; D. M. Stanley, Jay Hage, C. C. Wells, C. A. Wayland, J. M. Pitman. C. L. Young was reelected secretary, treasurer and manager of the association.

FROST WARNING SERVICE

PORTERVILLE.—As a feature of its community service work, the Porterville Chamber of Commerce will again issue frost warnings to citrus growers and those desiring such information. During past seasons this service has proven a valuable aid. It is rendered largely through co-operation of the telephone company and by means of bulletins.

GOES TO TULARE

VISALIA.—J. C. Johnson, former assistant farm adviser of Los Angeles county, has been appointed to a similar position in Tulare county. He will assume his new duties December 15, and will work in the citrus department of the Farm Bureau.

MILK PRICES GOOD

TULARE.—With production steady and prices two cents higher than a month before, Tulare dairymen congratulated themselves on a new high record for November, when checks totaling $341,959.54 were paid out by creameries. Early rains, improving green feed, caused production to rise, while prices had been climbing for three months, reaching a five-cent increase about the 1st of November. Prices were paid as follows: whole milk 62 cents, sweet cream 56 cents, and churning cream 53 cents.

CLEARING OFF DESERT

INDIO.—Dr. E. A. Newton of Los Angeles has a force of men busy clearing off a forty-acre tract of desert land near this city, on the old Palm Springs road. He expects to put the tract under intensive cultivation. Onions and other vegetables, as well as several acres of fruit trees, will be planted. Most of the tract is level, but is now covered with mesquite thicket. A new well has recently been drilled to a depth of about 200 feet, which pumps about 75 inches of water, sufficient for both irrigation and domestic purposes.

Transformation

This mesquite covered tract of desert land near Indio, owned by Dr. Newton of Los Angeles, is being cleared off and will be placed in cultivation soon. Water has already been assured from a 200 foot well.

START "AG" CLUB DRIVE

FRESNO.—Five new elementary school agricultural clubs have been started in the Caruthers Union High School district, west of Fresno, as the first step in the 1927-28 club year campaign, to raise the agricultural club membership in Fresno county to 1000 by November, 1928, according to an announcement by A. F. Gillette, Fresno county club leader. Approximately fifty new members will be added to the total for the county with the formation of the new clubs, says Mr. Gillette.

HOME FLOCK PAYS

AGOURA.—F. T. Miner is actively employed as a teamster, but that does not deprive him of the satisfaction of keeping a small flock of hens and turkeys on his one and one-half-acre home site. In the two years that he has lived here, his flock of hens has never run above one hundred birds, and these are just about equally divided between the big Light Brahmas and Rhode Island Reds. From these he obtains meat and eggs for family use and, whenever there is a surplus of either, a ready market is found at the place, or through the medium of store trade. This year he is giving a flock of young turkeys the run of the place. These, when eight months old, weighed seventeen pounds, and passers-by have been so eager to purchase them that Mr. Miner is convinced there would be a profitable market for a much larger flock.

FARM PRODUCTS FLOAT

FULLERTON.—The Orange County Farm Bureau featured an agricultural products float in the Fullerton Armistice Day parade. The float was drawn by four handsome gray draft horses, owned by Ed Stinson, which were shown at many fairs this fall. The major crops of Orange county were displayed, including oranges, lemons, peppers, grain, beans, tomatoes and walnuts.

SPRAYING DEMONSTRATION

VILLA PARK.—A group of 200 citrus growers witnessed a recent spraying demonstration held at the George Eltiste grove, under the auspices of the agricultural extension service. Dr. Ralph Smith, entomologist of the Citrus Experiment station, demonstrated the difference between good and poor applications. Insufficient time and material are responsible for many poor jobs, he declared.

ROTARY FARM PROGRAM

ORANGE.—A farmers' program was featured at a recent Orange Rotary club meeting sponsored by the agricultural extension service. Forty citrus growers lunched with the business men. W. R. Schoonover, University of California, spoke on the present surplus of lands in the State for agricultural purposes. "There is no imminent need for more land development," he said. "What we need is more efficient farming, and a reduction of acreage on crops poorly adapted to the lands used."

Communications from practical farmers, ranchers, stock raisers, poultrymen, gardeners and others engaged either in a large or small way in the vital work of food production are gladly received.

Good clear photographs of interesting farm and garden activities are always welcomed. The Los Angeles Times Farm and Orchard Magazine is the only farm journal in the West printing illustrations in the incomparable rotogravure process.

Hail, the "Cream Check!"

CALIFORNIA dairymen-producers, manufacturers and distributors, representing a division of State agriculture that has an annual valuation of $130,000,000, assembled at the Pacific Slope Dairy Show in Oakland last Thursday for their annual get-together and talk-fest.

The growth of the dairy industry in California was never sensational, but it has been steady. Cow population, over a period of years, has remained stable at around 600,000 head, yet the annual production of milk fat has continued to show a most satisfactory gain. This is because the dairy farmer has been ridding himself of his low-producing cows—his "boarder" females and his "scrub" bulls—and bringing in better animals to take their place.

No better illustration of the value of pure-bred animals in the dairy herd is offered than is to be found in Marin county in Northern California. With fewer cows than five years ago, this county, in 1926, produced 4,387,443 pounds of butter fat, an increase of 1,000,000 pounds in the annual output. Los Angeles county, where progressive milk producers are keeping pace with an ever-growing population by the introduction of better stock in dairy herds, in 1926, produced 12,716,819 pounds of butter fat, an increase of several million pounds in a five-year period, with but a slight increase in cow population. It is interesting to note that four counties in California have an annual production, measured in pounds of butter fat, of more than eight million pounds, while twenty-eight counties annually produce between one and eight million pounds of butter fat.

While the dairy cow population has steadily improved in quality in recent years, we have it from Sam H. Greene, secretary of the California Dairy Council, that the dairyman, himself, has also developed into a modern business man instead of just a plain, garden-variety of "cow milker." "The dairy farmer," says Mr. Greene, "is applying manufacturing standards to the management of his farm. He knows that he cannot make a profit from a cow that produces 180 pounds of fat a year, so he replaces her with one showing a test record of, say, 240 pounds. The 'manufacturing cost,' that is, the feed and care of the 240-pound cow, need not be more, and quite often is less, than for the low producing 'boarder.' After first cost of the better cow, the farmer gets sixty pounds more of butter fat for the same operating cost."

Regular testing is the only means the farmer has of knowing whether his cow is producing enough for a profit, and one of the bright spots in California's dairy outlook is the statement from the College of Agriculture that this State leads all others in percentage of cows under test.

Great things have been accomplished by the California dairy interests in recent years, and greater progress is just ahead. The time may not be far distant when practically every dairy cow in the State will be enrolled in some testing association, and when "boarders" and "scrubs" will be chased to the shambles and the "bologna works" by hard-working and heavy producing bovines who contribute to the "cream check."

Farmers Write Letters

The notion that farmers are too busy in the growing season to write letters and that they shove off this labor on the women of the family, is disproved by the Federal Bureau of Animal Industry. In the proportion of two to one the letters received by the bureau were from men

DOWN-TO-DATE REPORTS FROM TIMES CORRESPONDENTS

CALIPATRIA.—Harvesting of the milo maize crop of this and other sections of Imperial Valley began early in October, and will continue until the middle of December. Good crops are reported in many of the fields of this section. The Balfour-Guthrie Company, with a large acreage planted to milo this year, expects to harvest about two tons per acre, according to Supt. George Bailey. The crop on the Balfour-Guthrie ranches was of the tall variety. Two rains in the last half of October delayed both the picking and threshing of milo maize, and the grain that had been piled up had to be turned a few times to prevent it from molding and sprouting.

"Desert Corn"

Hundreds of acres of Milo Maize are now being harvested in the Imperial Valley. This fine field is on the Balfour-Guthrie ranch near Calipatria.

WALNUTS CHECKED

VENTURA.—Beginning this winter, a walnut pruning experiment on forty-four seedling walnut trees, will be made in Ventura county by W. B. Hooper, walnut extension specialist of the University of California, and Vincent F. Blanchard, Ventura county farm adviser. For the past three years records of the production of these specified trees have been kept, in order that the performance history of the trees may be available for comparison with the records after pruning. The experiment will be arranged so that for each five trees in four plots, there will be a corresponding number of checked trees. The trees under observation are in the orchard of D. A. Tobias of Saticoy.

EXPECTATIONS EXCEEDED

SANTA PAULA.—Four lemon packing houses in Santa Paula and the Santa Clara Valley, Ventura, have shipped $3,000,000 worth of fruit this year, according to reports issued by the Limoneira company, the Santa Paula Citrus Association, and Blanchard Investment Company and the Teague-McKevett Company. A price depression the first of the year forecast limited sale returns, but this condition was materially bettered as the season advanced, and lemon growers here have received unusually large payments this year, according to packing house representatives.

FROST AIDS COTTON

McFARLAND.—The first heavy frosts of this season, occurring the week before Thanksgiving, helped, rather than injured, the cotton in this district, according to A. M. Long and J. M. Terrell, managers of the Globe and Anderson Clayton gins here. Heavier frosts would do it even more good, Mr. Long says, provided the weather clears up and the sun dries out and bleaches the bolls opened up by the frost. Rain and fog have done considerable damage to cotton, says Mr. Terrell, making middling and strict low middling out of cotton which would, with good weather, have been strict middling and good middling.

MILDEW ELIMINATED

BRAWLEY.—P. A. Miller, government expert, is again in the Imperial Valley making a survey of mildew conditions. He reports that evidence of the trouble has disappeared, and that he is of the opinion it will not cause any more trouble.

RECORD WALNUT DEAL

HEMET.—The largest walnut harvest in the history of the Hemet valley is now practically complete. The total for the season is estimated at 550 tons, nearly 150 tons larger than the previous high-record crop. The packing house of the Hemet Walnut Growers' Association will handle nearly all of the present year's yield, it being estimated that less than 100 tons will be sold independently. The first pool of the season for the association growers closed shortly before Thanksgiving, and over 400 tons was handled by the packing-house in that pool. The second pool, which will wind up the season, will include approximately fifty tons of late walnuts.

FIRST NAVEL EXPORT

PORTERVILLE.—Moving from the Sunland packing house in the Vandalia district near Porterville, the first car of naval oranges for the local season went to San Francisco on the 14th of November for export. The fruit was from the Pfaffinger Wight, C. E. Robin and E. S. McClure groves, and was of high quality, both as to sugar content and color.

BIG CITRUS RETURNS

RIVERSIDE.—Riverside county citrus producing districts shipped a total of 8609 carloads of oranges, lemons and grapefruit, during the season just closed. According to records in the office of county horticultural commissioner, A. E. Bottel, compiled by Deputy Alex Hansen, this fruit was valued at $12,816,676. This estimate is for f.o.b. returns, and from this is deducted picking, hauling and packing expenses, before the growers receive their share. However, the entire amount is distributed in Riverside county.

Plant 'Em Right, Treat 'Em Right
And Your Trees Will Treat You Right

"Planting more trees, Bill? Buying spades, eh? I can tell you of a book you can get free that will be worth more to you than a carload of spades. Write to the Hercules people for a copy of Land Development with Hercules Dynamite, and then you'll only need a few shovels to take out the loose dirt.

"That book'll tell you how to plant trees the modern way. And it isn't only time and labor you save by blasting with Hercules Dynamite. You save trees; you don't have so many first-year losses. You get sturdier trees that bear earlier.

"Dynamite loosens the soil, so it can store more water. Water's necessary to dissolve the plant food so the roots can suck it up. When you dig the holes for young trees with a spade you make an earthen jar with hard, smooth sides that the young roots can't penetrate. You don't give your trees half a chance, putting them in holes like that. I've tried the old-fashioned way and the Hercules way and I know. Better write for that book today."

Fine Birds on Display at Norco Show

NORCO.—Poultry and rabbit fanciers from several sections of Southern California gathered here November 18 to 20, for the first annual Norco Poultry and Rabbit show. Entries in all classes were large, and it is estimated that more that 1000 individual birds and rabbits were in competition. All standard breeds were reprecented. The judges were W. M. Wise, for poultry, and George Greene for rabbits.

In addition to awards in open classes, the following special awards were made in the poultry department: Best display by novice, H. C. Phelps of Norco; best utility hen, H. C. Phelps; best S. C. White Leghorn pen, James W. King of Fontana; best R. I. Red male and best male in show, E. A. Weave of Pasadena; best Barred Rock in show, F. M. Cates of Corona; best Black Sumatra female, James W. King; best Leghorn in show and best S. C. White Leghorn male, Mrs. A. E. Brix of Fontana; best S. C. White Leghorn female, George E. Smallwood of Upland; best Orpington, best female in show and best bird in show, C. H. Dickenson of South Pasadena; best bantam, Philip Dion of Norco; best duck, O. H. Fett of Norco; best turkey, W. B. Dean of Norco; best R. I. Red pen C. G. Wheeler of Upland; best display of White Rocks, Griffin Heights pountry ranch of Little Rock; best display of Red Leghorns, L. N. Kirm of Upland; best display of Anconas, Mrs. Van Eaton of Fontana; best display of White Minorcas, C. T. Sullivan of Maywood; best R. I. Red female, A. H. Heinemann of Orange; best display by single exhibitor, Griffin Heights poultry ranch of Little Rock.

All of the more popular breeds of meat and fur rabbits were represented by fanicers from the Norco area, and from points as far distant as Riverside and SanDiego. In addition to regular placings in open classes, the following special awards were made: Best buck in show, Angora Wool farms, Monrovia; best doe in show, Westwood Rabbitry, El Monte; best English Angora buck, Angora Wool farms; best American White doe, Harold D. Smith, Riverside; best White New Zealand doe, Whitcomb's Bunnyville farm, San Diego; best White New Zealand buck, Whitcomb's Bunnyville farm; best Chinchilla buck, San Gabriel Fur farms, San Gabriel; best Havana buck, Cherokee Rabbitry, San Diego; best Sandy Gray Flemish doe, Westwood Rabbitry, El Monte; best Light Gray Flemish buck, Westwood Rabbitry; best doe and litter, Dr. L. G. Lewis, Norco; best Himalyan doe, Franklin Hall, Ontario; best Himalayan buck, Thomas H. Johns, Riverside; best Flemish, Westwood Rabbitry; best display by novice, Elmer S. Easterbrook of Reseda; best display of American Whites, Harold D. Smith of Riverside; best display of New Zealand Reds, Albert M. Davis of Fontana; best display of Chinchillas, San Gabriel Fur Farms; best display in show, Whitcomb's Bunnyville farms.

High School Boy Makes Money on Turkeys

BAKERSFIELD.—As part of his agricultural education in the Kern County Union High School, James Hare joined the agriculture club and entered a contest in raising turkeys for profit. Here is the story, in his own words, of how he cleared $319.40 from nine turkey hens:

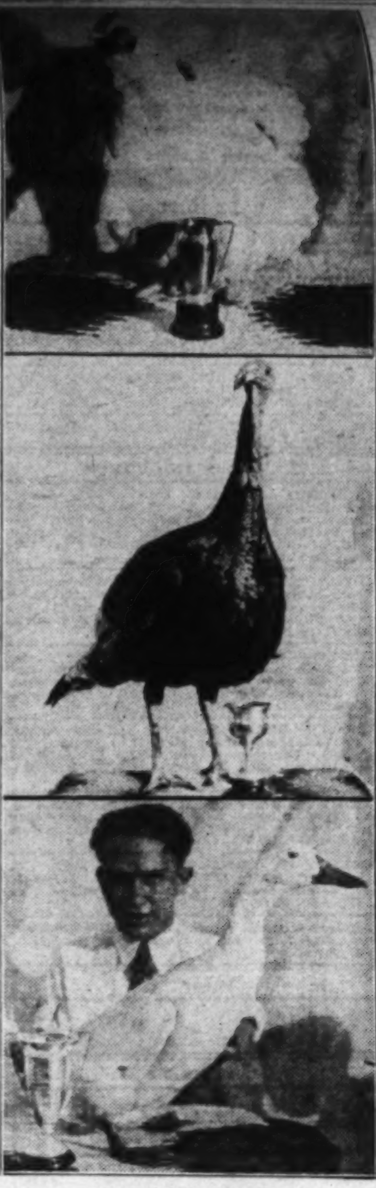
"In February, 1926, I bought four hens and one gobbler from Whit C. Barber, along with five hens and one gobbler from my father. The first setting of eggs hatched March 28. I used hens to hatch the eggs and brood the young turks until they were old enough to roost. By the middle of May I had seventy-four young turks, which were fed on alfalfa greens and growing mash. After they became older they were fed equal parts of corn, wheat and barley.

"From March to August the young turkeys ate 1284 pounds of feed, costing $32 during this time. From August to the end of December, the turkeys consumed 2410 pounds of grain, at a cost of $45.30, with only twenty-seven hours' attention during this time. This makes a total of $77.50 feed cost, and 212 hours at 20 cents, making the total cost of raising the turkeys, including green feed, $136.70.

"By Christmas time I had sold 740 pounds of turkeys at an average of 45 cents a pound. The turkeys sold for $336.10. My father bought two gobblers and eight hens for $80, making the total receipts $456.10. Subtracting the cost of raising, this leaves a profit of $319.40.

"Reviewing the above figures, I find that it takes approximately 4.9 pounds of grain to produce one pound of turkey. Also, it takes $0.184 to produce one pound of turkey under my conditions."

Farmers must use methods which will decrease the cost of producing crops without decreasing the yield.



Some Norco Winners

Southland poultry fanciers took some good birds to the second annual Norco poultry and rabbit show, held recently in that community. At the top is the best bird in the show, a white Orpington hen owned by C. H. Dickenson of South Pasadena. The best turkey in the show, center, is owned by W. B. Dean of Norco, and the best Pekin drake, bottom, is owned by O. H. Fett of Norco.

Bees and Poultry Kept in Orange Grove

GLENDORA.—B. C. Watkins of Glendora bought a small orange grove a little over two years ago and went in for bees and chickens. The orange trees were small, and he did not care to cut them down, so he built his chicken houses so that they would fit in among the trees.

There he runs about 1500 laying hens. The orange trees furnish necessary shade, and seem to be all the better off for having chickens running over the ground. All are in excellent condition and have been setting a fine crop of fruit.

A dozen stands of bees furnish Mr. Watkins with all the honey he wants. Greens are grown in parts of the grove not used for chicken yards and there is also room left for a thriving home vegetable garden.

Uncle Ab says that wrinkles are no disgrace; and the right ones are decorations.

He Finds Poultry Yard Beats Lemon Grove

PASADENA.—M. C. Hammack, on graduating from the city schools of Los Angeles, decided that he would ask nothing better from life than to own an apple orchard in Northern Oregon. Accordingly, he went north, but after a short stay in that country, came to the conclusion that he would revise his plans and return to Southern California to grow citrus fruit. He was fortunate in finding exactly what he sought in a five-acre lemon grove. After the deal had gone through, he was surprised to find that the former owner had sold the place solely for the purpose of getting sufficient money to go into the poultry business. This started Mr. Hammack thinking that there might be something in poultry, and he finally purchased a few hens and turned them loose in his grove.

That was fourteen years ago, and from this small beginning Mr. Hammack has built up a thriving poultry business. At his present location, 1416 North Allen avenue, trapnesting and selective breeding are most emphatically in order. Fifty thousand baby chicks were hatched last year, in relays of 12,000 at a time, in a season that lasted from January until June. This was an increase of 10,000 over the previous year, but the owner says the quota fell below the demand. This year the entire output has been sold out in advance.

Imperial Valley to "Strut" Midwinter Products at Annual Fair

By IVA M. McFADDEN

BRAWLEY.—Imperial Valley is once more ready to open its winter garden for the inspection of the world. On December 7, and continuing until the 11th, the Midwinter Fair at Brawley will again place on exhibit those exceptional out-of-season products, which have given the valley a unique place in agriculture. Vegetables are grown nowhere else in the United States with the same profusion and success at this time of year, and it is the aim of the Brawley fair to make winter-gardening the emphatic note of the exposition. The weather has been particularly favorable for high production this year, and the exhibits should be at their best.

Vegetable growing and winter gardening are, however, but one angle. Everything pertaining to desert farming will receive its due space in the ample exhibition rooms.

The big main tent, some 560 feet long and 100 feet wide, will house the exhibits, with the exception of live stock and poultry. The citrus industry will undoubtedly come second only in interest to winter vegetables. Oranges, tangerines and grapefruit will make a splendid showing. In permanent crops, grapefruit commands the greatest interest in Imperial Valley.

Another typically desert exhibit will be of dates. Imperial Valley is growing a great many fine dates, and can profitably grow more of them. Pomegranates will add color and interest to the displays, and the sparkling juice of this fruit will be available to those who wish to know this new beverage. Cotton, hay, grain, and all those staple products will make their less spectacular entries, and that new and interesting crop, rice, will claim a place for itself in desert agriculture.

Farm bureau booths aand chambers of commerce will emphasize the various centers of activity throughout the valley. The younger members of the community also are coming to the front more than ever before this year. school exhibits, Boy Scout contributions, and 4H clubs exhibits will occupy a prominent place. Domestic arts will attract the feminine eye; an automobile show, together with tractor and farm implement exhibits, will command attention; and all the various merchants' and manufacturers' exhibits will add to the profusion of interest throughout the great main tent.

THE "LIVE STOCK"

Poultry and rabbits are to be housed in a separate space, this tent being about 500 feet long. Poultry has always been a big feature of the fair, for it was the original small poultry show that gave the impetus to the large exposition that the Midwinter fair has become. Much local poultry will be on exhibit, and many entries from the outside will also be in evidence. E. S. Hammond of Riverside, long superintendent of the Southern California Fair poultry department, will have charge of poultry. Rabbits are really just making their entrance in the valley classic, but they will be present about 300 strong. This exhibit will be of great interest, particularly to local people, who have much to learn of the rabbit industry. Pigeons and guinea pigs will share a space in this same tent.

The live-stock barns are to be filled to capacity. Many herds of cattle, sheep and hogs are part of the valley's assets, and these will be well represented. There will also be stock from other parts of the Southwest. Two cars of hogs are coming from Jacksonville, Fla., to add their bit to the fair.

All kinds of diverting side exhibits may be expected, such as the "pet hobby" show, in which anything goes that has the name of a pet. From crickets to goats, and from poly-wogs to ponies, this show promises all manner of surprises. A harmonica contest every night will add tuneful local color to the entertainment.

Prizes in money and in specials are better than ever this year. Eleven silver trophies are to be awarded. Entertainment is featured for all spare hours.

The time of year should show Imperial Valley's winter climate to advantage, and there are two new hostelries at Brawley to take care of guests, something that should serve to attract many visitors from outside the valley.

Chino Valley Has Good Production Year

CHINO.—Agricultural production of Chino Valley for the 1927 season has been above the average and as a whole, favorable conditions have prevailed throughout the growing season. This, in brief, is a summary of the annual report of Calvin C. Delphey, deputy county horticulture inspector for Chino district. Rainfall for the past year was considerably above normal, as over 25 inches of rainfall fell during the year, leaving the land in good condition for spring crops, and irrigation was not practiced as early in the season

Mr. Delphey says in his report: "Chino Valley is becoming more and more a vegetable-growing community, producing a considerable portion of the produce going to the Los Angeles market. We had an exceptionally large crop of walnuts and peaches this season, the largest crop of walnuts, in fact, in the history of the valley. Other crops such as alfalfa have decreased in acreage, making way in several instances for truck.

"Dairying is by far the most important industry in the valley. Twenty-five thousand gallons of milk are hauled daily to the large cities. Also, there are several retail routes which supply milk to neighboring towns. We have some of the finest dairy herds in the State right in Chino Valley. This is due to plenty of feed and a good market in the larger places. Chino district includes about ninety square miles of territory."

According to Mr. Delphey alfalfa averaged five tons to the acre this year. At present there are 2847 acres of bearing walnut trees and 2671 acres nonbearing walnuts. Prevailing varieties are Placentia, Eureka and Ehrhardt. Estimated walnut tonnage this year is 1500 tons. The peach crop was above normal and of excellent quality. There are 135 acres of apples in the valley with an estimated production of 38,000 boxes.

The greatest potato acreage in the history of the valley was planted in 1927, which is also true of the sweet corn acreage. The sugar beet harvest was shipped to Oxnard to be processed. Ninety acres are devoted to the raising of various kinds of nursery stock. The crop of beans was harvested from 1689 acres. Pumpkins and squash went mostly to canneries. A 640-acre crop of tomatoes was grown in 1927. Several growers raised twenty tons to the acre, and one grower had gross returns well over $3000 per acre on a ten-acre tract.

Madera Quail Preserve Is Established

FRESNO.—Nearly 9000 acres north of the San Joaquin River and west of the Golden State highway, in Madera county, have been established as a protected area for quail and doves, as the result of efforts by the Eastin farm center and C. P. Noren, of Gregg. An extended study revealed that quail and doves, instead of being undesirable on the farm, are invaluable as enemies of weeds and insects, doing a vast amount of good in the reduction of these pests.

Six hundred "no hunting" signs have been posted on the ranches in the district, and more are being placed to insure the safety of the birds. This policy will be followed for several years, or until the birds become as numerous as is desirable, when the area will again be thrown open to hunters for a short period, according to Mr. Noren.

If you did not exhibit at your fair this year, make plans to be among the winners next fall.

Southland Dairy Herds Win at Oakland

OAKLAND.—Southern California breeders, with a notable list of entries, won a creditable share of the awards on the seventh annual Pacific Slope Dairy show, held in Oakland November 14 to 19. The show was called the best ever held in Oakland, both in point of quality and quantity of entries. Only California dairy breeders were represented in the competition.

Among the exhibitors in various breeds were the following:

Holsteins—El Colmo Rancho of Norwalk; F. F. Pellessier & Son of Whittier; Walter S. Thompson of Burbank; Mrs. Stenzel of San Lorenzo; Tulare county breeder's herd, with individual animals from several breeders and the Los Angeles county breeders herd, representing a number of breeders.

Jerseys—La Lomita Rancho of Palms (F. P. Bain); Mayme P. Cory of Berkeley; Edna L. Knicht of Willows; San Luis Obispo county farm bureau community herd; and the Humboldt County Dairymen's Association. The Humboldt county entries included calf club animals.

Guernseys—Etta H. Merritt of Oakland; A. B. Humphrey of Escalon; and the Troutmere Guernsey farm of La Honda. The Santa Monica Dairy Company of Venice, was represented by one entry in Guernseys.

There was an excellent Jersey showing, entries from Ferdinand R. Bain's La Lomita rancho winning a large share of championships and awards. The Bain establishment was represented by thirty head of fine show animals. The San Luis Obispo Farm Bureau community herd, including several head from the W. R. Hearst ranch at San Simeon, and the Humboldt County Dairymen's Association, also showed some excellent individuals in the Jersey division, and won a share of the awards.

Holstein honors were divided between El Colmo Rancho and the Pellessier herd, with other entries winning minor awards. John B. Irwin of Minnesota, judged the Holsteins.

On Thursday afternoon, November 17, following the placing of ribbons in the show, a large number of visiting breeders attended the F. Stenzel dispersal sale of Holsteins. Among the buyers were the Los Angeles County farm, whose purchase of King Pieterje Ormsby Piebe 39th, gave them the outstanding bull of the sale, and the Rosemary Farms, who purchased the three-year-old bull, King Pieterje Ormsby Piebe Jewel. A. M. Dunn of Saugus, was the heaviest buyer of cows, adding some very fine milkers to his already fine Holstein herd.

Fat Stock Week to Be Stellar Event

Plans for the Christmas Fat Stock Week, opening tomorrow and to last until December 10 at the Los Angeles Union Stock yards, are complete. Indications are that the event will be one of the most interesting live-stock exhibitions ever held in the Southland. Interest in the various departments is high, and a large number of entries of fat stock have been received from Southern California feeders and from stockmen in neighboring areas and other States. The show will be strictly a fat stock and carlot affair, and will be a demonstration of the kind of fancy beef, pork and mutton, that can be raised in the Southland and other parts of the Southwest and which is in demand on the Los Angeles market.

She's Veteran Milker

This 17-year-old Holstein, owned by A. S. Goode of Bakersfield, is showing the youngsters in the herd a few things in heavy milk production. At the age of 12 years, she led all cows in the Kern County Cow Testing Association with a production of 612 pounds of butter fat, and she's still going strong.

Cash prizes and special premiums amounting to more than $2000 are being offered in the various classes. Among the special awards is a prize of $125 offered by the Federal Cold Storage company of Los Angeles, for the best carload of fat hogs grown any place west of the Mississippi River. The Cudahy Packing Company is offering a special premium of $100 for the best carload of hogs raised in California. These carlots are to be judged from the packer's standpoint.

C. B. Harris, well known Hereford breeder, is offering a beautiful silver trophy for the best carload of feeder steers, any age. Attractive cash prizes are also offered in this class.

Special silver trophies are offered in the Junior live-stock judging contest by Washburn and Condon, the Southwest Commission Company and the Los Angeles Union Stock Yards Company.

Among the entries already made are fat cattle by William Briggs & Son of Dixon; baby beef by W. E. Gird of Bonsall; baby beef by M. P. Fisher of Yuma, Arizona; baby beef by W. D. Longyear of Los Angeles; fat yearlings by H. A. Baldwin of Pleasanton; fat hogs by Crescent Creamery of Los Angeles; fat wethers and lambs by Metzgar & Vaughn of Dixon; three carloads of fat hogs by Earl Holliday of Tipton; two carloads of fat lambs and one carload of fat steers by Joseph E. Cole of Mt. Pleasant, Utah.

Entries have also been promised from the Tejon ranch, near Bakersfield; the William R. Hearst ranch in San Luis Obispo county; the Doheny ranch in Santa Barbara county; the Tagus ranch of Tulare; the Loveland Rancho of Brawley, T. J. Murphy ranch of Utah and the Diblee estate, Lompoc, and several entries of sheep from Idaho and hogs from New Mexico are assured. Indications are that fully 500 individual animals, in addition to the carlots, will be on exhibition. Buyers from all sections of the Southwest, and from various railroads and hostelries will be in attendance. The champion fat steer at last year's show sold for $1 a pound, and it is expected that this year's price will equal and perhaps excell that figure.

T. E. Johnson, assistant manager of the Los Angeles Union Stock Yards Company, is secretary of the show. He is being assisted by Cecelia G. Cravens, secretary of the Southern California Fair at Riverside. Various committees have charge of the different departments of the show.

For An Ambitious Dairyman

This beautiful young bull should be a great profit-maker. He is really one of the finest individuals we have had this year, straight, symmetrical, and well marked. Out of a cow with a C.T.A. record of 636 lbs. of fat made in the string with 200 others. She is a large cow with a good strong constitution and an unusually fine udder. The sire of the calf is also a first-class individual. He is a paternal brother of the first cow of any breed to make a 1500-lb. butter record and his dam was a very high producer. This bull's daughters have been cup winners in the last three County Dairy Cow Contests.

Madera Dairymen Oust "Scrub" Bulls

FRESNO.—To the Madera County Cow-Testing Association, operating in the Chowchilla community north of Fresno, goes the honor of being the first 100 per cent dairy organization in the State in which all member herds are headed by pure-bred sires. During the year just closed by the association, twenty-three member herds were sired by pure-bred bulls, while the nine remaining herds were headed by grade animals. At the annual meeting held recently, owners of the nine grade herds were presented with pure-bred bulls in exchange for the grade sires in use, thereby making the association a strictly pure-bred organization. According to United States Department of Agriculture records, only two other counties in the entire United States have completely banned "scrub" bulls.

More than 100 prizes were awarded at the annual meeting for high cows, high herds and other distinctions brought about through exceptional efforts on the part of dairymen during the year. The 908 dairy cows in the Madera association produced an average of 295 pounds of butter fat each during the year, according to K. A. Grube, official tester. The total production was 7,433,768 pounds of milk and 271,069 pounds of butter fat. The average test was 3:65 per cent.

The man who is careful as to how he spends his time and his money has safe guides to success.

Former Attorney Makes Poultry Pay

LA CANADA.—Back in Nebraska, Charles C. McElroy was a successful lawyer. After coming to Southern California, however, he decided to go into the poultry business and "live out of doors." He found a small tract of land lying on a gentle slope on Hill avenue, and in February, 1926, when he had his brooder and poultry houses ready for their reception, he bought two thousand White Leghorn baby chicks. From these he raised eight hundred pullets. Following the practice of the breeder from whom he bought his pedigreed chicks, he discarded the cockerels, killing them outright just as soon as they began to make their identity known. He says he is positive that in doing this he saved not merely money, but a great deal of valuable time and space that were better applied to the development of his pullets.

Working on the same principle, he has raised one thousand additional pullets this year, and so has a flock of eighteen hundred laying hens and pullets. All eggs are sold at wholesale, so he has never been bothered about finding a reliable cash market. Because of this he expects to bring his flock as quickly as possible to the three thousand mark, as this is the number which he feels he can most efficiently care for on his acre and a quarter. While his land cost a great deal more than might ordinarily seem justified for commercial egg production, Mr. McElroy has found that practically all of it can be utilized for buildings and poultry yards, and that only a small portion of it need be used for growing green feed. He secures lawn clippings from the extensive grounds immediately about his home, and it is only in winter, when the growth is inclined to be somewhat slow, that he finds it necessary to depend upon a patch of home-grown green stuff.

In the six large units, that now comprise his present plant, several interesting items are to be noted. Chief among these are outside drinking troughs that, accessible only from the inside of the houses, are kept in a state of constant cleanliness. Each house is divided into sections holding not more than two hundred birds in each pen, and each section has an outside entrance opening directly upon a runway. Small yards are favored, and in these yards, which have the top as well as the sides enclosed with wire, the lower board has been nailed four inches from the ground. In scratching about in their yards, which are on a southward slope, it quite naturally follows that much of the litter is cast out into the runway, making it a simple process to quickly clean the yards by sweeping out the remainder and assembling it in piles for future use.

TO IMPROVE HAY

MESA (Ariz.)—Arizona hay growers have found rather poor marketing conditions during the past season. They are left with a large stock that may not be called upon by sheepmen this winter, as range conditions are good and the prospects for unfenced winter feed are of the best. Some of the poorest hay has found a market as fertilizer in Southern California citrus groves. A very definite move is now under way toward the production of a higher grade, as this is always in demand in Los Angeles and other cities at very remunerative figures. Some farmers in this district now are producing "rabbit hay," by care in cutting in a greener stage and forking at night. Attempts also are being made to secure baling at night, or in the early morning. Thus there is less shattering, something that diminishes very materially the sales value of even the best quality. This is receiving close attention from the Roosevelt Hay Growers, which has very materially curtailed the baling of off-grade hay. Its president, D. G. Spilsbury, states his belief that all the poorer grades should be held for cattle and sheep feeding, and only the higher grades shipped.

Prize Winner

This is Utah Colonel, a pure-bred Duroc Jersey yearling boar owned by J. H. Toomer of Morgan, Utah. He was grand champion at the Salt Lake City Live-stock show when he was six months old, and won blues and championships in yearling classes at other exhibitions this season.

MOJAVE'S "HIDDEN WATERS"

This rig is being succesfully used on other neighboring ranches, and in certain instances excellent wells have been obtained that are said to throw as high as 200 inches with an eight-inch pump. In other instances horizontal wells are in use, these being constructed of forty-two-inch concrete infiltration pipe. A notable example of this type of well is found on the Helendale ranch.

The soils of the valley consist of alluvial materials eroded from the mountains and redistributed in the basin. They vary from sandy loams of silty texture on the benches to heavy loams on the bottoms. These loams allow free percolation of water, do not bake or puddle and are well adapted to cultural operations. Alfalfa, grain sorghums, silage corn, sudan grass and deciduous fruits are the chief crops adapted to this section, and are the best suited to climatic conditions. Neither alkali nor hardpan is found in sufficient quantity in most places to be a factor.

The climate is that of a general farming country. With an altitude of 2500 feet, a definite dormant period for vegetation is established. There are night frosts for several months in the winter time, while the summer days are hot and the nights generally cool.

NEW ERA COMING

Alfalfa produced in the Mojave River Valley is a fine stemmed, heavily leafed and bright colored crop. It brings a premium on the Los Angeles market, having for the past seven years brought an average of $25 a ton f.o.b. the loading stations in the valley. Yields have been heavy as a rule and, properly handled, the crop has proven long lived and dependable. The McNew Ranch reports one stand that has been cropped continuously for thirty years.

From the standpoint of economic production, ranchers in the Mojave River Valley are unanimous in their belief that conditions there for general farming are excellent. The good crops of high-grade alfalfa, silage corn, sorghums and grain that are being produced lead the writer to believe that the area's latest bid for an increased production of dairy products will meet with success.

From an economic point of view, the production of the milk and cream that supplies the Los Angeles trade has been for the most part a mistake. A very large percentage of this supply for the largest city of the West has come from corral dairies situated in the suburban territory contiguous to the metropolitan area. Instead of producing this milk and cream upon the farms and ranches which grow the roughage, and at least a portion of the supply of concentrates fed to the cows, the dairymen have brought feed grown at a distance, shipped to the metropolitan markets and passed through several hands. There are several profits between the grower and the feeder of dairy stock under such a system. The feed itself is fed to the cows by highly paid employees, whose wage demand must be necessarily fixed by the metropolitan scale of living, and in corrals located upon ground of high rental value.

Every item that enters into the cost of production under these conditions is controlled and fixed upon a high scale by the metropolitan contact, with the inevitable effect upon prices to the consumer. Continuous subdivision of suburban areas around Los Angeles and cutting up of larger ranches everywhere near the metropolitan area is crowding out the close-in dairies. At the same time the demand for an increased supply of milk and cream keeps up. A movement to establish dairies in the outlying country, where the feed can be economically produced and where there is some room to turn around, is the natural consequence of all this.

With excellent transportation facilities available either by train or truck and with good growing conditions, the Mojave River Valley is sure to attract the attention of many dairymen from this time forth.

Covina Horse a Star

R. A. Condee, president of the California State Board of Agriculture, now on a tour of the United States to visit with State fair officials in an effort to assemble new ideas for the annual California State Fair, writes from Kansas City, Mo., that the recent American Royal Live Stock Show was one of the best expositions of its kind ever held in the country. Mr. Condee reports that Nancy Highland, a three-gaited saddle horse, owned by Miss Maud Fawn Banks of Covina., Cal., was one of the stars of the Kansas City horse show, winning the $2000 stake on the closing night of the event. The horse was ridden by Roy L. Davis, proprietor of the Bel-Air stables of Los Angeles.

LETTUCE QUALITY GOOD

McFARLAND.—The first local lettuce of the present season was brought in a few days ago by A. W. Cavanagh, from his ranch south of town. The lettuce was of noticably fine quality, and was bought eagerly by local housewives.

To Study Citriculture at Covina School

Citrus growers of Los Angeles county and vicinity have the privilege of attending a short course in citrus culture at Covina, December 5 to 10, and, according to M. B. Rounds, representing the agricultural extension service of the University of California in Los Angeles county, those availing themselves of the opportunity will be well repaid.

This is the second extension school for citrus growers to be held in Los Angeles county, the first in the State having been held at Whittier, the fall of 1924.

Growers attending the school will have the opportunity of listening to lectures on all phases of citriculture. The fundamentals of successful culture will be taken up and thoroughly discussed, irrigation, fertilization, pest and disease control, cultivation and orchard heating all coming in for consideration. Much new and important information is available, it is announced, and new problems pertaining to the industry, will be gone into. Growers will have an opportunity to bring up any of their individual problems. A nominal registration fee of $1 is charged.

The program for the week is as follows:

Monday, December 5

9:00-9:15—Introductory statement, by W. R. Schoonover.
9:15-10:00—Status of the citrus industry in Los Angeles county, by M. B. Rounds.
10:00-11:00—Fundamentals of successful citriculture, by W. R. Schoonover.
11:00-12:00—The nutritional relation in the citrus tree, by R. W. Hodgson.
1:30-2:30—Fundamentals of soil fertility, by W. R. Schoonover.
2:30-3:00—Discussion.
3:00-4:00—The water relation in the citrus tree, by R. W. Hodgson.
4:00-4:30—Discussion.

Tuesday, December 6

9:00-10:00—The movement of water in soils as related to irrigation practice and distribution of salts, by W. R. Schoonover.
10:00-10:30—Discussion.
10:30-11:30—The fertilization of citrus orchards, (Part One,) by R. W. Hodgson.
11:30-12:00—Discussion.

The "Sweet Logan"

The new "Young Berry," now growing commercially in several districts, is similar to the Loganberry, but sweeter. It has been termed the "sweet Logan." This picture shows the fruit of the Young Berry, a fruiting stem, petiole of leaf, internode on cone, and half of a leaflet. The flowers are a little larger than those of the Loganberry.

Four Citrus Concerns Elect Officers

REDLANDS.—A. M. Patterson of this city has been elected president of the Highlands Orange Association for the coming year, and J. H. Jeffers has been named manager. W. H. Roddick is the new vice-president, and G. C. Stockton, C. B. Tyler, M. H. Melchoir and James Millar are on the board of directors. The company packed 187 cars of fruit during the year. The total net amount paid to the growers was $198,874.

W. J. Barnhill has recently been elected president of the Colton Fruit Exchange, a position long held by his father, the late James Barnhill. Earl F. Van Leuven is the vice-president. The company shipped 180 cars during the year, with returns of close to $200,000.

L. W. Butterfield, president; H. H. Ford, Jr., vice-president; E. W. Ginzel, secretary, and Fred Palmtage, manager, are the new officers of the Crafton Mutual Association. The company shipped 178 cars during the past year, and secured over $200,000 for the growers. Much new equipment has been added to the packing-house.

At the annual meeting of the Redlands-Orangedale Groves, Inc., it was reported that 325 cars were shipped by the association during the past season, with returns to the growers of $350,000, and a pack refund of about $26,000. Prices were 50 cents a box higher than for last season. A. Gregory is the president; H. L. Knight, vice-president, and V. L. Gregory, secretary and manager of this association.

Newer Berry Varieties for Fruit Garden

By H. M. BUTTERFIELD
College of Agriculture, University of California

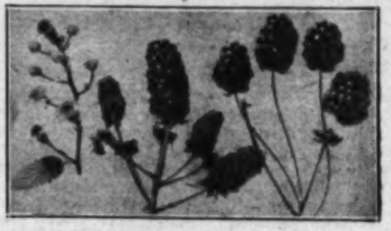
Home gardeners as well as commercial fruit growers are generally interested in new introductions and improvements on present varieties for planting. The college of agriculture of the University of California has been conducting preliminary tests on some of the newer varieties of blackberries and dewberries, and can report something regarding their merits.

The Young berry is now growing commercially in several districts. It is, in all essential points, like the Loganberry, but under favorable conditions is probably a little sweeter. It has been termed the "sweet Logan" for this reason. The druplets of the berry are not as even as on the Logan, and the color is more like that of a very ripe Loganberry. Distribution of the Young berry is being made through the United States Department of Agriculture, and it can be purchased from nurseries as well. While the variety does not seem likely to replace the Loganberry, it will probably be planted extensively, and should be very desirable for fresh fruit and for home or commercial plantings.

The Thornless Austin dewberry is entirely thornless, even to the suckers from the roots, which is not the case with suckers from broken Cory Thornless roots. Growers should find this berry fully equal to the other varieties of dewberries, because in trials the plants have been vigorous, free from disease and from the redberry mite, and fruitful. The canes often grow as long as 15 feet when the plants are well watered. The variety comes to us from Texas. It has already produced some thornless seedlings when crossed with the Cory.

A new English blackberry is Sherlock Jr. Tests have shown the berries to be firm, and they hold their color well when canned. The plants are very similar to the well-known Himalaya, but seem to be a little more slender and the berries are possibly smaller. Cultural conditions may, however, affect the size. The berries ripen late, along with the Himalaya. It remains to be seen whether the variety will have any important advantage over the Himalaya.

Other new berries being tested by the college include Edward Langley, Pollock and Common British. It is very doubtful if any of these berries will replace the ones already established, but they may add variety to our collections. What is needed is not more varieties, but varieties with larger, firmer, better colored, and better flavored fruit. Many people would like to have a berry the size of the Cory Thornless, with the flavor of the Himalaya. Several seedlings from a cross between the Cory and the Himalaya will bear in 1928, and we will see what the results are. There are also thornless seedlings from crossing the Cory with the Thornless Austin, which will likely bear next year. Still other seedling crosses are growing, such as crosses between the Young berry and the wild Pacific Coast dewberry, between the Himalaya and the wild dewberry, between the Cory and the Loganberry, and between the Loganberry and the wild dewberry. Results ought to be interesting at least. Reports of these results will be given from time to time.



New Berry Varieties

The Thornless Austin, shown at the left, averages about four berries to the cluster, and has very long pedicels. The Cory Thornless blackberry, center, is distinguished by the long fruit. On the right is the Burbank Thornlessin florescence to show habit or arrangement of cluster.

Certain new species of berries are being grown, particularly for breeding purposes. Rubus fraxinifolius, a very ornamental berry plant with beautiful red raspberry-like fruits, thrives in California, and bears heavily, but the fruit is quite bitter. If a cross could do away with this bitterness, and add a little more juice while preserving all the other fine characteristics, we would have a very acceptable berry. The Andes Berry (R. glaucus) is growing well in California, but is slow to fruit. It may in time fruit fairly well, or possibly we can get good seedling crosses. These are possibilities which may interest berry growers.

GOOD ASPARAGUS DEAL

BRAWLEY.—Growers and distributors report a most profitable asparagus deal this season. More than 14,000 crates were shipped from the Brawley district.

New Cotton Picker

A newly perfected picking machine, developed, its sponsors say, especially for California conditions, is being assembled by the Gladiator Tractor Company of Los Angeles. The picker is of the suction type and self-propelling. Eight men, each with a tube, and each picking a row, move ahead of the machine. The cotton is pulled from the boll and carried to a cleaner at the rear of the outfit, where trash and dirt are eliminated, the cleaned product being then deposited in a sack. A patented direct drive principle permits a variation of speed in the movement of the machine while the suction fan speed remains constant. The machine is said to turn readily "on its heel." George J. Zeigler of Los Angeles and W. M. Wisdom, an Arizona cotton expert, were two of the engineers working out the plans for the machine while Everett B. Sawyer, a Nebraska manufacturer, has handled the financing. The machine has recently been tested in field pickings in the San Joaquin Valley.

HEAVY TURKEY SHIPMENTS

BRAWLEY.—Eleven and one-half tons of dressed turkeys, or more than 1500 birds, were shipped from Brawley to Los Angeles and San Diego for the Thanksgiving market, according to express company figures. Shipments of live birds were also larger than usual this year.

Association to Handle Hemet 'Cots

HEMET.—After months of delay, marked by many meetings and nearly continuous negotiations between the growers' committee and various marketing agencies, the apricot growers of the Hemet district reached an agreement with the California Prune and Apricot Growers' Association the day before Thanksgiving as the result of which the big majority of the large dried apricot holdings in this district will be marketed through the association. The growers believe that the action will result in better net returns for their dried fruit

Over 1300 tons of dried apricots have been held in storage on the ranches of the valley since the end of the 'cot season this past summer, the growers waiting an upward trend of the market, which failed to put in its expected appearance. About 8000 green tons of apricots were dried here this season, and of the resulting 1600 tons of dried fruit, only about 300 tons had been sold up to the time the agreement was made whereby the State association will handle the crop.

MOJAVE'S "HIDDEN WATERS"

course is entirely underground, the only evidence to mark its course being the splendid growth of willows that receives their life from the subterranean stream. Mojave River Valley is really the eastern end of Antelope Valley, and the Mojave River flows out to the northward through it for a distance of approximately ninety miles.

UNSEEN RESOURCES

Probably one of the best examples of a self-storing river in the entire Southwest is this stream we call the Mojave. Its immediate channel, geologists say, consists of a series of gravel "storages" or subsurface basins, of which there are nine in number, impounded by the uplifting of rock or other impervious barriers across the river channel. These subsurface storages absorb the entire run-off of the watershed of the river during a normal year, and it is only in years of unusual precipitation in the headwaters of the stream that a surface flow extends beyond the sixth basin. Rising in a high mountain watershed situated upon the north slope of the San Bernardino Mountains, this river annually discharges large quantities of water during the flood periods upon the deep gravels of the basins, saturating each in turn and then overflowing upon the gravels of the next lower basin, the gravels acting as giant sponges.

The Mojave River is the only drainage outlet of the Antelope Valley which is entirely surrounded by high granite mountains. The direct flow of the main stream is largely supplemented by the discharge of many smaller streams flowing from the mountains to the west of the watershed, and finding the Mojave River through underground channels. The size of these underground storage basins can only be estimated. During 1924, said to have been the driest year in a period of seventy years, the water table in the gravels of the Lower Helendale Basin, the third and largest basin below the point where the river emerges from the mountains, stood at four and one-half feet below the surface of the bottom lands bordering the river channel, and but a few inches below the surface of the main channel. (We are again quoting geologists, who presumably were giving an uncolored report.) It has been estimated that at least 150,000 acre feet of water annually finds its way through this "bottleneck" of the valley.

The various basins have been defined as follows: The Verde, or Upper Victorville Basin, which extends eighteen miles above Victorville; the Oro Grande, or Lower Victorville Basin, extending a distance of six miles below the gorge at Victorville, where the stream has all of the earmarks of a full-fledged river on the surface; the Helendale Basin, eighteen miles below Oro Grande; another in the Barstow area, defined as the Hinkley-Barstow Basin, and other basins of lesser importance pass in the Daggett and Newberry districts. A study of these basins has led some investigators to believe that there may be enough water concealed about the unseen parts of the rather unimpressive Mojave River to bring as much as 100,000 acres under an intensive system of irrigation.

MANY GOOD WELLS

To harness this stream for the production of crops is, to judge by the experience of some who have attempted it, a perfectly feasible undertaking. In some sections above Victorville many wells are artesian. Especially is this true on the big Verde ranch. Quite a number of concrete caisson-type wells have been successfully sunk in the valley, some of these extending to near-by bench lands, and an abundant supply of water has been had for the cost of pumping, with a short lift.

On the Merrill & Blacet Ranch at Helendale a rig was designed and placed in operation that utilizes an "orange-peel" bucket used for excavation work within the caisson. This power bucket operates in any depth of water, and no lowering of the water table within the caisson or monolith is required. It works much more rapidly than by hand work, and sinking of the well to about any desired depth is possible.

This Desert Ranch Now Fruitful Garden

INDIO.—Nestling among mesquite-covered sand dunes five miles northwest of this city is one of the most productive ranches in the Coachella Valley. Twenty-seven of the 160 acres of desert land which belongs to Dr. D. E. Hunter of Los Angeles is in a high state of cultivation. One marvels at the productivity of the soil, which to the eye appears to be simply white sand like the surrounding dunes. Lying a short distance underneath this sand, however, is a fine silt soil which, when supplied with sufficient moisture from a twelve-inch drilled well, produces fine crops of grapefruit, grapes, alfalfa and dates.

Five acres of this ranch is in twelve-year-old grapefruit trees, which for size and productivity are remarkable. Last season this orchard produced 500 boxes of grapefruit per acre, bringing a gross return from the five acres of $5000, and netting over $600 per acre, according to C. L. Cudebec, superintendent of the ranch. The size and sweetness of this grapefruit are said to be exceptional.

Four acres is set to Malaga grapes, and five acres is plented to alfalfa, on which a very heavy stand has been secured. Eight cuttings a year are taken from this land, says Mr. Cudebec, at an average of from one and a quarter to one and a half tons per acre. All of the alfalfa hay, with the exception of enough to feed two teams, is used as fertilizer on the ranch.

Twelve acres on the ranch is planted to Deglet Noor dates. Two acres is in 1 and 2-year-old trees, and eight acres in trees from 5 years old up. One and one-half acres of the older orchard is in 12-year-old date trees, which are said to have produced 230 pounds of dates per tree last year. This year's crop is said to have been heavier. These trees are from offshoots imported from Algeria. The flood system is used for irrigation, a permanent border being maintained from tree to tree and across the ends of the rows. This forms a pond when water to the depth of several inches is turned in. Thus, an even amount of moisture, which subirrigates freely in the loose soil, is applied to each tree. As soon as the crop is picked, a heavy covering of alfalfa hay is applied and disked in. Commercial fertilizers are also used to some extent in all the orchards on the ranch.

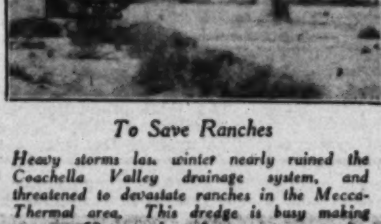
A few shade trees and ten varieties of young citrus trees were set out a year ago, and all are showing a remarkable growth. Among the trees are navel and Valencia oranges, Marsh seedless grapefruit, Eureka, Ponderosa and Simpson lemons, tangelo, Dancy tangerine, Algerian manderin, King manderin, seedless lime, two varieties of jujube, apricot, saucer peach pomegranates, Kadota, Mission and Black San Pedro figs, guava and olive.

One of the most comfortable and convenient houses seen on the desert has been built for the superintendent. Practically all conveniences of the city, except gas, have been installed. A "submarine" sleeping room is an innovation that has contributed to comfort on hot summer nights. The tops and sides of this novel sleeping room are rounded and constructed of sheet-metal, which is covered with heavy outing cloth. A pipeline brings water to the sleeping room, and a small stream is allowed to trickle down through the cloth from a perforated pipe which extends across the top. The sheetmetal sides are cooled by the running water.

Storm Drain Ready for Excess Water

MECCA.—The Coachella Valley storm drain, which was damaged by the heavy rains last winter, is being repaired and put in shape for the coming season. This mammoth drain extends from Point Happy, several miles west of Indio, to the Salton Sea, and was built a few years ago to protect the farms and cities of the valley from storm waters of Whitewater River, and the occasional cloudburst and heavy protracted rains. Toward the upper end of the valley, where the fall is several feet to the mile, the excessive storm waters of last winter washed narrow and deep channels. Between Thermal and Mecca, the land is much flatter, and the old drain channel was almost filled with sand.

It is in this section that a dragline dredge has been working for a few weeks making two new 50-foot channels for about a half a mile above the Blythe highway bridge. Below the bridge a single channel will be constructed in the old drain for a distance of over two miles. This will give the storm waters a chance to get to the Salton Sea, and prevent much damage from being done to the ranches in this section.



To Save Ranches

Heavy storms last winter nearly ruined the Coachella Valley drainage system, and threatened to devastate ranches in the Mecca-Thermal area. This dredge is busy making a new 50-foot channel to prevent further damage this winter.

CITRUS EXPORTS DOUBLED

England and Scotland are the best foreign markets for Southern California grapefruit and oranges, according to a report just issued by the trade extension department of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce. These countrties, according to the report, took approximately $1,300,000 worth of California citrus fruits in the year ending July 30, last, which was an increase of more than $1,000,000 over the purchases of two years ago. While figures are not yet complete, indications are that exports for July and August this year will total more than $1,000,000. Single ships during August have left the Los Angeles port with cargoes of more than 100 carloads of Southern California oranges.

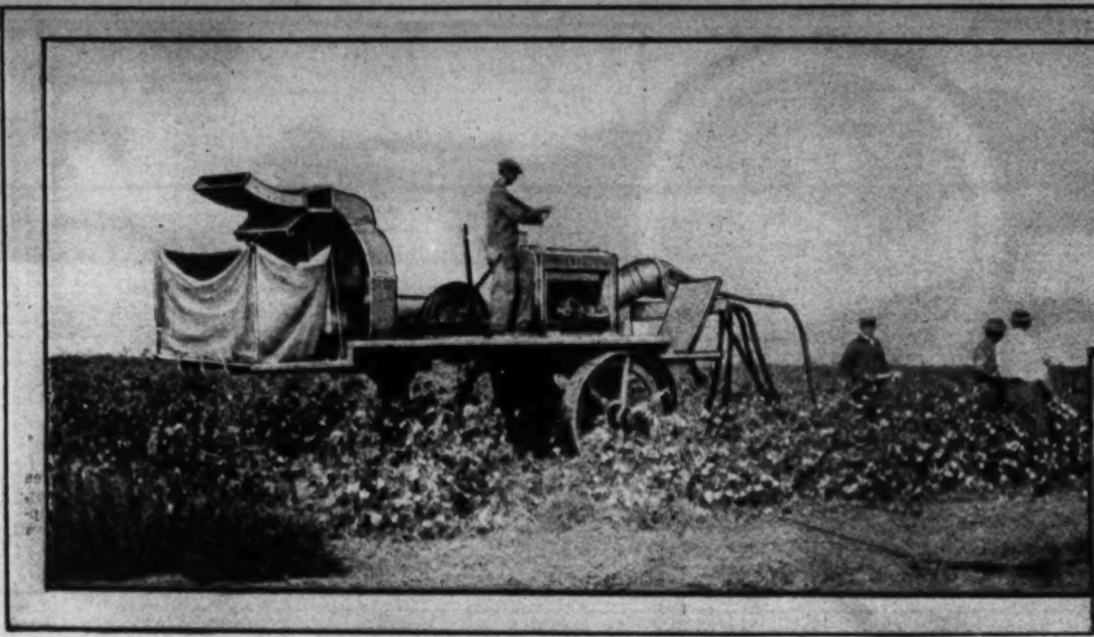
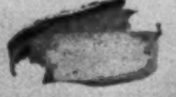
There's Little the Machine Can't Do on the Farm



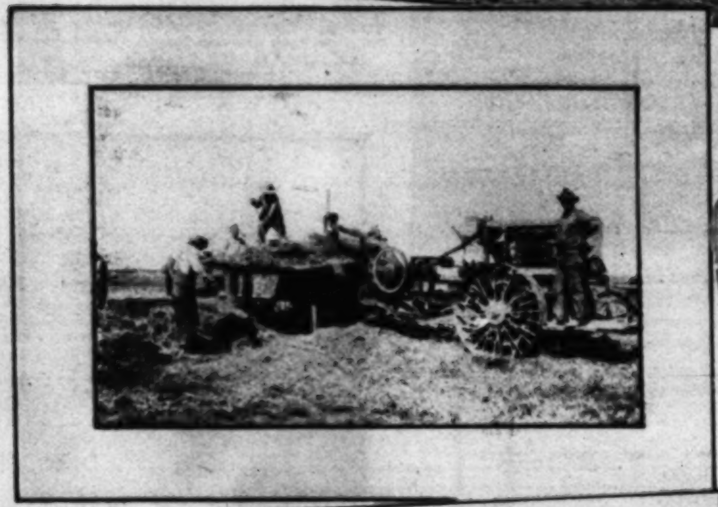
A new Los Angeles-made cotton picker, photographed in action in a San Joaquin Valley cotton field. It is of the suction type and self-propelling. It picks eight rows at a time.



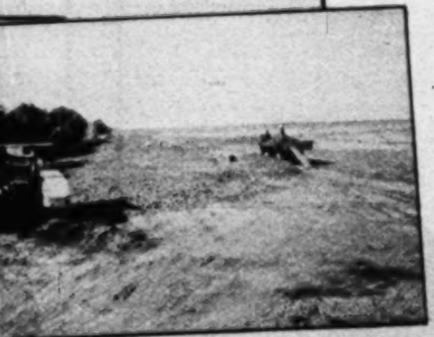
Right—The business end of the new cotton picker.

Tractors do a bit of everything on the Imperial Valley ranch on which this photograph was taken. Here one is pulling a mower.

Disking barley into alfalfa ground is "pie" for the steel horse. Note the driver's careful provision against too intimate contact with Imperial Valley's ardent sunshine.

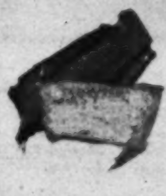


The tractor and hay baler combination is a most satisfactory one.



There's a big job cut out for this tractor-thresher outfit, what with a hundred tons of milo maize being piled up for it to work on. This is another Imperial Valley scene.

Left—A tractor draws three planters at once across this Tulare County potato field.



Potato digging isn't the job it used to be since they've perfected the mechanical diggers and hooked 'em to steel steeds.

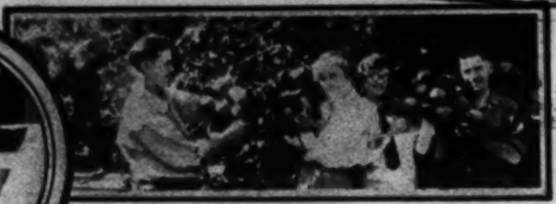
Here's Real Proof of Fruitfulness of Desert Lands

(Illustrating Story in This Issue)

Nestling among the sand-dunes of the desert section of the Coachella Valley, near Indio, is this productive oasis owned by Dr. D. E. Hunter of Los Angeles. The soil on which these 200 four-year-old Deglet Noor date trees are growing is, to all appearances, exactly like the surrounding white dunes, but just a few inches below the surface is a fine silt which, when watered, produces fine crops.

These 12-year-old Deglet Noor trees were originally imported as offshoots from Algeria.

More than 300 pounds of delicious dates are hanging on this tree on the Hunter ranch.

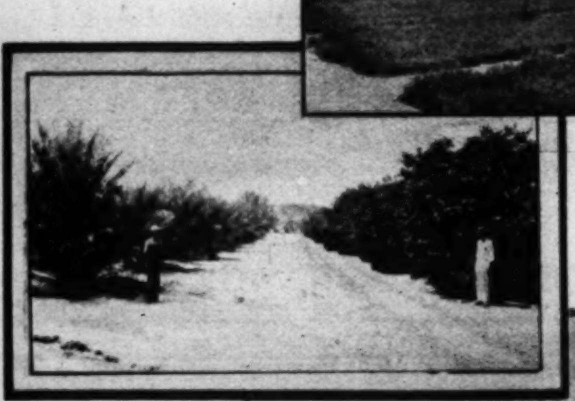


Grapefruit, of the real desert variety, hangs in heavy clusters on the Hunter trees.

Water for irrigation on this desert oasis is secured from artesian wells similar to this one, which pumps over 80 inches of water.

Alfalfa is being used as a "green manure" crop on the Hunter ranch. This crop is about to be disced under in a 12-year-old grapefruit orchard.

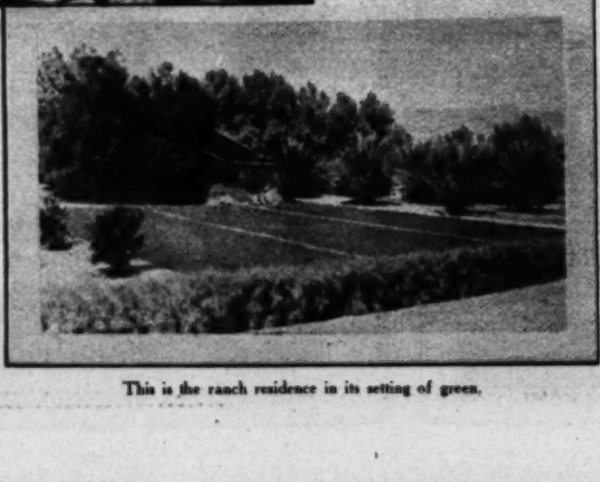
This luxuriant growth of alfalfa is apparently growing on white desert sands, but the roots find foothold in fertile soil. Note date and grapefruit orchards in background.



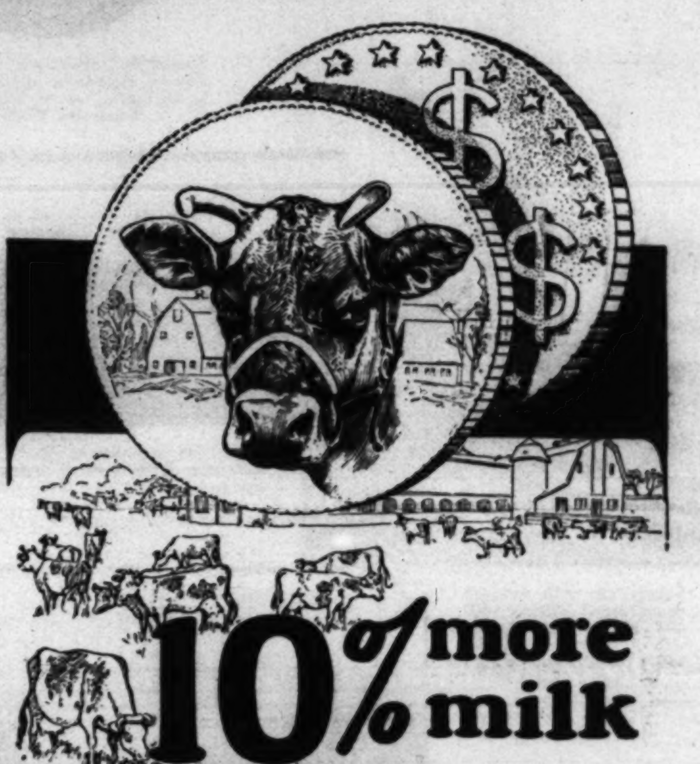
On the right is a 12-year-old grapefruit grove; on the left, a six-year-old date orchard; in between, the kind of sand that drifts like snow and makes desolate what was once known as the "Colorado Desert."

This is a part of the Hunter 160 acres near Indio that has not been developed—raw mesquite-covered desert, awaiting only the application of water to make it blossom like the other acres just a few rods away.

Yes, it gets hot in the Indio country, but this "summer sleeping room" makes for comfortable nights on the Hunter ranch. Cool water from a perforated pipe trickles down the top and sides of this sheet metal "berth."



This is the ranch residence in its setting of green.



10% more milk

Doubles your profit

Noted dairy experts say that in the average herd one-tenth more milk will double the net profit. It costs no more, for instance, to house, feed and care for a good milker than a poor milker. After actual expenses are met every quart of milk is net profit. What other effort on the farm will pay you so handsomely as intensive milk-production?

Let Kow-Kare work for you this winter. Use it—as thousands of other money-making dairies are doing—to systematically regulate and condition your cows so that they are able to turn their food into big milk yields. A few cents per month per cow pays for all the Kow-Kare needed—a mere fraction of your certain returns.

For cows about to freshen, give a tablespoonful of Kow-Kare at feedings for two or three weeks before and after calving. It builds vigor to stand the strain of calf-birth, and to resist disease.

Barrenness, Retained Afterbirth, Abortion, Bunches, Scours, Lost Appetite, etc., are all successfully treated with Kow-Kare. Full directions on each can. Feed dealers, general stores and druggists have Kow-Kare. Large size $1.25; 6 cans for $6.25. Small size 65c. Send for booklet, "More Milk from the Cows You Have."

You can do it . . . here's how

The regular conditioning of cows with Kow-Kare calls for only a tablespoonful in the feed one to two weeks each month—depending on the general vigor and productiveness of the individual cow. Give this plan a trial this winter on the whole herd. It costs so little and does so much you cannot help but profit by it.

KOW-KARE

Regulates and Conditions

Home-Mix Your Own COMPLETE MINERAL

With Kow-Kare you can easily mix your own complete mineral at a surprisingly low cost—a mixture of recognized conditioning value. Simply mix 30 lbs. salt, 30 lbs. fine-ground lime, 30 lbs. steamed bone meal and four cans (large) Kow-Kare. For well under $6 per hundred you will have an unbeatable mineral. Use 80 lbs. of this mixture to a ton of grain.

Now They're "Two-Timing" Imperial Vegetable Lands

(Illustrating Story by Iva M. McFadden)

Now that the Imperial Valley has added a fall vegetable season to its agricultural calendar, in addition to the regular spring deal, we may expect a plentiful supply of "green stuff" until frost sets in. A fall crop of asparagus was raised this year, which for quality equaled the spring crop. The spring fields are allowed to go to "top," as in this picture, after which the "tops" are disced into the ground.

Typical asparagus packing shed in Imperial Valley. After the stalks are carefully graded and tied into bunches, the latter are wrapped in wet moss to keep the product fresh. Then they are packed in peculiarly shaped crates, wide at the bottom and narrow at the top.

Asparagus is a hard crop to handle, as it must be carefully graded, sorted, and tied into neat bunches before it is crated ready for shipment to marketing centers.

Mexican labor is used almost exclusively in the asparagus deal. This shows a packer "doing his stuff."

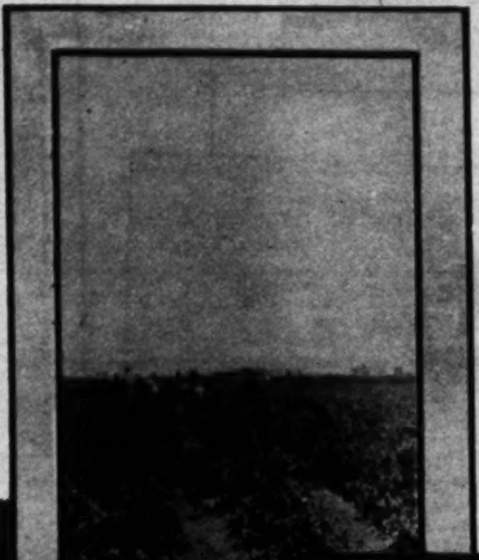
Honey Dews are easily bruised, so they are packed as near the field as possible to avoid unnecessary handling. They are packed in excelsior, and the crates are lined with wax paper. These melons will keep until Christmas if stored in a cool place.

Honey Dew melons were planted as a fall crop in the Imperial Valley this year, and the "dews" are of fine quality and flavor. These wagon loads of Honey Dews are awaiting their turn at the packing shed.

The finished product. Honey Dews packed, wrapped, and graded, and ready to be shipped in carlots to eastern markets.

Summer squash is "fall squash" in the Valley this year. These vines have been planted between rows of corn to protect them from frost. There'll be some Christmas "corn-on-the-cob" from this field, too.

String beans grow readily and produce bumper crops in the fall season.



Picking peas below sea-level in the Imperial Valley. Mexicans do most of the work.

Peas have been a fall crop in the Valley for years, and, of course, lead all other vegetables in acreage. They are planted in September, and shipped East in carlots in November and December.

Peas are picked and sacked in the field, after which they are hauled to the packing shed where they are sorted and packed into crates of 45 pounds each.

Magic of "Hidden Water" Brings Bloom to Piute Lan

(Illustrating Story by Robert T. Lyons)

The Mojave as it flows through the gorge near Victorville assumes the proportions of a real river, but for the most part its course is underground. It is the "hidden water of the Mojave" that is being harnessed by men to transform this former desert area into an agricultural realm.

Some of the "hidden water" is made available for irrigation by artesian wells, such as this "gusher" on the 3,800-acre Verde Ranch near Victorville.

A 200-inch flow from an 8-inch vertical centrifugal pump, in a 55-foot well with a 10-foot lift. It is on the P. M. Beach ranch near Ora Grande and belies the oft-repeated phrase, "As dry as the Mojave."

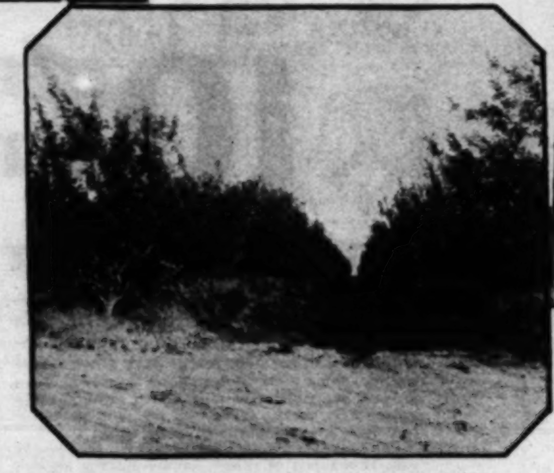
Modern irrigation engineering is being employed to turn the Mojave River Valley into a land of farms. This shows turbine pump, sand trap, and division box on the W. R. Lacy ranch above Victorville.

Caisson type wells are used on the Merrill & Blacet ranch near Helendale. This shows a well of this type being dug with a power-driven "orange-peel" bucket.

A fine field of alfalfa on the H. Osler lease. More than 2,500 acres of high-grade alfalfa were grown in the Mojave River valley this year.

Left—More than 12,000 tons of Mojave alfalfa were trucked in to Los Angeles this year, where dealers were glad to buy it at premium prices.

Part of the 200-ton crop of alfalfa raised this year by R. Rikalo on his ranch near Helendale.



Part of the Mojave River country lies in what is known as "Apple Valley," with an altitude of 2,500 feet. Deciduous fruits are an important crop in this district. This apple orchard is on the Ihmsen ranch.

Cutting a heavy crop of alfalfa on the McNew Ranch, which has been cropped continuously for thirty years.

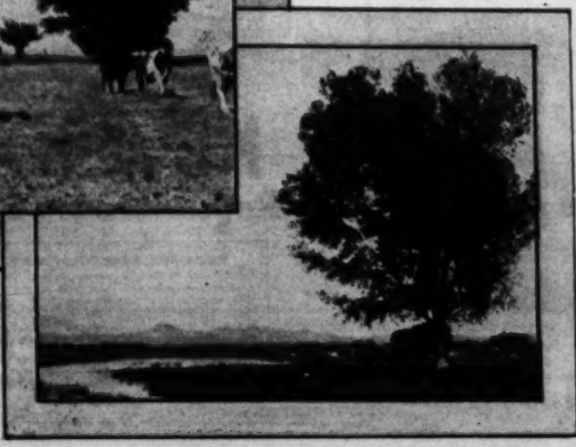
In recent years dairying has become an important industry in the Mojave country. This shows alfalfa and dairying as it is worked on the Garrison Ranch.



Right—there's plenty of shade, water, and pasture for these "contented cows" on the Verde Ranch near Victorville.
